A sight draft is an acceptable form of remittance to satisfy 43 CFR 3112.2-1(a)(1) governing filing fees for simultaneous oil and gas lease offers.

William E. Jeffers, Jr., 46 IBLA 322 (Apr. 4, 1980)

Where an offer is drawn No. 1 in a simultaneous oil and gas lease drawing and the offeror is notified by BLM that the rental due is $1,863, the offer will be disqualified under 43 CFR 3112.4-1 when the offeror submits a check for only $1,836 within the time required, but fails to submit the $27 deficiency within the allowed time.

Edward Goodman, 48 IBLA 152 (June 9, 1980)

Where an offer is drawn No. 1 in a simultaneous oil and gas lease drawing and the offeror is notified by BLM that the rental is due within 15 days from the receipt of notice that such payment is due, the offer will be disqualified under 43 CFR 3112.4-1 when the rental is not received in the proper office within 15 days from the receipt of notice that such payment is due.

Where payment must be accomplished within a specific number of days from receipt of notice, that number includes holidays and weekends which occur in the interim unless it is provided otherwise.

Gordon E. Jacober, 49 IBLA 91 (July 22, 1980)

Placing a check for annual rental for oil and gas leases in the mails does not constitute "payment" of annual rental. Rather, the lessee must cause the rental to be received by the office administering her leases, and, until such time as it is received, no "payment" of annual rental has occurred. Placing a check for annual rental for oil and gas leases in the mails does not constitute a tender of payment of annual rental within the meaning of 43 CFR 3108.2-1(c). Rather, a lessee makes a tender of payment only when she submits payment to the BLM office administering her leases and when BLM has the opportunity either to receive or decline it.

Rose M. Koegel, 49 IBLA 106 (July 28, 1980)

Where Geological Survey did not expressly state otherwise, under its policy established and in effect since 1958, royalty payments are accepted subject to post audit and correction and do not necessarily constitute payments in full of royalty obligations. The Area Supervisor's silence does not imply acceptance; nor does his inaction bar the Government from asserting the incorrectness of payment subsequently.

A bank personal money order is an acceptable form of payment in satisfaction of the filing fee to accompany simultaneous oil and gas lease offers according to 43 CFR 3112.2-2.

W. W. Priest, Michael Manduca, 55 IBLA 398 (June 30, 1981)

Maria C. Cayley, John J. Cayley, 61 IBLA 205 (Jan. 26, 1982)

A personal check is not an acceptable form of remittance under 43 CFR 3120.1-4(b) requiring a successful bidder to submit one-fifth of the amount bid as a deposit and must result in rejection of the competitive bid.

Delco Petroleum Corp., 57 IBLA 3 (Aug. 5, 1981)

Where an application is drawn first in a simultaneous oil and gas lease drawing and the applicant is notified by the Bureau of Land Management that the rental due is $61, the application will be disqualified and rejected under 43 CFR 3112.4-1 and 3112.6-1, when the applicant submits a payment of $60 within the specified time, but fails to submit the $1 deficiency within the allowed time.

J. Gene Everette, 68 IBLA 225 (Nov. 15, 1982)

30 CFR 250.49 authorizes Minerals Management Service to impose a late payment interest charge where royalty payments for offshore oil and gas leases are untimely or improper. The authority of the United States to enforce a public right or to protect a public interest is not vitiated or lost by acquiescence of its officers or by their laches, neglect of duty, failure to act, or delays in the performance of their duties.

Amoco Production Co., 78 IBLA 93 (Dec. 19, 1983)

The Secretary may reinstate leases terminated on or after Jan. 12, 1983, if certain conditions are met and a petition for reinstatement plus required back rentals are filed the earlier of 60 days after lessee has received notice of termination or 15 months after lease termination. The submission of a rental check which is later dishonored by the drawee bank because of insufficient funds is neither a payment nor a tender of payment.

John F. Clifton, 82 IBLA 126 (July 24, 1984)

REFUNDS

Where BLM has unilaterally imposed special stipulations in issuing oil and gas leases and the lessee accepts such leases without protest for 7-1/2 months, she may not thereafter "withdraw" from or relinquish such leases and recover the annual advance rentals paid therefor on the ground that she did not consent to the imposition of the special stipulations, although she might have been permitted to do so had she protested promptly.

PHOSPHATE LEASES AND PERMITS

GENERALLY

When an assignment of a phosphate lease has been approved and there is a controversy as to the validity of the assignment, the Department will not rescind approval of the assignment where no error or irregularity is shown therein, and will maintain the status quo where the parties have instituted litigation to resolve their dispute.

John D. and Elizabeth Archer, 46 IBLA 203 (Mar. 24, 1980)

LEASES

Where a regulation authorizes BLM's request for certain information regarding a competitive phosphate lease application and a notice to the applicant states that failure to file such information within 60 days will subject the application to rejection, BLM may reject the application at the conclusion of the 60-day term in the absence of a filing extension.

GeoResources, Inc., 74 IBLA 236 (July 19, 1983)

Allegations that stipulations included in a notice of a competitive phosphate lease offer improperly favored one bidder over all other potential bidders will not serve as a basis for disturbing the lease sale where the record does not support such allegations, but does, in fact, support a finding that the stipulations were reasonably directed toward environmental protection.

Where, on appeal, the fair market valuation of an area involved in a competitive phosphate lease offer is challenged in general terms, but no specific evidence of error is presented, and the record supports the evaluation, that evaluation will not be disturbed.

John D. Archer, 74 IBLA 323 (July 28, 1983)

PERMITS

Limitation of a phosphate prospecting permit to "unclaimed, undeveloped" lands restricts it to lands without valid, vested rights, existing at the time of issuance of the permit, which are adverse to the prospecting permit which is sought, and any preference right lease which may be earned pursuant to such a permit.

A prospecting permit may be issued for phosphate for which there is no valid, adverse claim at the time of issuance, notwithstanding the existence then of non-adverse claims, entries, or leases.

Issuance of a prospecting permit is presumed to be regular if no valid, adverse interest appeared in the land office records at the time of issuance of the permit.

The filing of a phosphate prospecting permit application creates no vested rights in the applicant, and the application must be rejected if the land described therein is determined to be within a known phosphate leasing area subject to the competitive leasing provisions of the Mineral Leasing Act. Rejection is required even if the application was filed prior to the ascertainment of the extent or workability of the phosphate bed underlying the applied for land, which finding requires competitive leasing of the land.

It is unnecessary to demonstrate the workability of a mineral deposit by an actual physical examination of the deposit in the land sought by means of drilling or actual exploratory work on the ground. Competent evidence to establish the fact that exploration is unnecessary to determine the existence or workability of a phosphate deposit may consist of proof of the existence of minerals in adjacent lands and of geological and other surrounding external conditions.

Christian F. Huker, 57 IBLA 333 (Sept. 1, 1981)

The filing of a phosphate prospecting permit application creates no vested rights in the applicant and the application must be rejected if the land described therein is determined by Geological Survey to be within a known phosphate leasing area and to be subject to the competitive leasing provisions of the Mineral Leasing Act. Rejection is required even if the application was filed prior to the ascertainment of the extent or workability of the underlying phosphate bed, which finding requires competitive leasing of the land.

GeoResources, Inc., 67 IBLA 297 (Sept. 29, 1982)

The filing of a phosphate prospecting permit application creates no vested rights in the applicant, and the application must be rejected if the land described therein is determined to be within a known phosphate leasing area subject to the competitive leasing provisions of the Mineral Leasing Act. Rejection is required even if the application was filed prior to the ascertainment of the extent or workability of the phosphate bed underlying the applied for land, which finding requires competitive leasing of the land.

Christian F. Huker, 75 IBLA 232 (Aug. 23, 1983)

Extension of a prospecting permit may be properly denied where application is not timely filed and no showings are made, as required by 43 CFR 3511.3-2, as to the reasons why additional time is needed to complete prospecting work.

Inverness Mining Co., 81 IBLA 78 (May 23, 1984)

BLM must reject a phosphate prospecting permit application filed pursuant to sec. 9(b) of the Mineral Leasing Act, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 211(b) (1982), where the land is determined to be within a known phosphate leasing area.

An applicant for a phosphate prospecting permit under sec. 9(b) of the Mineral Leasing Act, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 211(b) (1982), acquires no vested right to a permit by virtue of an inordinate delay in adjudication of the application, even where a permit might have issued when the application was originally filed.

In rejecting a phosphate prospecting permit application because the land is within a known phosphate leasing area, and thus no longer subject to issuance of a permit, BLM may rely on proof of the existence or workability of minerals in adjacent lands and geological and other surrounding external conditions, and need not engage in drilling or other exploratory work on the ground.

In rejecting a phosphate prospecting permit application, BLM may properly consider a recommendation of the Forest Service that issuance of a permit would not be in the public interest. However, ultimate rejection must be supported by facts of record and a reasoned explanation.

Elizabeth B. Archer et al., 82 IBLA 14 (July 5, 1984)

ROYALTIES

Where the Secretary has decided that production from phosphate leases should be valued in accordance with a particular method and what the value should be, the Board's review authority is limited to determining whether the Geological Survey Area Supervisor who issues orders to the phosphate lessees has properly followed the Secretary's instructions. No hearing is required as a prerequisite to the order.

Where the Department has not formally adopted any methodology for determining the value of production from phosphate leases, but has instead allowed lessees simply to pay royalty based on the minimum value specified in the lease after having advised them that a new method of determining a realistic value was being developed, it may assert that royalty was incorrect even after it has accepted these royalty payments, and may impose the method as approved by the Secretary.

A natural brine containing water and ions of sodium, potassium, calcium, magnesium, and chlorine may be considered a valuable deposit of a sodium compound within the meaning of 30 U.S.C. § 262 (1976) if either of two contingencies occur. First, sodium must be present in sufficient quantity as to be commercially valuable. Second, sodium must be essential to the molecular structure of the valuable mineral.

Land is "known to be valuable" for a mineral subject to the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, when "known conditions at the time [of location] were plainly such as to engender the belief that the land contained mineral deposits of such quality and in such quantity as would render their extraction profitable and justify expenditures to that end." United States v. Southern Pacific Co., 251 U.S. 1, 13-14 (1919); Diamond Coal Co. v. United States, 233 U.S. 236, 239-40 (1914). In determining whether mineral deposits are such as to render their extraction profitable and justify expenditures, extrinsic factors, such as the cost of extraction, processing, transportation, and marketing must be considered.

Where sodium ions are commingled in a brine with calcium, potassium, and chlorine ions and no valuable deposit of a sodium or potassium compound is present, contestees' evaporation of such brine does not violate the Multiple Mineral Development Act, 30 U.S.C. §§ 521-531 (1976).

The Administrative Law Judge gave proper weight to Government testimony in dismissing the Government's contest complaint where the evidence supported a finding of the existence of a sodium-calcium-chloride brine, but did not support a finding that such brine was "known to be valuable" for a Leasing Act mineral.

The existence of a "related product" within the meaning of 30 U.S.C. § 262 (1976) presumes the existence of a valuable sodium compound deposit.

POWERSITE LANDS

Lands which are covered by a license for a power project issued by the Federal Power Commission (now the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission) are not open to mineral location. Any mining claim located on powersite lands is void ab initio unless the land has been restored to such entry in accordance with sec. 24 of the Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. § 818 (1976).

Ronald D. McLean, 77 IBLA 380 (Dec. 7, 1983)

When a Native allotment application has been rejected because the applicant failed to complete 5 years of qualifying use and occupancy prior to the filing of an application for withdrawal for powersite purposes, the case will be remanded for readjudication under sec. 905 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, P.L. 96-487, 94 Stat. 2371, 2435-37 (1980), unless the described land is included as part of a project licensed under part I of the Federal Power Act of June 10, 1920 (41 Stat. 24), as amended, or is presently utilized for purposes of generating or transmitting electrical power or for any other project authorized by act of Congress. If the allotment applicant commenced the qualifying use of the land after its withdrawal or classification, the allotment shall be made subject to the right of reentry provided the United States.

William Carlo, Sr. (On Reconsideration), 53 IBLA 168 (Mar. 12, 1981)

A mining claim located prior to Aug. 11, 1955, on lands withdrawn for a powersite is null and void ab initio. The passage of the Mining Claims Rights Restoration Act of Aug. 11, 1955, 30 U.S.C. § 621 (1976), did not give life to void claims which had been located on withdrawn lands prior to the date of the Act.

A mining claim located on such lands is void ab initio unless the land has been restored to such entry in accordance with sec. 24 of the Federal Power Act, 16 U.S.C. § 818 (1976).

James M. Cressaty, 61 IBLA 376 (Feb. 17, 1982)

A Native allotment application describing land within a powersite withdrawal may be approved pursuant to sec. 905 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, P.L. 96-487, 94 Stat. 2371, 2435-37 (1980), subject to protests filed within 180 days of enactment of the statute, where the land is not part of a project licensed under the Federal Power Act of June 10, 1920, as amended, or presently used for purposes of generating or transmitting electrical power or for any other project authorized by Act of Congress. Where the allotment applicant's use of the land commenced after the withdrawal, the allotment shall be subject to the right or reentry provided the United States by sec. 24 of the Federal Power Act, as amended.

Marian Stevens, 64 IBLA 69 (May 10, 1982)

Although land reserved for powersite purposes by a 1910 Executive Order issued pursuant to the "Pickett Act" of June 25, 1910, remained open to the location of mining claims for metalliferous minerals, that Act was superseded by sec. 24 of the Federal Power Act of June 10, 1920, which closed such lands to all mineral location until enactment of the Mining Claim Rights Restoration Act of Aug. 11, 1955.

A mining claim located prior to Aug. 11, 1955, on lands withdrawn for a powersite is null and void ab initio. The passage of the Mining Claims Rights Restoration Act of Aug. 11, 1955, 30 U.S.C. § 621 (1976), did not give life to void claims which had been located on withdrawn lands prior to the date of the Act.

George L. Hawkins, Wallace G. Heath, 66 IBLA 390 (Aug. 31, 1982)

Under the decision in Reeves v. Andrus, 465 F. Supp. 1065 (D. Alaska 1979), upon a determination of the Federal Power Commission that the value of land withdrawn for power purposes would not be injured by the allowance of entries under the public land laws, the Secretary of the Interior is required to restore the land to entry, at least insofar as the powersite withdrawal is concerned, within a reasonable time thereafter. Such land, however, does not become available until an order of restoration is issued. No rights may be acquired by a settler on the public land who initiates settlement at a time when the records of the Department indicate that the land is not open to entry.

Where the Department issues a decision finally adjudicating rights to the public land adverse to an appellant and the appellant does not seek judicial review of that decision, the Department will bar reconsideration of that decision, even if arguably erroneous, where a third party has initiated adverse rights to the land originally sought.

Carmel J. McIntyre (On Judicial Remand), 67 IBLA 317 (Oct. 1, 1982)

A mining claim located prior to Aug. 11, 1955, on land withdrawn for a powersite is null and void ab initio.

Mackay Bar Corp., 69 IBLA 148 (Dec. 13, 1982)

In accordance with sec. 24 of the Federal Power Act of 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 818 (1976), and sec. 2(a) of the Mining Claims Rights Restoration Act of 1955, 30 U.S.C. § 621 (1976), the Bureau of Land Management properly declares the portion of a placer mining claim located within the boundaries of a preexisting power project to be null and void ab initio.

W. G. Singleton, 75 IBLA 168 (Aug. 19, 1983)

A mining claim located prior to Aug. 11, 1955, on lands withdrawn for a power project is null and void ab initio. The passage of the Mining Claims Rights Restoration Act of Aug. 11, 1955, 30 U.S.C. § 621 (1976), did not give life to void claims which had been located on withdrawn lands prior to the date of the Act.

J. M. Roberts, Jean Roberts, 79 IBLA 279 (Mar. 16, 1984)

Where Congress has provided in 16 U.S.C. § 818 (1982) that lands sought for a proposed power project shall from the date of the filing of an application therefor be reserved from entry, location, or other disposal under the laws of the United States until otherwise directed by the Federal Power Commission or by Congress, and thereafter has further withdrawn these same lands for selection pursuant to sec. 16 of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, 43 U.S.C. § 1615 (1976), BLM may properly convey such lands to a Native corporation selecting same, all else being regular.

Federal land occupied by a municipally operated utility pursuant to a license from the Federal Power Commission may be conveyed to a Native corporation selecting such land, subject to such license. Lands occupied by the utility are not excluded from the interim conveyance describing them.

PRIVATE EXCHANGES

GENERALLY

Lands the title to which has been conveyed to the United States pursuant to a private exchange authorized by sec. 8 of the Taylor Grazing Act do not become available for oil and gas leasing upon acceptance of title on behalf of the United States, but only when an order is issued opening the lands to such disposition.

Endras E. Hartley, 58 IBLA 329 (Oct. 16, 1981)

While there is no Departmental policy absolutely forbidding multiparty exchanges under sec. 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1716 (1976), no such exchange can be approved unless the land ultimately acquired by the United States benefits a Federal natural resource management program.

PUBLIC INTEREST

The fact that land sought in a private exchange is within a known geothermal resource area and is actually under lease is normally sufficient to support a finding that the land sought by the private party is more valuable for public purposes than the land which is being exchanged.

PUBLIC LANDS
(See also Accretion, Avulsion, Boundaries, Reliction, Surveys of Public Lands--if included in this Index.)

GENERALLY

Adverse possession cannot be asserted against the United States. Mere occupancy of public lands and the making of improvements thereon give no vested right against the United States. An occupant of Federal land must show that he occupies the same under some proceeding or law that at least authorized his right of possession.

Lillian Harlow, 58 IBLA 385 (Oct. 21, 1981)

The Bureau of Land Management has no authority to allow an application for desert land entry on land which has been conveyed from Federal ownership by quitclaim deed or which has been withdrawn from disposition under the public land laws. Even if the applicant had received erroneous advice concerning the status of the land, this does not entitle him to have his application allowed.

Sec. 7(c) of the Paiute Indian Tribe of Utah Restoration Act of 1980, 25 U.S.C. § 761 et seq. National Forest lands are not "available public... lands." As such, they are not intended by Congress to be included within the Paiute's proposed reservation enlargement plan under the Paiute Restoration Act.

ADMINISTRATION

Sec. 9 of the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), contemplates that the Department of the Interior retains continuing jurisdiction and administration of mineral deposits reserved by that Act.

"Public lands." Under 43 CFR 3602.1 which defines a trespass, the term "public lands" includes mineral deposits reserved under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970).

Where appellant disagrees with BLM's decision to designate an area for limited use by off-road vehicles and seeks to have his judgment substituted for that of the decisionmaker, his appeal will be carefully considered, with due regard for the public interest. However, where the responsibility for making such judgments has been exercised by an officer duly delegated the authority to do so, his action will ordinarily be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

Where appellant disagrees with BLM's decision to designate an area as permanently closed for use by off-road vehicles and seeks to have its judgment substituted for that of the decisionmaker, the appeal will be carefully considered, with due regard for the public interest. However, where the responsibility for making such judgments has been exercised by an officer duly delegated the authority to do so, his action will ordinarily be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

The Board of Land Appeals must defer to the Secretary's decision to allow herbicidal spraying for vegetative management purposes, and the Board has no jurisdictional authority to entertain appeals concerning matters covered by the Secretarial action except in the limited circumstance where the appellant's object clearly is to show BLM's noncompliance therewith.

The Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 requires the Secretary of the Interior to manage public lands under principles of "multiple use" and "sustained yield," and the statutory definition of these concepts recognizes the need for latitude and discretion in their implementation. As the Secretary's delegate, BLM has the responsibility of administering such policies and programs, and BLM must be accorded correlative powers of reasoned discretion in discharging these duties. Therefore, so long as the BLM policy or implementing action is based on a consideration of all relevant factors and is supported by the record, the Board will not disturb it absent a clear showing that it is contrary to statute or regulation or otherwise erroneous.

A.C.O.T.S., 60 IBLA 1 (Nov. 12, 1981)

The Board of Land Appeals must defer to the Secretary's decision to allow herbicidal spraying for vegetative management purposes, and the Board has no jurisdictional authority to entertain appeals concerning matters covered by the Secretarial action except in the limited circumstance where the appellant's object clearly is to show BLM's noncompliance therewith.

Susan Bolles et al., 66 IBLA 407 (Aug. 31, 1982)

The Board of Land Appeals must defer to the Secretary's decision to approve the granting of a contract, where such approval implicitly ratifies the entire process which led up to issuance of the contract itself, including compliance with the National Environmental Protection Act of 1969, 42 U.S.C. §§ 4321-4361 (1976). The Board has no jurisdictional authority to entertain appeals concerning matters covered by the Secretarial action except in the limited circumstance where the appellant's object clearly is to show BLM's noncompliance therewith.

Donald Fay, 68 IBLA 26 (Oct. 21, 1982)

The Secretary of the Interior is not estopped by the principles of res judicata or finality of administrative action from correcting, reversing, or overruling an erroneous decision by subordinates or predecessors in interest. The Board of Land Appeals, in exercising the Secretary's review authority as fully and finally as might the Secretary, is not required to accept as precedent erroneous decisions made by the Secretary's subordinates.

ALASKA

Under sec. 6(b) of the Alaska Statehood Act, the term "public lands" means those lands in Federal ownership that are not withdrawn or otherwise reserved.

APPRAISALS

Where BLM appraises a parcel of land subject to a communication site right-of-way for direct sale to the holder of the grant pursuant to sec. 203 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1713 (1982), it is proper for BLM to appraise the parcel as if unencumbered, since the right-of-way is extinguished upon the right-of-way holder's acquisition of the fee title.

Cole Industries, Inc., 82 IBLA 289 (Aug. 31, 1984)

CLASSIFICATION

Where BLM classifies a 4-acre tract as suitable for disposal under the Small Tract Act, thereby segregating it from acquisition under other public land laws, then grants an individual a lease thereon with option to purchase, pursuant to which the lessee constructs buildings and occupies the tract, the protest and application of an Alaska Native, made for the first time 12 years later, will be rejected, as a matter of law and equity where the Native was claiming 160 acres of different land during the preceding 6 years, and had made no assertion of interest in the small tract, but rather had expressly acknowledged the existence of the leasehold.

Evelyn Alexander, 45 IBLA 28 (Jan. 14, 1980)

Where the Secretary by appropriate notice in the Federal Register has classified certain lands for multiple use management and such lands are thereby segregated from desert land entry, which classification has not been terminated by either a reclassification or publication in the Federal Register of termination of classification, an application for desert land entry is properly denied.

Bill K. Yearsley, Nikolay M. Yearsley, 67 IBLA 97 (Sept. 13, 1982)

When lands have been classified under a final order of the Secretary of the Interior as being unsuitable for disposal under the desert land laws, a desert land entry petition-application will not be allowed.

Mining claims located on land which has been classified for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), and subsequently leased pursuant thereto, are properly declared null and void ab initio because the land was segregated from mineral entry, even where the lease contained a mineral reservation to the United States.

The Board of Land Appeals has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal by a mining claimant from a BLM decision classifying land for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended.

43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), which has become a final order of the Secretary.

In order to establish that a notice of location of a mining claim is an amended location which relates back prior to a BLM decision which classified the land for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), the mining claimant must submit proof of a chain of title to him. In the absence of such proof, the purported amendment must be treated as a relocation.

Ronald R. Graham, Dorothy L. Graham, 77 IBLA 174 (Nov. 17, 1983)

Lands segregated on the public records by a Recreational and Public Purposes lease are not available for the location of mining claims, but a claimant may establish the exterior boundaries of a lode claim on land under a Recreation and Public Purposes lease, with the permission of the lessee, for the purpose of making end lines parallel so as to obtain extralateral rights to a vein or lode discovered on lands available for location.

Santa Fe Mining, Inc., 79 IBLA 48 (Feb. 9, 1984)

Where a lode mining claim is located partially on withdrawn or patented land, it is not null and void ab initio to the extent of its inclusion of such lands. A locator whose discovery is on lands open to location may extend the end lines and side lines of his claim across withdrawn or patented land to define the extralateral rights to lodes or veins which apex within the claim.

JURISDICTION OVER

So long as the legal title to public lands remains in the United States, it has the power, after proper notice and upon adequate hearing, to determine whether a millsite claim is valid, and if it be found invalid, to declare it null and void.

United States of America v. Utah International, Inc., 45 IBLA 73 (Jan. 17, 1980)

The Act of May 23, 1908, 35 Stat. 267, as amended, 16 U.S.C. § 671 (1976), providing for the establishment of the National Bison Range, terminated the status of the land included therein as land reserved for Indian use.

Hingeline Overthrust Oil & Gas, Inc., 80 IBLA 4 (Mar. 27, 1984)

BLM has the jurisdiction to determine whether the terms of a mineral reservation in a deed to the United States has operated to vest title to the mineral estate in the United States by virtue of a failure to comply with an annual production requirement found in the reservation. However, where the record indicates that BLM has not fully considered whether production within a production unit which includes the reserved land serves to extend the reservation, the case will be remanded to BLM for consideration of that question.

Jose Rodriguez, 49 IBLA 258 (Aug. 18, 1980)

Public domain land withdrawn or reserved is presumed to be available for oil and gas leasing unless the withdrawal or reservation specifically provides otherwise.

Where public domain land is withdrawn or reserved for administration by another agency for a particular purpose, BLM should properly consider the recommendations of the surface management agency regarding lease issuance and any required stipulations, but this does not relieve BLM of the need to make an independent determination supported by the record of whether and under what conditions a lease may issue in the public interest consistent with multiple use values.

RIPARIAN RIGHTS

Where riparian public land has been eroded away entirely by the actions of a navigable river and the river subsequently returns to its original banks, restoring the eroded land through accretion, title to the accreted land is deemed to be in the remote riparian owner to whose land the accretion attaches, rather than the United States.

Ralph P. Rosenbaum et al., 66 IBLA 374 (Aug. 30, 1982)
89 I.D. 415

Generally, the meander line of a river is not to be treated as a boundary and when the United States conveys a tract of land by patent referring to an official plat which shows the tract to be riparian to a river, the patent conveys all the rights to the water line of that river, if navigable, or to the center of the stream if nonnavigable, except where there is fraud, gross error shown in the survey, or an intention to limit a grant or conveyance to the actual meander lines as disclosed in the facts or circumstances.

Where riparian public land has been completely eroded away by the actions of a navigable river, title is lost to the United States and, where said land is subsequently restored through accretion by the continued action of the river, title belongs to the riparian owner.

David A. Provinse, 81 IBLA 148 (May 31, 1984)

It is a general rule that a meander line is not a line of boundary but one designed to point out the sinuosity of the bank or shore and as a means of ascertaining the quantity of the land in the fractional lot, the boundary line being the waterline itself. The "Basset exception" to this rule is that if, at the time a homestead entry is made, a large body of land previously formed by accretion existed between the meander line and the waters of the stream, then the meander line will be treated as the boundary line of the grant, and the patent will be construed to convey only the lands within the meander line. In determining the applicability of the "Basset exception," consideration must also be given to equitable factors, including unjust enrichment.

SPECIAL USE PERMITS

The issuance of special use permits is discretionary, and BLM may properly reject a permit application for commercial river rafting where the proposed use would exceed the river's carrying capacity and would be inconsistent with the objectives, responsibilities, or programs for the management of the public lands involved.

Whitewater Expeditions & Tours, 52 IBLA 80 (Jan. 9, 1981)

The issuance of special use permits is discretionary, and BLM may properly reject a permit application for an organized off-road motorcycle race where the proposed use would adversely affect critical deer winter range and would be inconsistent with the objectives, responsibilities, or programs for the management of the public lands involved.

fail to demonstrate that the Bureau of Land Management's actions did not comport with its regulations or that the new fee levels have no reasonable basis under the regulations, a decision denying the protest will be affirmed.

Departmental regulations at 43 CFR Subpart 8372 require that, when the Bureau of Land Management issues special recreation permits authorizing use of special areas such as a designated wild and scenic river, fees must be charged for noncommercial as well as commercial users engaging in the same activity, except to the extent that a user is exempted from paying fees by 43 CFR 8372.4(d).

An applicant for a special recreation use permit for river rafting will be considered as seeking a "commercial use" of the river, within the meaning of 43 CFR 8372.0-5(a), where the applicant or the applicant's employee makes a salary from or for services rendered to customers or participants in the permitted activity.

Wilderness/Challenge, Inc., 64 IBLA 44 (May 6, 1982)

The issuance of special use permits is discretionary, and BLM may accept or reject a permit application depending upon its consistency with the objectives, responsibilities, or programs for the management of the public lands involved. Where a duly authorized officer has exercised this responsibility, his actions will ordinarily be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

National Public Lands Task Force, Nevada Outdoor Recreation Ass'n, Inc., 70 IBLA 214 (Jan. 24, 1983)

Use fees for special recreation use permits for competitive use in areas other than developed recreational sites are calculated pursuant to 43 CFR 8372.4(b)(2). This section provides for a use fee of 5 percent of the gross receipts (with certain minimums). However, there is no definition of the term "gross receipts" in the pertinent regulations or enabling legislation. Therefore, if a permittee appeals from a determination of the use fee owing under a special recreation use permit, the permittee must ordinarily demonstrate that: (1) The fee calculation contained mathematical errors or errors with respect to the amount, in fact, received; (2) the fee calculation was made using a formula which differed from that specifically agreed upon or contained in the permit; or (3) the fee calculation was not the same as had been previously applied to the permit and the permittee had no reason to believe that the formula would not be the same.

Score International, 78 IBLA 142 (Dec. 29, 1983)

The exercise of Secretarial discretion involved in the issuance of special use permits includes the authority to set permit conditions and establish penalties for violation of permit conditions. A temporary suspension of a permit imposed by the authorized officer for violations of permit conditions is found to be proper where it is shown the permit holder failed to make required reports and failed to mark boats to identify the permit holder as required by the permit conditions.

Southern Pacific Transportation Co., R. K. Herndon, 54 IBLA 174 (Apr. 21, 1981)

To establish the mineral character of railroad grant lands under the Act of July 1, 1862, 12 Stat. 489 as amended by the Act of July 2, 1864, 13 Stat. 356, it must be shown that known conditions--which may include geological conditions, discoveries of minerals in adjacent land, and other observable external conditions upon which prudent and experienced men are known to be accustomed to act--are such as reasonably to engender the belief that the land contains mineral of such quality and in such quantity as to render its extraction profitable and justify expenditures to that end.

One will not be considered an innocent purchaser for value under sec. 321(b) of the Transportation Act of 1940, 49 U.S.C. § 65(b) (1976), when the evidence presented at a hearing supports a finding that the lands in question were of known mineral character on the date of the original sale by the railroad, and the purchaser should have known at the time of purchase that such lands were excepted from the grant to the railroad.

United States v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. & Donald K. Lee, 66 IBLA 191 (Aug. 13, 1982)

Where there is a deficiency of indemnity land to satisfy losses in place land, the right of a railroad vests to select indemnity under a grant in aid of construction. That right can be conveyed to an innocent purchaser for value and is not affected by a subsequent release filed pursuant to sec. 321(b) of the Transportation Act of 1940, 49 U.S.C. § 65(b) (1976).

A railroad's right to select indemnity land under the Act of July 27, 1866, which had vested, was a claim which was required to be recorded with the Department within 2 years from the effective date of the Act of Aug. 5, 1955, 69 Stat. 534. Failure to present a claim within the time established by the Act barred acquisition of lands. A list of innocent purchasers for value filed with the Department in 1940 pursuant to sec. 321(b) of the Transportation Act, 49 U.S.C. § 65(b) (1976), did not constitute compliance with the 1955 recordation requirement.

Santa Fe Pacific Railroad Co., 72 IBLA 197 (Apr. 19, 1983)

RAILROAD GRANT LANDS--Continued

Language in a patent of railroad grant lands that excludes mineral lands does not operate as a mineral reservation or diminish the estate vested in the grantee upon discovery of minerals in the land. The issuance of a railroad grant lands patent generally constitutes a conclusive determination by the United States of the nonmineral character of the land.

Joseph A. Barnes et al., 78 IBLA 46 (Dec. 13, 1983) 90 I.D. 550

Where lands were patented to a railroad under a statute which authorized the granting of nonmineral lands only, the issuance of the patent generally constituted a conclusive determination by the United States of the nonmineral character of the land so patented, and the subsequent discovery of mineral values thereon does not operate to void the conveyance by the United States. Where such land has been reconveyed to the United States subject to a reservation of all minerals to the private grantor, the land is not subject to the subsequent location of mining claims under the general mining laws.

RECLAMATION HOMESTEADS

GENERALLY

Where a homestead entry is on land within a second-form reclamation withdrawal, and compliance with the provisions of the reclamation laws is still required, the mere filing of ordinary homestead final proof is not sufficient to vest the entryman with equitable title.

The revocation of a second-form reclamation withdrawal is effective upon the date specified in the order of revocation, regardless of whether the land had ever been suitable for the purpose for which it was withdrawn. Where an entryman has complied with all the requirements of the ordinary homestead law, but not with the requirements of the reclamation law, the revocation of the reclamation withdrawal does not operate retroactively to vest equitable title in the entryman as of the time final proof under the ordinary homestead law was submitted. Such equitable title cannot be deemed to have vested prior to the effective date of the revocation of the withdrawal.

A waiver of mineral rights pursuant to 30 U.S.C. §§ 121-123 (1976) is properly required where there is a finding that land within a reclamation homestead entry is valuable for one of the minerals specified in that Act prior to the submission of reclamation final proof and other compliance with the law, even though ordinary homestead final proof was accepted many years before. Where the entryman or his successor in interest executed the waiver rather than appeal the decision requiring it, the waiver is binding on all successors in interest.

RECLAMATION LANDS

GENERALLY

An application under the Act of Apr. 23, 1932, 43 U.S.C. § 154 (1976), for restoration to mineral entry and location of lands within a reclamation withdrawal will ordinarily be rejected when the Water and Power Resources Service has recommended against it, the recommendation is premised upon the requirements of the public interest, and the reasons offered in support of the recommendation are cogent.

Florence Atkinson, 47 IBLA 121 (Apr. 28, 1980)

A desert land application filed for lands which are withdrawn for reclamation purposes at the time of the filing of the application must be rejected. It cannot be suspended pending the lifting of the withdrawal. Even where the purpose of the withdrawal cannot be met, the withdrawal is nevertheless effective to bar the disposal of the land.

Robert A. Adams, 57 IBLA 370 (Sept. 8, 1981)

A land owner is properly assessed annual operation and maintenance charges with respect to his lands within the boundaries of the Yuma Valley Reclamation Project.

David J. Stoddard, 4 OHA 204 (Oct. 26, 1981)

Where a homestead entry is on land within a second-form reclamation withdrawal, and compliance with the provisions of the reclamation laws is still required, the mere filing of ordinary homestead final proof is not sufficient to vest the entryman with equitable title.

The revocation of a second-form reclamation withdrawal is effective upon the date specified in the order of revocation, regardless of whether the land had ever been suitable for the purpose for which it was withdrawn. Where an entryman has complied with all the requirements of the ordinary homestead law, but not with the requirements of the reclamation law, the revocation of the reclamation withdrawal does not operate retroactively to vest equitable title in the entryman as of the time final proof under the ordinary homestead law was submitted. Such equitable title cannot be deemed to have vested prior to the effective date of the revocation of the withdrawal.

A waiver of mineral rights pursuant to 30 U.S.C. §§ 121-123 (1976) is properly required where there is a finding that land within a reclamation homestead entry is valuable for one of the minerals specified in that Act prior to the submission of reclamation final proof and other compliance with the law, even though ordinary homestead final proof was accepted many years before. Where the entryman or his successor in interest executed the waiver rather than appeal the decision requiring it, the waiver is binding on all successors in interest.

Vincent Bernard, 66 IBLA 100 (Aug. 4, 1982)

A decision rejecting an application under the Act of Apr. 23, 1932, 43 U.S.C. § 154 (1976), for restoration of lands within a reclamation withdrawal to mineral entry and location will be reversed on appeal where the record fails to disclose any objection to granting the application or any way in which it is contrary to the public interest.

Joe Ashburn, 66 IBLA 328 (Aug. 25, 1982)

RIGHTS-OF-WAY

Where a reclamation withdrawal is modified by public land order to authorize a public highway right-of-way pursuant to sec. 8 of the Act of July 26, 1866 (repealed 1976, formerly codified at 43 U.S.C. § 932), the nature and extent of the rights authorized are controlled by the express terms of the public land order restoring the land. A decision to close a road built on a right-of-way within a reclamation withdrawal which is expressly conditioned upon noninterference with the operation and maintenance of a dam and related facilities will be affirmed where the record supports a determination by reclamation officials that public access is substantially interfering with operations and maintenance and the road has been replaced by a new highway open to the public.

A state retains extensive jurisdiction over Federal lands within its boundary, but Congress is authorized to enact legislation regarding the use and occupancy of the Federal lands. Provisions of state law regarding abandonment of a right-of-way within a reclamation withdrawal must recede where implementation thereof would interfere with the effort of reclamation officials to operate and maintain reclamation facilities as directed by Act of Congress.

County of Imperial, 5 OHA 286 (Mar. 16, 1984)

RECREATION AND PUBLIC PURPOSES ACT

The rejection of an application for a lease under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act for land to be used as a rifle range is a proper exercise of the Secretary's discretion where the facts show that size and topography of the land are not suitable for such range and the site is not safe, notwithstanding the fact that the land had been classified for lease under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act.

Town of Kremmling, 46 IBLA 213 (Mar. 27, 1980)

An Indian allotment application is properly rejected where it requests lands which are not available for entry because they have previously been noted on BLM plats under a recreational and public purposes classification pursuant to 43 U.S.C. § 869 (1976).

Marjorie M. Underwood, 58 IBLA 21 (Sept. 16, 1981)

Where the Bureau of Land Management has transferred lands to the National Park Service for inclusion in a national recreation area, the lands are not subject to disposition under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act.

General M. B. W. Corp., 59 IBLA 320 (Nov. 4, 1981)

Land segregated pursuant to a Recreation Public Purpose Act classification was not available for the location of mining claims, and claims thereafter located are null and void ab initio.

Gloria Ann Sandvik, Judy Neff, 73 IBLA 82 (May 18, 1983)

Mining claims located on land which has been classified for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), and subsequently leased pursuant thereto, are properly declared null and void ab initio because the land was segregated from mineral entry, even where the lease contained a mineral reservation to the United States.

The Board of Land Appeals has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal by a mining claimant from a BLM decision classifying land for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), which has become a final order of the Secretary.

In order to establish that a notice of location of a mining claim is an amended location which relates back prior to a BLM decision which classified the land for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), the mining claimant must submit proof of a chain of title to him. In the absence of such proof, the purported amendment must be treated as a relocation.

A mining claim lying entirely on lands previously patented under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act is null and void ab initio because such lands are not open to mineral entry.

Cruz G. Velasquez, Arsenio Sanchez, 78 IBLA 355 (Jan. 25, 1984)

Lands segregated on the public records by a Recreational and Public Purposes lease are not available for the location of mining claims, but a claimant may establish the exterior boundaries of a lode claim on land under a Recreation and Public Purposes lease, with the permission of the lessee, for the purpose of making end lines parallel so as to obtain extralateral rights to a vein or lode discovered on lands available for location.

Santa Fe Mining, Inc., 79 IBLA 48 (Feb. 9, 1984)

The Recreation and Public Purposes Act makes reserved minerals subject to disposition only under applicable laws and such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe. In the absence of such regulations, land under patent pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 - 869-4 (1976), is not open to location under the mining laws.

A patentee's transfer of property, or use of property, for a purpose other than the one described in a patent under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), without consent of the Department of the Interior, triggers reversion of the land to the United States; however, such reversion occurs only after due notice and an opportunity for a hearing has been provided to the patentee.

George Schultz et al., 81 IBLA 29 (May 17, 1984)

The Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 - 869-4 (1982), makes reserved minerals subject to disposition only under applicable laws and such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe. In the absence of such regulations, land classified for disposition and under lease pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act is not open to location under the mining laws.

E. D. Topashr, 82 IBLA 162 (Aug. 6, 1984)

The Secretary of the Interior has the discretionary authority to grant an application for public lands under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1982). A decision rejecting such an application for land to be used for wildlife habitat management will be affirmed where it is based on a policy reasonably related to the public interest and appellant has shown no error therein.

Altex Oil Corp., 61 IBLA 270 (Jan. 29, 1982)

Estoppel of the Government, especially where public lands are concerned, is an extraordinary remedy that can be successfully invoked only under truly extraordinary circumstances. An appellant mining claim owner may not claim that ignorance of applicable statutory and regulatory rules of recordation constitutes ignorance of a material fact, which is essential to estoppel, because all persons dealing with the Government are presumed to have knowledge thereof. That BLM did not notice the tardiness of appellant's submitted location notice, and then continued to record affidavits of labor, is unfortunate but is no ground for estoppel of the Government.

Garrett Conpovichnab v. Acting Area Director, Anadarko Area Office, Bureau of Indian Affairs, 9 IBIA 179 (Feb. 19, 1982) 89 I.D. 71

The Secretary of the Interior has been authorized by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1740 (1976), to "promulgate rules and regulations to carry out" its purposes. The regulations providing for the conclusive presumption of mining claim abandonment and voidance are directly authorized by correlative language in sec. 314 of FLPMA, 43 U.S.C. § 1744 (1976). The statutory presumption of abandonment operates as a matter of law, and no administrative involvement, including issuance of regulations, would be necessary to its operation.

Diane Dark v. Acting Deputy Director, Office of Indian Education Programs, 11 IBIA 174 (Apr. 21, 1983) 90 I.D. 172

An essential element of a claim for estoppel is that the party asserting it must be ignorant of the material facts. Since all persons dealing with the Government are presumed to have knowledge of relevant statutes and duly promulgated regulations, a party cannot successfully plead ignorance of the rules governing oil and gas rental payment procedures without presentation of extraordinary circumstances which overcome the presumption.

Where in a previous appeal the Board has considered and decided appellant's objections to several provisions incorporated in the readjusted terms of a coal lease, a second appeal based upon appellant's objection to still another provision in the same lease readjustment will be dismissed as untimely. Houghland Farms, Inc. v. Bureau of Land Management, 77 IBLA 245 (Nov. 30, 1983)

An essential element of a claim for estoppel is that the party asserting it must be ignorant of the true facts. Since, however, all persons are presumed to have knowledge of relevant statutory and regulatory provisions, an individual may not premise a claim of estoppel on information or advice contrary to such a provision, since the individual is properly charged with knowledge of the true facts.

Steve D. Harberry, Bobbie Jennings, Mark Jennings, 82 IBLA 339 (Sept. 12, 1984)

The mere fact that a readjusted coal lease expressly provides that regulations adopted subsequent thereto may be applied does not, ipso facto, make the provisions of the lease fatally indefinite, since it is further provided that express provisions of the lease are not subject to alteration by later regulatory amendments. The applicability to the lease of any specific regulatory provision, however, can only be determined where such regulations have been promulgated and a lessee can show injury in fact in their application.

88 I.D. 24

A final Departmental appellate decision construing a regulation will be applied with prospective effect only where it materially alters the interpretation given the regulation by earlier administrative decisions and where it would be unfair or prejudicial to apply such decision retroactively.

William L. Hough, Jr., 52 IBLA 174 (Jan. 26, 1981)

Patricia Ann DeSalvo, 58 IBLA 1 (Sept. 15, 1981)

Generally, new procedural regulations may be promulgated with retroactive effect and applied to a holder of preexisting interests. However, the present revised regulations in 43 CFR Part 2800 were not written with such effect. Therefore, where an easement for a right-of-way was issued pursuant to the Act of Mar. 4, 1911, as amended, 43 U.S.C. § 961 (1976), and was not conformed to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 43 U.S.C. §§ 1701-1782 (1976), in accordance with sec. 509(a) of FLPMA, 43 U.S.C. § 1769(a) (1976), regulation 43 CFR 2803.1-2(d), which allows rental adjustment without a prior hearing, is not applicable.

Where an applicant files an over-the-counter oil and gas lease offer for less than 640 acres and does not include adjacent land for which an exchange application was then pending because of his reliance on Departmental decisions, a BLM Information Memorandum, and a BLM State Office decision, all interpreting a regulation to mean that an exchange application segregates the selected land from mineral leasing, a subsequent reinterpretation of the salient regulation which holds that such lands are available for leasing will not compel rejection of the offer. A regulation should be so clear that there is no basis for an applicant's noncompliance with it before it may be interpreted and applied with retroactive effect so as to deprive him of a statutory priority.

Shamrock Coal Co., Inc. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 81 IBLA 374 (June 28, 1984)

Where 43 CFR 4110.3-2 was amended to require supporting data prior to decision in certain cases involving changes in grazing use of the public lands, and the amended regulation became effective prior to decision by the Administrative Law Judge assigned to consider the decision on appeal, the amended rule was properly applied where the basis for the declared policy of the Department respecting grazing decisions rests upon a determination that the amended rule is required by known facts.

A regulation promulgated following decision by the Bureau of Land Management in 1982 is applicable to require use of trend studies to supplement a 1978 range survey where the 1978 survey alone, without trend studies made in intervening years, is an inadequate basis for decision pursuant to 43 CFR 4110.3-2(c) (1983).

Where the Bureau of Land Management uses a 1978 range survey as the sole basis for a 1982 decision limiting range cattle carrying capacity, the decision is not adequately supported where circumstances indicate the single survey may be inconclusive as to the true condition of the range under 42 CFR 4110.3-2(c) (1983).

Clyde L. Perkins, Douglas L. Bowd v. Bureau of Land Management, 83 IBLA 29 (Sept. 24, 1984)

Under 30 U.S.C. § 188(c) (1982), a lease terminated automatically for untimely payment of annual rental may be reinstated only upon proof that reasonable diligence was exercised, or that lack of diligence was justifiable. Where it benefits the affected party to do so, and there are no countervailing public policies or intervening rights which will be adversely affected, an oil and gas lease regulation which is amended while the matter is pending may be applied in its amended form. Under the reinstatement regulations as amended (Aug. 22, 1983), a rental payment postmarked on or before the anniversary date and received within 20 days thereafter may be construed as reasonably diligent.

Where a regulation allows land description by legal subdivision, section, township and range, by metes and bounds, and by "tract acquisition numbers," but is insufficiently clear to allow a determination as to when one, rather than another of these methods of description should be used, an oil and gas lease offeror who has described the lands sought by tract acquisition numbers will not be held to have lost his statutory preference right for failure to comply with the regulation if the description afforded is accurate for the purpose.

Regulations should be so clear that there is no basis for an oil and gas lease offeror's noncompliance with them before they are interpreted so as to deprive him of a statutory preference right to a lease.

Walter R. Wilson, Jr., 55 IBLA 96 (June 1, 1981)

A regulation should be sufficiently clear that there is no reasonable basis for an oil and gas lease applicant's noncompliance with the regulation before it is interpreted to deprive an applicant of a preference right to a lease. A regulation specifying a bank money order as an acceptable form of remittance requires the acceptance of a personal money order issued by a bank.

Regulations should be so clear that there is no basis for a simultaneous oil and gas applicant's noncompliance with them, and this Board will not enforce a prohibition against bank personal money orders under 43 CFR 3112.2-2 where the regulation does not specifically exclude such from the term bank money order.

Maria C. Cayley, John J. Cayley, 61 IBLA 205 (Jan. 26, 1982)

Where an applicant files an over-the-counter oil and gas lease offer for less than 640 acres and does not include adjacent land for which an exchange application was then pending because of his reliance on Departmental decisions, a BLM Information Memorandum, and a BLM State Office decision, all interpreting a regulation to mean that an exchange application segregates the selected land from mineral leasing, a subsequent reinterpretation of the salient regulation which holds that such lands are available for leasing will not compel rejection of the offer. A regulation should be so clear that there is no basis for an applicant's noncompliance with it before it may be interpreted and applied with retroactive effect so as to deprive him of a statutory priority.

It is proper to reject an acquired lands oil and gas lease offer submitted for less than an entire tract of acquired lands, not surveyed under the rectangular system of public land surveys, where the boundary of the land sought is not described by course and distance between each successive pair of angle points of the boundary of the tract.

Thomas Connell, 70 IBLA 289 (Jan. 27, 1983)

It is proper to reject oil and gas lease offers for less than an entire tract of acquired lands that are not surveyed under the rectangular system of public land surveys, where the desired lands are neither described in the offers by metes and bounds, as in the deed by which the United States acquired title to them, nor described by courses and distances between successive angle points, tying by course and distance into the description of the lands in the deed.

Mapco Production Co., Inc., 70 IBLA 339 (Feb. 2, 1983)

Even if it be established that the Department had not applied in previous years regulation 43 CFR 4115.2-1(e)(8) (1975), which requires termination of grazing privileges upon loss of ownership or control of base property, such failure to apply the regulation is not authority to further disregard the regulation.

When an oil and gas lessee submits the amount of rental stated in a bill rendered by an authorized officer and the amount is found to be in error resulting in a deficiency, generally such lease shall not have automatically terminated for failure to pay the annual rental timely and new offers to lease the lands must be rejected.

Lucinda E. Boggs, 45 IBLA 60 (Jan. 14, 1980)

Failure to pay rental timely for an oil and gas lease is neither justifiable nor not due to a lack of reasonable diligence where the rental is mailed 9 days after the lease anniversary date and the delay in mailing is caused by the fact that the envelope containing the rental apparently slipped from a group of letters appellant was taking to the post office for mailing.

Idaho Economically Homogeneous Area survey failed to conform to 5 U.S.C. § 5911 (1976) and implementing regulations when values from urban and rural areas were averaged to reach rental values for an entire state without regard to difference in rents between cities and rural or small town localities. The rental rate figures derived from mere averaging of values does not result in reasonable values required by law.

The automatic termination provision of 30 U.S.C. § 188(b) (1976) is applicable to a lease whose lands formed part of a unit upon which production has at all times been maintained, but were thereafter eliminated therefrom and simultaneously segregated by reason of their inclusion in a second unit, since terminated.

Pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 5911 (1976), the appraisal of Government-furnished quarters at the Polacca Day School, Hopi Indian Agency, by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Phoenix Area Office, and the resulting adjustment of basic rental rates were based upon the reasonable value of the quarters to the employees in the circumstances under which provided, occupied, or made available.

Where a communications site right-of-way has been issued for a television translator site to provide improved television reception to a remote area, the holder of the right-of-way does not qualify for a waiver of the fair market rental as providing a "valuable benefit to the public" without charge under sec. 504(g) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1764(g) (1976), and 43 CFR 2803.1-2.

An upward amenity adjustment of 2 percent to basic rental rate is correctly calculated in accordance with the economically homogeneous area survey method, IMPR 114-52.303(b), when the number of amenities present for Government-furnished quarters is one more than the average number of amenities present in the private rental survey of comparable private housing in an economically homogeneous area in which the Government rental quarters are located.

Appeal of Mary T. Foss, 5 OHA 15 (Sept. 30, 1982)

Where a 7 percent limitation on increases in net basic rental rates was not applied to the rate previous to the one resulting from a survey of an economically homogeneous area, the case will be remanded for a determination of what amount should be credited to the employee for overpayment of rates in accordance with 41 CFR 114-52.602(a)3.

Where the record contains unreconciled allegations concerning facts necessary for the determination of the proper monthly basic rental rate, the case will be remanded for findings of fact.

Where improper guidelines were used to calculate the amenity adjustment for a particular quarters unit, and application of the correct standards to the record indicates that the contested amenities did not exist for that unit, the case will be remanded for a determination of the amenity adjustment in accordance with the correct standards.

Appeal of Robert W. Jones, 5 OHA 21 (Oct. 12, 1982)

The 7 percent limitation on rental rate increases imposed by Secretary Andrus to rental increases effective after Dec. 13, 1978, was properly restricted by implementing instructions of the Deputy Assistant Secretary--Policy, Budget, and Administration, to increases in the "net basic rental rate" and did not apply to any passthrough charge collected by the Government for utilities, furnishings, or related services that by law must reflect prevailing community rates.

There is no duplicative charge for furnishings where the monthly basic rental rate is calculated after deducting standard amounts for these items.

Tube City Housing Appeals Ass'n, 5 OHA 33 (Oct. 12, 1982)

When appealing tenants fail to show that there was anything improper or contrary to stated policy about the compilation of data for and the conclusions of the Regional Survey of an Economically Homogeneous Area affecting the tenants' rentals, in particular with respect to exclusion of rental figures from certain communities in the area, the correct square footage used for tenants' quarters, additional charges for quarters' features not otherwise reflected in the survey's figures for comparable rentals, and incorrect deductions for lack of amenities, then the tenants may have no relief based only on the allegation of faults in the survey.

Where the relevant statements of law and policy require an annual adjustment in rentals for Government-furnished quarters according to a Consumer Price Index factor, there is no error when the Government increases rentals based upon that factor.

The deduction from rental for excessive heating costs is not constituted so as to provide a disincentive to conserve utility commodities; any successful conservation effort results in the loss of some portion of the excessive heating costs deduction but it also results in a higher out-of-pocket savings, thus normally creating a net savings.

The deduction from rentals for unusual transportation costs is a creation of law; the Government has no authority to set a deduction amount other than that prescribed by the relevant legal authority even though that authority has decreased over the years the amount allowable for the same distance of isolation..

A proper measure of the appropriateness of a rental charge is that it be set so as to create no barrier to the recruitment or retention of employees; nevertheless, that principle is merely a yardstick against which to measure whether the Government in setting rents has adhered to the principle of comparability and, in the absence of proof that such a barrier has been created while rentals otherwise appear to be comparable, appellants may obtain no relief on the mere allegation of the creation of such a barrier.

The Government reaps no "profit," as the authorities understand that term, when it charges a quarters rental which is otherwise comparable to the private housing market.

Appeal of Jan Perschon et al., 5 OHA 65 (Dec. 21, 1982)

Where the reasonable rental value of Government-furnished quarters has been determined in accordance with accepted appraisal procedures pursuant to Departmental directives, and the occupant alleges that his rent is excessive in relation to rates prevailing in the local community, the burden is on the occupant to prove by positive, specific, and substantial evidence that the appraisal is in error.

Jack T. Matuska, 5 OHA 346 (Aug. 24, 1984)

Rental rates for Government-furnished quarters located in one state may not be set by reference to an economically homogenous area survey compiled with respect to an area of three states none of which is the state of the Government-furnished quarters for which the review of rental rate setting is being had; setting rates in such a prohibited manner is erroneous and any rates so set will be set aside.

Jean Rodgers et al., 5 OHA 178 (Sept. 19, 1983)

OMB Circular No. A-45 allows agencies to employ one of two alternative approaches to establish comparable rentals as a step in setting rental rates for Government-furnished quarters when the quarters are more than 5 miles away from an established community: either use the comparable rentals in a nearby representative community or conduct an economically homogeneous area survey; the Department, by regulation, has required the use of the latter of these alternatives when both are available. Thus, tenants' findings about rental rates in one particular community are irrelevant when the economically homogeneous area survey approach is used.

When an agency makes a downward adjustment to the basic rental rate for a lack of amenities in particular quarters as compared to the average number of amenities present in the comparable market, there is no surcharge to the basic rates for the amenities that are present.

The various authorities governing rental ratesetting clearly contemplate that some utility services to Government-furnished quarters will not be measured or metered; by providing that charges for such services in those circumstances will be established by reference to the average of such charges in the survey community, the authorities have insured that any resulting inequities to tenants will be kept to a minimum.

Although the Departmental handbook specifically requires ratesetting officials to deny the unusual transportation costs (UTC) deduction for quarters located less than 30 miles from the nearest established community, when quarters are 29.4 miles away from such a community and the proportionate increase in rentals is as great as in this case, it is conceivable that it could be demonstrated that the new rental rate would be unreasonable if not adjusted for transportation costs; under the circumstances of this case, ratesetting officials should treat this appeal as a request to the appropriate Departmental official under 400 DM 5.2B (1), for a determination regarding application of the UTC deduction.

The regulations governing the rental ratesetting process suggest permitting the participation of tenants in certain parts of the process but accord tenants no right to participate; insofar as the regulations provide no relief for the failure to allow participation and as tenants here neither allege nor prove any prejudice resulting from that failure, no relief may be granted.

The principle of comparability, which forms the basis for the ratesetting process, requires that the charge for an item of service be comparable to the charge for a comparable service in the comparison community. When the service is not provided or when some "service" is provided but it is so different from the comparison community service that it is inaccurate to term it comparable, then charging the rate for a comparison community service is inappropriate.

The principle of comparability, which forms the basis for the ratesetting process, requires that a basic rental rate for Government-furnished quarters be established by reference to private market rental housing in a similar state of maintenance and repair; when the private market average is for housing somewhere between fair and good condition and the Government housing to which the average applies is in fair or worse condition, a downward adjustment in the private market average should be made when applied to the particular Government unit.

Where a floor plan of a Government rental unit discloses on its face only ordinary patterns, finding that the unit is possessed of the "unusual design features" amenity is inappropriate unless the involved agency can demonstrate the amenity's presence; in the absence of such a showing, a 2 percent decrease in the basic rental rate, is in order.

Appeal of Horace Traylor II et al., 5 OHA 117 (Mar. 22, 1983)

While meetings with employees are encouraged under the provisions of 41 CFR 114-52.601 to assure employee understanding of the process for establishing rental rates for Government-furnished quarters, such meetings are not mandated by these provisions.

Under limitations imposed by the Office of Management and Budget, the rental rate for Government-furnished quarters cannot be reduced to reflect unusual transportation costs by more than the maximum amount authorized by the Department's regulations at 41 CFR 114-52.302.

Under the provisions of 41 CFR 114-52.303, an adjustment to the basic rental rate of Government-furnished quarters is to be made to reflect the difference in the number of "amenities," as defined in 41 CFR 114-52.105(f), associated with the Government-furnished quarters as compared with the number of amenities associated with comparable private dwellings.

Under the provisions of 41 CFR 114-52.207, charges are to be added to the basic rental rate of Government-furnished quarters for furnishings provided by the Government.

To successfully challenge an element of a regional quarters survey used in calculating the basic rental rate for Government-furnished quarters, the employee/occupant must assert more than unsupported conclusions of fact.

Appeal of the Henry Mountain Resource Area Employees, 5 OHA 127 (Mar. 31, 1983)

The unusual transportation costs deduction for quarters located more than 30 miles from the nearest established community is the only permissible way to credit an employee for remoteness.

When appropriate, the Government may credit an employee with 90 percent of the heating costs in excess of $50 over the average seasonal heating costs in the area.

The principle of comparability, which forms the basis for the ratesetting process, requires that a basic rental rate for Government-furnished quarters be established by reference to private market rental housing in a similar state of maintenance and repair; when the private market average is for housing somewhere between fair and good condition and the Government housing to which the average applies is in fair or worse condition, a downward adjustment in the private market average should be made when applied to the particular Government unit.

Appeal of Agnes Wales, 5 OHA 215 (Oct. 26, 1983)

The unusual transportation costs deduction for quarters located more than 30 miles from the nearest established community is the only permissible way to credit an employee for remoteness. Where the maximum authorized deduction has already been provided, no further transportation deduction is available.

Appeal of Pamela D. Doyle, 5 OHA 219 (Nov. 2, 1983)

When quarters rental rate appeals arise in remote areas where it is not practical to hold hearings, the parties have a special obligation to assist in the resolution of the appeal by prompt and detailed responses to the Board's inquiries concerning the allegations presented to it.

Even if the appellant and the Area Director provide their telephone numbers for use by the Board in connection with an appeal, it is not proper under 4 CFR 4.27 for the Board to become involved in oral (ex parte) communications with either party except in the presence of the other party. Decisions by the Board can be made only on the basis of the appeal record, which includes the parties' initial submissions plus subsequent letters, memoranda, or documents from either side that have been made available to the other side.

Where there is no requirement in the law or regulations, and no other reasonable explanation is offered, for using different bases in making the various adjustments needed to calculate the net monthly basic rental rate for Government-furnished quarters, a consistent basis must be used, even if the instructions for calculating such adjustments on the Department's rental computation worksheet appear to indicate otherwise.

Where date stamps on correspondence indicate that mailing time is only 3 to 5 days one way, a period of 2 months is a sufficient time for the Board to await a reply to its inquiry from an agency respondent. At the end of that time, in the absence of sufficient rebuttal, the allegations of an appellant who claims below-average electrical consumption may be taken as true, and an appellant's monthly electricity bill may be adjusted by the Board accordingly, provided that the claims are not unreasonable.

Walter W. Duncan, 5 OHA 256 (Feb. 8, 1984)

Where a counsel moves to reopen a Board decision and the motion is granted, and the parties are given a period substantially in excess of the time requested in which to submit additional evidence but both fail to do so, the Board is entitled to dispose of the case by a summary affirmation of the original decision.

Where the BLM granted a communications site right-of-way pursuant to the Act of Mar. 4, 1911, as amended, 43 U.S.C. § 961 (1976), subject to future appraisal, collection of a rental deposit at the time of the grant with a later adjustment in the annual rental charges upon receipt of an approved fair market value appraisal is not a prohibited imposition of a retroactive rental.

Appraisals of rights-of-way for communication sites will be upheld if there is no error in the appraisal methods used by the Bureau of Land Management and the appellant fails to show convincing evidence that the charges are excessive.

REORGANIZATION PLANS

There is no authority pursuant to which a pro rata or set-off formula can be read into 43 CFR 3503.3-1. Nor do the regulations require BLM to accept all tenders of rental against an anticipated unavailability of some or all of the lands included in a hardrock prospecting application, which may or may not materialize. In the event that some or all of the lands applied for are unavailable, the applicant's remedy is a refund of excess rental paid, and not a set-off against deficiencies.

RES JUDICATA

A decision in 1959 withdrawing charges of lack of discovery is not res judicata as to subsequent inquiry. The earlier decision merely established that claimants' possessory interest in claims had not been extinguished by Act of May 27, 1955, 69 Stat. 67, withdrawing lands from all forms of mining activity. Unless and until patent issues, title to the claims in controversy remains in the United States, and it may inquire into the extent and validity of rights claimed against it.

Where a United States district court has ordered a lessee to adopt a dual accounting method of determining value and has ordered the Department to require this dual accounting from the lessee, the question of the propriety of the Area Supervisor's order doing so is apparently res judicata, the only question being whether the order is the court's final action.

Where a decision by an officer of the Department has become final, the principle of res judicata will operate to bar consideration of a new appeal arising from a later proceeding involving the same claim and same issues, absent compelling legal or equitable reasons for reconsideration.

Lillian Barlow, 58 IBLA 385 (Oct. 21, 1981)

While res judicata and collateral estoppel may be appropriately applied by the Board in its decisions, those doctrines need not be employed where the effect would be to impair the correctness and consistency of the Board's decisions and prevent the effectuation of statutory and regulatory policy. Where the Board has overruled part of an earlier Board decision that had reversed a BLM decision for invalidating appellants' mining claims upon an improper basis, res judicata will not protect appellants' claims from a subsequent BLM decision of invalidity grounded on a correct statement of appellants' violation of the recording laws.

RIGHTS-OF-WAY

GENERALLY

Public Land Order No. 2676 (1962), requires the approval of an authorized officer of the Department of the Army before the Secretary of the Interior can grant a right-of-way over lands subject to the public land order. The Department of the Interior has no authority to grant a right-of-way where the approval is withheld.

In reviewing a decision to grant a right-of-way based upon an environmental analysis report, the decision will be upheld where the record evidences consideration of all available information and a reasoned analysis of the factors involved, made in due regard for the public interest.

The grant of a right-of-way over public lands, authorizing the construction of a roadway involving some 6 acres of public lands in an area of approximately 5,700 acres, does not require the preparation of an environmental impact statement, as no major Federal action is present within the terms of 42 U.S.C. § 4332(c) (1976).

Recognizing the principle of stare decisis, the Board nevertheless declines to follow a decision of the same district court involving the same statute where a circuit court decision, although arising under a different statute, is of more recent vintage, takes specific cognizance of the district court decision, and the circuit court decision comports with Departmental policies.

A pending right-of-way application does not create any vested right in the applicant; therefore, the application is subject to the regulations in effect when it is adjudicated.

Where BLM granted appellant's rights-of-way for communication sites under Title V of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976), subject to a future appraisal, application of 43 CFR 2803.1-2(b) providing that BLM establish an estimated rental fee, collect the fee in advance, and adjust the advance rental fee upon receipt of an approved fair market appraisal, is not a prohibited imposition of a retroactive rental.

The preferred method for appraising the fair market value of nonlinear rights-of-way, including microwave transmission sites, is the comparable lease method of appraisal where there is sufficient comparable rental data and appropriate adjustments are made for differences between the subject sites and other leased sites.

Where a reclamation withdrawal is modified by public land order to authorize a public highway right-of-way pursuant to sec. 8 of the Act of July 26, 1866 (repealed 1976, formerly codified at 43 U.S.C. § 932), the nature and extent of the rights authorized are controlled by the express terms of the public land order restoring the land. A decision to close a road built on a right-of-way within a reclamation withdrawal which is expressly conditioned upon noninterference with the operation and maintenance of a dam and related facilities will be affirmed where the record supports a determination by reclamation officials that public access is substantially interfering with operations

Where BLM grants a right-of-way for a haul road under sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1976), subject to a future appraisal, BLM may subsequently appraise the land included in the right-of-way, and the rental charges imposed from the date of the right-of-way grant will not be considered retroactive.

Lone Star Steel Co., 79 IBLA 345 (Mar. 22, 1984)

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision denying a protest against issuance of a right-of-way across land in a wilderness study area to state-owned land must show that the decision was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact. Where state land is encircled by Federal land within a wilderness study area, the state's lessee has a right of access across Federal land pursuant to 16 U.S.C. § 3210(b) (Supp. V 1981) adequate to secure the reasonable use and enjoyment of the leasehold. Because the BLM may not deny such access by requiring the lessee to use helicopters, BLM need not examine the feasibility of helicopter access in its consideration of a right-of-way application.

Where there is no appraisal to support a readjusted rental rate for a water pipeline right-of-way, a decision imposing the readjusted rate must be reversed.

A. Keith Barben, 81 IBLA 332 (June 19, 1984)

An appraisal of fair market rental for a communication site right-of-way will not be set aside on appeal if an appellant fails to show error in the appraisal methods used or fails to show by convincing evidence that the charges are excessive.

Southern California Gas Co., 81 IBLA 358 (June 27, 1984)

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, its construction is a question of Federal law. By the time of the R.S. 2477 Idaho grant, Congress had already determined that telephone cables were not within the scope of an R.S. 2477 highway right-of-way. Thus, a telephone cable buried along an R.S. 2477 highway with a right-of-way from the State of Idaho but without the requisite BLM right-of-way is in trespass.

Mountain Bell, 83 IBLA 67 (Sept. 26, 1984)

Upon the filing of a proper class 1 color-of-title application, the applicant's right to purchase the land described in the application vests. Subsequent to such filing, BLM lacks authority to diminish the estate applied for, and, therefore, may not grant a right-of-way to any party, including an agency of the Federal Government.

Where the Bureau of Land Management proposes to resolve the conflicts and inconsistencies in its appraisal method used to determine fair market rental values for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, granted pursuant to the Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1982), the Board will not rule on the legality of the going rate method of appraisal, since the Bureau of Land Management should be allowed to explore the full range of options available in developing the proper appraisal method.

During the interim period until the Bureau of Land Management develops an approved appraisal method to determine fair market value for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, new rights-of-way should not be appraised using the going rate method of appraisal. The Bureau of Land Management should proceed to charge a reasonable estimate of the fair market value subject to subsequent appraisal in accordance with 43 CFR 2803.1-2(b).

During the interim period until the Bureau of Land Management develops an approved appraisal method to determine fair market value for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, reappraisal of existing rights-of-way should be deferred, and the Bureau of Land Management should continue to charge the original rental fee or last uncontested rental fee.

Northwest Pipeline Corp. (On Reconsideration), 83 IBLA 204 (Oct. 18, 1984)

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, it is a question of Federal law. Rights-of-way obtained by a state pursuant to R.S. 2477 do not contain a legal right on the part of the state to grant third-party rights-of-way. Thus, appellant was required to obtain a right-of-way under 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1982) to bury cable along an R.S. 2477 highway even though appellant had already obtained permission to bury the cable from the county.

Pending applications for rights-of-way filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, 43 U.S.C. § 959 (1970), shall be considered as applications under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

Approval of a domestic water pipeline right-of-way application filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, is within the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. Approval of such an application remains a discretionary matter under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976). Neither an application for a right-of-way nor the building of a pipeline on public land without prior authorization earns an applicant a right to a right-of-way under these statutes.

the record shows the decision to be a reasoned analysis of the factors involved made in due regard for the public interest, and no sufficient reason to disturb the decision is shown. Where the Bureau of Land Management denies a right-of-way application because of the imminent conveyance of the land sought to a Native corporation which opposes the right-of-way and the record satisfactorily rebuts the substance of the opposition and identifies overriding public interest considerations such that the sole reason for the denial becomes the imminence of the conveyance and concern that the Native corporation control its own land, the BLM decision must be reversed. The problem of a Native corporation's control of the use of land conveyed to it is provided for in sec. 14(g) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act and 43 CFR 2650.4-1 and should be addressed apart from the grant or denial of a right-of-way on its own merits.

ACT OF FEBRUARY 25, 1920

Sec. 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), is not applicable to on-lease oil and gas production facilities which are included in a surface use and operations plan, and which are authorized by the approval of an application to conduct leasehold operations or construction activities.

Federal lands included in a unit agreement approved pursuant to 30 CFR Part 226 or a communitization agreement approved pursuant to 43 CFR 3105.2 are treated like an individual oil and gas leasehold for the purpose of determining whether rights-of-way are required for facilities located thereon.

Sec. 29 of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, 30 U.S.C. § 186 (1976), has consistently been interpreted as not providing authority separate from sec. 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), for oil and gas pipeline rights-of-way. Instead, it reserves to the United States the right to allow other rights-of-way or to lease other minerals on Federal land already leased for the extraction of one mineral, and allows the reservation of the right to dispose of the surface of land leased for mineral extraction "insofar as said surface is not necessary to the use of the lessee in extracting and removing deposits thereon."

All facilities related to an oil and gas lease which are located on Federal land outside the lease, regardless of their nature, may be constructed only after appropriate rights-of-way have been granted. Similarly, on-lease oil and gas transportation facilities and on-lease commercial facilities require rights-of-way. Depending on the nature of the facility, the right-of-way would be granted pursuant to either sec. 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), or Title V of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976).

Right-of-way Requirements for Gathering Lines and Other Production Facilities Located Within Oil and Gas Leaseholds, M-36921 (June 19, 1980) 87 I.D. 291

Where an applicant for a right-of-way filed under the Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), for a natural gas pipeline, raises substantial questions concerning the rejection of its proposed route, a decision rejecting this route will be set aside and the matter referred for a hearing.

The Bureau of Land Management has authority to determine the route of a pipeline authorized under 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), and is required to consider all relevant factors including its impact on proposed WSA's, as well as the cost to the applicant, in selecting any specific route.

An appraisal of a right-of-way for a natural gas pipeline, granted pursuant to the Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), will be upheld on appeal if no error is shown in the appraisal methods used by the Bureau of Land Management and the appellant fails to show by convincing evidence that the charges are excessive. However, where the Bureau has determined the highest and best use of the land in order to evaluate the comparability of other lands, and an appellant raises sufficient doubt as to the accuracy of that determination, the case may be remanded for the Bureau to reconsider whether a further appraisal or adjustments in the appraised values should be made.

Western Slope Gas Co., 61 IBLA 57 (Dec. 31, 1981)

The "going rate" approach for appraising rights-of-way for natural gas pipelines granted pursuant to the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), may be used by the Bureau of Land Management in determining the fair market rental value for such grants where there are sufficient market data available to evidence sales of similar right-of-way grants by private landowners.

In determining fair market rental value for a right-of-way for a natural gas pipeline granted pursuant to the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), the Bureau of Land Management may consider market data concerning acquisition of similar rights-of-way across private lands even though the party acquiring those rights-of-way had the power of eminent domain.

Where the record shows that the Bureau of Land Management took into consideration differences between pipeline rights-of-way granted by the Bureau and those granted by private land owners in determining an adjustment factor to be applied to the going rate to arrive at the fair market rental value, in challenging that adjustment figure the right-of-way holder must show by positive and substantial evidence either that the Bureau failed to analyze the proper differences or that the adjustment factor failed reasonably to reflect the amount of those differences.

Northwest Pipeline Corp., 65 IBLA 245 (July 9, 1982)

Where, while a petition for reconsideration is pending before the Board of Land Appeals, BLM acknowledges petitioner's contention that there are conflicting and inconsistent practices within BLM as to the appraisal method used to determine fair market rental values for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, granted pursuant to the Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), and BLM proposes to resolve the conflicts and inconsistencies by means of a study team to develop and recommend an acceptable method for arriving at the estimated fair market annual rental for BLM rights-of-way grants, the Board may set aside its prior decision and the BLM decisions under appeal and remand the cases to BLM to apply the approved appraisal method adopted following the completion of the study team report.

not establish that the trailer conflicts with any management objectives.

P & O Pelco, Inc., 78 IBLA 128 (Dec. 29, 1983)

Neither Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 nor 43 CFR Part 17 require as a mandate of law that a grant of an oil and gas pipeline right-of-way include a provision requiring the grantee to initiate an affirmative action program where (1) the grantee is paying full fair market value for the right granted; (2) the grantee is not the recipient of other financial aid or benefits; and (3) there has been no finding of prior discriminatory practices by the grantee.

Pursuant to its discretionary authority under the Mineral Leasing Act, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1982), BLM may include in a right-of-way grant a condition that the holder develop and submit specific goals and timetables, and engage in affirmative action with respect to the participation of minorities and women in employment and procurement. However, BLM may impose such an affirmative action clause only if applied uniformly and in a nonarbitrary fashion in accordance with specifically identified Departmental policy.

Marathon Oil Co., 83 IBLA 137 (Oct. 9, 1984)

Where the Bureau of Land Management proposes to resolve the conflicts and inconsistencies in its appraisal method used to determine fair market rental values for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, granted pursuant to the Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1982), the Board will not rule on the legality of the going rate method of appraisal, since the Bureau of Land Management should be allowed to explore the full range of options available in developing the proper appraisal method.

During the interim period until the Bureau of Land Management develops an approved appraisal method to determine fair market value for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, new rights-of-way should not be appraised using the going rate method of appraisal. The Bureau of Land Management should proceed to charge a reasonable estimate of the fair market value subject to subsequent appraisal in accordance with 43 CFR 2803.1-2(b).

During the interim period until the Bureau of Land Management develops an approved appraisal method to determine fair market value for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, reappraisal of existing rights-of-way should be deferred, and the Bureau of Land Management should continue to charge the original rental fee or last uncontested rental fee.

ACT OF OCTOBER 21, 1976 (FLPMA)

Where BLM grants a right-of-way for a haul road under sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1976), subject to a future appraisal, BLM may subsequently appraise the land included in the right-of-way, and the rental charges imposed from the date of the right-of-way grant will not be considered retroactive.

APPLICATIONS

The Bureau of Land Management can recover the full cost of providing a service to an identifiable beneficiary regardless of the incidental public benefits flowing from that service. Charges may be made for environmental studies deemed appropriate for the proper consideration of the application.

Recognizing the principle of stare decisis, the Board nevertheless declines to follow a decision of the same district court involving the same statute where a circuit court decision, although arising under a different statute, is of more recent vintage, takes specific cognizance of the district court decision, and the circuit court decision comports with Departmental policies.

A pending right-of-way application does not create any vested right in the applicant; therefore, the application is subject to the regulations in effect when it is adjudicated.

Management overhead costs are not recoverable from right-of-way applicants under 43 CFR 2802.1-2.

Colorado-Ute Electric Ass'n, Inc., 46 IBLA 35 (Feb. 20, 1980)

The repeal of sec. 704(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 90 Stat. 2792, of certain statutory authority to reserve land as a waterhole only prohibits future withdrawals or reservations of land under the repealed statutes and does not affect known waterholes withdrawn prior to the repeal. It was proper for the Bureau of Land Management to reject a water pipeline right-of-way application for land containing a waterhole which was withdrawn prior to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, and where the water is needed for a public use.

Grant L. Hacking, 50 IBLA 154 (Sept. 30, 1980)

The Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 authorizes the Bureau of Land Management to recover reasonable costs including costs of environmental analyses for applications of rights-of-way across public lands.

Costs not directly associated with the processing or monitoring of a right-of-way application, such as evaluation of the mine to be served by the rights-of-way, are not authorized by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 and are not reimbursable pursuant to 43 CFR 2802.1-2.

Management overhead costs are not recoverable from right-of-way applicants under 43 CFR 2802.1-2.

Southern California Edison Co., 55 IBLA 210 (June 18, 1981)

Where, however, an applicant significantly controverts BLM's reasons for rejecting his application, the case will be remanded to allow BLM to respond to the issues raised on appeal and to reconsider the application in light thereof.

Patrick O. Brown, 55 IBLA 336 (June 26, 1981)

Where, over a 6-year period an applicant for a right-of-way fails to submit requested information or agree to reimburse BLM for costs incurred in processing the application, BLM has the authority to reject the application for a failure of diligence on the part of the applicant.

The Department of the Interior may condition approval of a right-of-way application for a communications site right-of-way by requiring acceptance of conditions for the protection of the public interest so long as such conditions are neither inconsistent with nor tend to unreasonably burden the proposed right-of-way.

APPLICATIONS--Continued

The Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761(b)(1), states that the Secretary shall require an applicant for a right-of-way to submit certain information prior to the issuance of the right-of-way, and an application for such right-of-way is properly canceled where the applicant fails to comply with the requirements.

John M. Barbee et al., 60 IBLA 81 (Nov. 19, 1981)

Pending applications for rights-of-way filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, 43 U.S.C. § 959 (1970), shall be considered as applications under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

Approval of a domestic water pipeline right-of-way application filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, is within the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. Approval of such an application remains a discretionary matter under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976). Neither an application for a right-of-way nor the building of a pipeline on public land without prior authorization earns an applicant a right to a right-of-way under these statutes.

A decision rejecting an application for a water pipeline right-of-way will ordinarily be affirmed when the record shows the decision to be a reasoned analysis of the factors involved made in due regard for the public interest, and no sufficient reason to disturb the decision is shown. Where the Bureau of Land Management denies a right-of-way application because of the imminent conveyance of the land sought to a Native corporation which opposes the right-of-way and the record satisfactorily rebuts the substance of the opposition and identifies overriding public interest considerations such that the sole reason for the denial becomes the imminence of the conveyance and concern that the Native corporation control its own land, the BLM decision must be reversed. The problem of a Native corporation's control of the use of land conveyed to it is provided for in sec. 14(g) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act and 43 CFR 2650.4-3 and should be addressed apart from the grant or denial of a right-of-way on its own merits.

Welbro Packing Co., 63 IBLA 176 (Apr. 8, 1982)

Pending applications for rights-of-way filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, 43 U.S.C. § 959 (1970), shall be considered as applications under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

Approval of a right-of-way application filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, is within the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. Approval of such an application remains a discretionary matter under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976). Neither an application for a right-of-way nor the building of reservoirs, pipelines, and ditches on public land and continued use without prior authorization earns an applicant a right to a right-of-way under these statutes.

The grant of a right-of-way for construction of an access road under sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 is discretionary. inconsistent with the facts and/or immaterial to a determination of the public interest.

William A. Sigman, 66 IBLA 53 (July 28, 1982)

The Secretary has broad discretion regarding the amount of information he may require from the applicant for a right-of-way grant prior to accepting the application for consideration. The primary intended use of the right-of-way grant -- the use of the public lands -- must be disclosed. The applicant's inability to disclose a secondary use -- a use resulting from the primary use -- does not preclude the Secretary from considering the application. He must decide whether he is informed adequately of necessary facts to apply the relevant statutory criteria based upon the available information. If so, he may proceed to decide whether the grant or deny the interest that is sought based upon the statutory criteria for FLPMA.

Where an applicant for a right-of-way grant seeks to use the public lands as the site for a reservoir but is unable to disclose the ultimate use of approximately 82% of the water, the Secretary may decide to proceed to consider the application.

Pending applications for rights-of-way filed under previous and repealed authority shall be considered as applications under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Such rights-of-way are subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe regarding extent, duration, survey, location, construction, maintenance, transfer or assignment, and termination. Termination for noncompliance with a condition of the right-of-way grant is within the discretionary authority of the Secretary.

Where the holder of a natural gas pipeline right-of-way issued pursuant to sec. 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), seeks to amend the right-of-way to include installation of a residential trailer to house security personnel, a BLM decision to reject the application will be set aside where the applicant demonstrates that the trailer is necessary to operation and maintenance of the pipeline, for reasons of safety and site security, and BLM does not establish that the trailer conflicts with any management objectives.

BLM may properly reject an application for a powerline right-of-way crossing the Snake River pursuant to its discretion under sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1982), in the interest of preserving the scenic quality of the area and protecting raptors listed as endangered and threatened where the record shows the decision to be a reasoned analysis of the factors involved, including the availability of feasible alternatives, made with due regard for the public interest.

Lower Valley Power & Light, Inc., 82 IBLA 216 (Aug. 22, 1984)

Under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, BLM has the discretion to grant or deny a road right-of-way across public lands, and its decision will be affirmed when the record shows the decision to be a reasoned analysis of the factors involved, made with due regard for the public interest. Therefore, when appellant proposes to build a road across BLM lands to provide alternate access to its ranch, but fails to introduce evidence to counter BLM findings that the site is unsuitable for road construction and the area would probably suffer extensive environmental damage from increased offroad vehicle traffic use, the Board will affirm the BLM decision.

APPRAISALS

An appraisal of a right-of-way for an irrigation ditch, granted pursuant to sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1976), will be upheld on appeal if no error is shown in the appraisal method used by BLM and the appellant fails to show by convincing evidence that the annual rental charge is excessive.

Herring Livestock Co., 69 IBLA 110 (Nov. 30, 1982)

The preferred method for appraising the fair market value of nonlinear rights-of-way, including microwave transmission sites, is the comparable lease method of appraisal where there is sufficient comparable rental data and appropriate adjustments are made for differences between the subject site and other leased sites.

Where either the comparable lease or comparable sale method is used to ascertain fair market value of a communications site, such method automatically includes consideration of residual damages and benefits; therefore, the "before and after" test cannot properly be applied in conjunction with either method.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co. et al., 77 IBLA 110 (Nov. 14, 1983)

Where BLM has determined the fair market rental values of a communications site right-of-way in accordance with accepted appraisal procedures but on appeal the grantee presents a summary of evidence that, if proven, would establish that the charge is excessive, the matter will be referred for a hearing at the BLM State Office in accordance with the basic procedural standards set forth in Circle L, Inc., 36 IBLA 260 (1978).

Appraisals of rights-of-way for communication sites will be upheld if there is no error in the appraisal methods used by the Bureau of Land Management and the appellant fails to show convincing evidence that the charges are excessive.

Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co., 80 IBLA 128 (Apr. 5, 1984)

Where there is no appraisal to support a readjusted rental rate for a water pipeline right-of-way, a decision imposing the readjusted rate must be reversed.

A. Keith Barbee, 81 IBLA 332 (June 19, 1984)

BLM properly requires the holder of a right-of-way for an access road to pay its fair market rental value in accordance with sec. 504(g) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1764(g) (1982), but where there is no evidence that BLM considered the question of whether the holder is entitled to a reduced fee because a valuable benefit is provided to the public by maintenance and improvement of the road, the case will be remanded to BLM to consider that question.

William F. Bigbee, 82 IBLA 6 (July 2, 1984)

CANCELLATION

Sec. 506 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 43 U.S.C. § 1766 (1976), affords certain due process procedural protections to the holder of a right-of-way; however, sec. 506 is not applicable to the holder of a pre-FLPMA easement for a right-of-way granted under the Act of Mar. 4, 1911, as amended, 43 U.S.C. § 961 (1976), who has not conformed the right-of-way to a FLPMA right-of-way pursuant to sec. 509(a) of FLPMA, 43 U.S.C. § 1769(a) (1976), because such an easement for a right-of-way was not granted, issued, or renewed pursuant to Title V of FLPMA.

Where a state agency which for many years has operated a material site under a free-use permit has applied to BLM for a material site right-of-way pursuant to the Federal Highway Act, and has received permission from BLM to construct (operate) in advance of the grant, and the Department of Commerce has certified that the right-of-way is in the public interest, and the application has been perfected by the applicant so that nothing remains to be done except the ministerial act of formally issuing the right-of-way, which act is required by regulation at that stage, a homestead applicant who then files an application for land which includes part of the material site and who pays the fees incident to such application will be held to have acquired his vested right to the homestead land subject to the material site right-of-way issued thereafter, and the homestead patent issued several years later was properly encumbered by a reservation of the right-of-way.

A homestead entryman who 22 years ago received a patent with a reservation of a material site right-of-way, but who accepted such patent without protest or appeal is not entitled to have the right-of-way canceled now on the basis of his assertion that the right-of-way was unauthorized.

State of Alaska, 62 IBLA 187 (Mar. 9, 1982)

It is unnecessary for BLM to terminate a communications site right-of-way which has expired at the end of its primary term and which is not then subject to renewal because it was originally granted under authority subsequently repealed by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1701 (1976). Nevertheless, BLM properly may provide notice of the expiration and inform the holder that continued use under the expired right-of-way is unauthorized.

Donald R. Clark, 65 IBLA 144 (June 29, 1982)

Suspension of the right to construct facilities on a right-of-way granted pursuant to the Act of Feb. 1, 1905, ch. 288, § 4, 33 Stat. 628 (repealed 1976), is tantamount to cancellation of the right-of-way. Such a right-of-way may be canceled only after notice and an opportunity for a hearing have been afforded the holder of the right-of-way.

CONDITIONS AND LIMITATIONS

An applicant for a right-of-way for a municipal water-supply reservoir may be required to open both this reservoir and another reservoir built pursuant to an earlier right-of-way grant to restricted public access as a condition to receiving the present grant, where the record shows that doing so is in the public interest and will not unduly burden the use of the lands as a water-supply reservoir.

BLM may properly require an applicant for a right-of-way for a municipal water-supply reservoir which will inundate Federal lands to bear the cost of mitigating damage to archaeological sites located thereon.

However, where the circumstances of a particular case indicate that a better course of action, and one that allows the balancing of the interests of BLM and the right-of-way applicant, is to allow the grant to be renewed, the Board may direct that the grant be renewable pursuant to 43 CFR 2803.6-5(a).

In granting a right-of-way for access over an existing road pursuant to sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1982), BLM may not unreasonably burden the right-of-way by requiring upgrading of the road where upgrading is neither commensurate with the holder's intended use of the road nor designed to protect any other resource value which might be adversely affected by such use.

James B. Loopan, Elizabeth K. Loopan, 82 IBLA 395 (Sept. 17, 1984)

Neither Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 nor 43 CFR Part 17 require as a mandate of law that a grant of an oil and gas pipeline right-of-way include a provision requiring the grantee to initiate an affirmative action program where (1) the grantee is paying full fair market value for the right granted; (2) the grantee is not the recipient of other financial aid or benefits; and (3) there has been no finding of prior discriminatory practices by the grantee.

Pursuant to its discretionary authority under the Mineral Leasing Act, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1982), BLM may include in a right-of-way grant a condition that the holder develop and submit specific goals and timetables, and engage in affirmative action with respect to the participation of minorities and women in employment and procurement. However, BLM may impose such an affirmative action clause only if applied uniformly and in a nonarbitrary fashion in accordance with specifically identified Departmental policy.

An application by a state highway department for a material site right-of-way on public land is properly denied where the applicant fails to demonstrate that the material is reasonably necessary for the construction or maintenance of a highway or where such disposition would not be consistent with other public purposes as determined by the Bureau of Land Management. Where the application is denied on the basis of a determination that it would preempt the public's only available source of cinders within 40 miles and appellant contradicts this by identifying other public sources, the decision rejecting the application will be set aside and the case remanded for further consideration of alternatives that would meet the needs of the applicant without sacrificing other public purposes.

and thus, a decision to issue the latter type of right-of-way is stayed pending appeal.

Analysis of the environmental impact of the design of a segment of a proposed highway crossing public domain land does not constitute an improper narrowing of the scope of the project for purposes of environmental review where the route of the entire project has already been determined after completion of an environmental impact statement, the portion of the highway across land administered by the Bureau of Land Management has logical termini and a substantial independent utility regardless of whether the balance of the project is constructed, and construction of the highway on BLM land does not foreclose significant alternatives with respect to the balance of the highway project.

Citizens for Glenwood Canyon, 64 IBLA 346 (June 15, 1982)

Interim conveyance of a village selection made subject to a right-of-way issued to the State of Alaska pursuant to the 1958 Federal Aid Highway Act does not convey to the village corporation the authority to cancel the right-of-way. A patent subsequently issued subject to the right-of-way will not operate to vest in the village corporation any such right, but will be subordinate to the right-of-way, which may only be terminated by act of an agency of the Federal Government.

Where a village land selection conveyance under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act is made subject to a highway right-of-way for a maintenance site held by a state agency, the Department of the Interior retains jurisdiction to determine whether the right-of-way should continue or be canceled.

Public Land Order No. 2676 (1962), requires the approval of an authorized officer of the Department of the Army before the Secretary of the Interior can grant a right-of-way over lands subject to the public land order. The Department of the Interior has no authority to grant a right-of-way where the approval is withheld.

All facilities related to an oil and gas lease which are located on Federal land outside the lease, regardless of their nature, may be constructed only after appropriate rights-of-way have been granted. Similarly, on-lease oil and gas transportation facilities and on-lease commercial facilities require rights-of-way. Depending on the nature of the facility, the right-of-way would be granted pursuant to either sec. 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), or Title V of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976).

FEDERAL LAND POLICY AND MANAGEMENT ACT OF 1976--Continued

The Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 authorizes the Bureau of Land Management to recover reasonable costs including costs of environmental analyses for applications of rights-of-way across public lands.

Costs not directly associated with the processing or monitoring of a right-of-way application, such as evaluation of the mine to be served by the rights-of-way, are not authorized by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 and are not reimbursable pursuant to 43 CFR 2802.1-2.

Under the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions (1973), evidence of sums paid by condemning authorities for similar properties, regardless of whether condemnation proceedings have begun, is inadmissible to determine the fair market value of a particular property.

Where the current fair rental value of a communications site right-of-way has been determined in accordance with accepted appraisal procedures and the lessee contends that the rental is excessive, the burden is upon the lessee to prove by positive, substantial evidence that the appraisal is in error. However, where the lessee has provided sufficient evidence on appeal to engender substantial doubt as to the data utilized and the conclusion reached in the appraisal report, the matter will be remanded for reconsideration.

Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Co., 58 IBLA 4 (Sept. 15, 1981)

Under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761(a) (1976), an application for a communication site right-of-way may be accepted or rejected by the Secretary or his duly authorized representative at his discretion. The standard for review of a decision rejecting an application is whether the decision represents a reasoned analysis of pertinent factors with due regard for the public interest. Where the record does not support BLM's decision to reject the application, as amended by subsequent negotiations, it will be remanded for further review.

In connection with an application under FLPMA for a communications site right-of-way, BLM may properly consider site-related technical questions, such as whether and to what degree operation of an FM broadcasting station will result in radio interference with existing uses of the site.

Pending applications for rights-of-way filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, 43 U.S.C. § 959 (1970), shall be considered as applications under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

Approval of a domestic water pipeline right-of-way application filed under the Act of Feb. 15, 1901, is within the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. Approval of such an application remains a discretionary matter under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1761-1771 (1976). Neither an application for a right-of-way nor the building of a pipeline on public land without prior authorization earns an applicant a right to a right-of-way under these statutes.

A decision rejecting an application for a water pipeline right-of-way will ordinarily be affirmed when the record shows the decision to be a reasoned analysis of the factors involved made in due regard for the public interest, and no sufficient reason to disturb the decision is shown. Where the Bureau of Land Management denies a right-of-way application because of the imminent conveyance of the land sought to a Native corporation which opposes the right-of-way and the record satisfactorily rebuts the substance of the opposition and identifies overriding public interest considerations such that the sole reason for the denial becomes the imminence of the conveyance and concern that the Native corporation control its own land, the BLM decision must be reversed. The problem of a Native corporation's control of the use of land conveyed to it is provided for in sec. 14(g) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act and 43 CFR 2650.4-3 and should be

FEDERAL LAND POLICY AND MANAGEMENT ACT OF 1976--Continued

The Secretary has broad discretion regarding the amount of information he may require from the applicant for a right-of-way grant prior to accepting the application for consideration. The primary intended use of the right-of-way grant -- the use of the public lands -- must be disclosed. The applicant's inability to disclose a secondary use -- a use resulting from the primary use -- does not preclude the Secretary from considering the application. He must decide whether he is informed adequately of necessary facts to apply the relevant statutory criteria based upon the available information. If so, he may proceed to decide whether the grant or deny the interest that is sought based upon the statutory criteria for FLPMA.

Where an applicant for a right-of-way grant seeks to use the public lands as the site for a reservoir but is unable to disclose the ultimate use of approximately 82% of the water, the Secretary may decide to proceed to consider the application.

When the Secretary receives a right-of-way application, he must make two decisions: a preliminary decision to determine whether the information submitted in the application is adequate for him to begin his evaluation and a final decision on whether to grant the right-of-way. As part of the final decision he must define the nature and character of the grant, including particulars concerning costs to be imposed, location, and terms and conditions. 43 U.S.C. §§ 1762, 1763, 1764, and 1765 (1976).

Pending applications for rights-of-way filed under previous and repealed authority shall be considered as applications under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Such rights-of-way are subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe regarding extent, duration, survey, location, construction, maintenance, transfer or assignment, and termination. Termination for noncompliance with a condition of the right-of-way grant is within the discretionary authority of the Secretary.

A decision exercising the discretion to terminate a right-of-way grant may be reversed where the record of the decision does not represent a reasoned analysis of pertinent factors with due regard for the public interest.

Pursuant to sec. 504(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1764(a) (1982), the Secretary of the Interior has discretion to set the limits of a right-of-way in light of the area to be occupied by the facilities authorized thereunder, the area required for operation and maintenance of the facilities, the area required for protection of public safety, and the area required for protection of the environment against unnecessary damage. NATURE OF INTEREST GRANTED

In granting a right-of-way over public lands pursuant to the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1958, 23 U.S.C. § 317 (1976), the Secretary of the Interior does not give up administrative authority over the lands subject to the right-of-way. Where regulations allowed the grantee of a highway right-of-way pursuant to sec. 17 of the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1921, 23 U.S.C. § 317 (1976), to authorize within its highway right-of-way a right-of-way for "facilities usual to a highway," a subsequent regulation change properly limited that highway grant to require one seeking, after the effective date of the regulation, a right-of-way for buried telephone cables to apply to the Bureau of Land Management for authorization.

County of Imperial, 5 OHA 286 (Mar. 16, 1984)

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, its construction is a question of Federal law. By the time of the R.S. 2477 Idaho grant, Congress had already determined that telephone cables were not within the scope of an R.S. 2477 highway right-of-way. Thus, a telephone cable buried along an R.S. 2477 highway with a right-of-way from the State of Idaho but without the requisite BLM right-of-way is in trespass.

Mountain Bell, 83 IBLA 67 (Sept. 26, 1984)

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, it is a question of Federal law. Rights-of-way obtained by a state pursuant to R.S. 2477 do not contain a legal right on the part of the state to grant third-party rights-of-way. Thus, appellant was required to obtain a right-of-way under 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1982) to bury cable along an R.S. 2477 highway even though appellant had already obtained permission to bury the cable from the county.

OIL AND GAS PIPELINES

The "going rate" approach for appraising rights-of-way for natural gas pipelines granted pursuant to the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), may be used by the Bureau of Land Management in determining the fair market rental value for such grants where there are sufficient market data available to evidence sales of similar right-of-way grants by private landowners.

In determining fair market rental value for a right-of-way for a natural gas pipeline granted pursuant to the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), the Bureau of Land Management may consider market data concerning acquisition of similar rights-of-way across private lands even though the party acquiring those rights-of-way had the power of eminent domain.

Where the record shows that the Bureau of Land Management took into consideration differences between pipeline rights-of-way granted by the Bureau and those granted by private land owners in determining an adjustment factor to be applied to the going rate to arrive at the fair market rental value, in challenging that adjustment figure the right-of-way holder must show by positive and substantial evidence either that the Bureau failed to analyze the proper differences or that the adjustment factor failed reasonably to reflect the amount of those differences.

Where the holder of a natural gas pipeline right-of-way issued pursuant to sec. 28 of the Mineral Leasing Act, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1976), seeks to amend the right-of-way to include installation of a residential trailer to house security personnel, a BLM decision to reject the application will be set aside where the applicant demonstrates that the trailer is necessary to operation and maintenance of the pipeline,

P & O Falco, Inc., 78 IBLA 128 (Dec. 29, 1983)

Neither Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 nor 43 CFR Part 17 require as a mandate of law that a grant of an oil and gas pipeline right-of-way include a provision requiring the grantee to initiate an affirmative action program where (1) the grantee is paying full fair market value for the right granted; (2) the grantee is not the recipient of other financial aid or benefits; and (3) there has been no finding of prior discriminatory practices by the grantee.

Pursuant to its discretionary authority under the Mineral Leasing Act, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1982), BLM may include in a right-of-way grant a condition that the holder develop and submit specific goals and timetables, and engage in affirmative action with respect to the participation of minorities and women in employment and procurement. However, BLM may impose such an affirmative action clause only if applied uniformly and in a nonarbitrary fashion in accordance with specifically identified Departmental policy.

Marathon Oil Co., 83 IBLA 137 (Oct. 9, 1984)

Where the Bureau of Land Management proposes to resolve the conflicts and inconsistencies in its appraisal method used to determine fair market rental values for natural gas pipeline rights-of-way, granted pursuant to the Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 185 (1982), the Board will not rule on the legality of the going rate method of appraisal, since the Bureau of Land Management should be allowed to explore the full range of options available in developing the proper appraisal method.

REVISED STATUTES SEC. 2477

While the question of the establishment of a public highway under the Act of July 26, 1866, 43 U.S.C. § 932 (1976), otherwise known as R.S. § 2477, is ultimately a matter for the state courts, BLM may properly decide the matter for its own purposes where such a question arises during the consideration of an application for a private access road right-of-way under sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1976).

A Bureau of Land Management decision rejecting a right-of-way application for a private access road, filed pursuant to sec. 501 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1976), because the road in question is a public highway established pursuant to the Act of July 26, 1866, 43 U.S.C. § 932 (1976), otherwise known as R.S. § 2477, will be vacated where the evidence in the record does not support the finding that the road is a public highway.

State of Alaska, Dept. of Transportation and Public Facilities, 5 ANCAB 307 (June 26, 1981) 88 I.D. 629

Where regulations allowed the grantee of a highway right-of-way granted pursuant to sec. 8 of the Act of July 26, 1866, 43 U.S.C. § 932 (1976), otherwise known as R.S. § 2477, to authorize within its highway right-of-way a right-of-way for "facilities usual to a highway," a subsequent regulation change properly limited that highway grant to require one seeking, after the effective date of that regulation, a right-of-way for buried telephone cables to apply to the Bureau of Land Management for authorization.

Pequop Valley Telephone Cooperative, Inc., 55 IBLA 360 (June 26, 1981)

Where the State of Idaho accepted a grant pursuant to sec. 8 of the Act of July 26, 1866, 43 U.S.C. § 932, otherwise known as R.S. 2477 (repealed, sec. 706(a) of FLPMA, 90 Stat. 2793), for a highway right-of-way over public lands, the State's right-of-way remains in effect pursuant to sec. 701(a) of FLPMA, 90 Stat. 2786.

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, its construction is a question of Federal law. By the time of the R.S. 2477 Idaho grant, Congress had already determined that telephone cables were not within the scope of an R.S. 2477 highway right-of-way. Thus, a telephone cable buried along an R.S. 2477 highway with a right-of-way from the State of Idaho but without the requisite BLM right-of-way is in trespass.

Where the State of Montana accepted a grant pursuant to sec. 8 of the Act of July 26, 1866, 43 U.S.C. § 932 (1970), otherwise known as R.S. 2477, repealed, sec. 706(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 90 Stat. 2793, for a highway right-of-way over public lands, the State's right-of-way remains in effect pursuant to sec. 701(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 90 Stat. 2786.

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, it is a question of Federal law. Rights-of-way obtained by a state pursuant to R.S. 2477 do not contain a legal right on the part of the state to grant third-party rights-of-way. Thus, appellant was required to obtain a right-of-way under 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1982) to bury cable along an R.S. 2477 highway even though appellant had already obtained permission to bury the cable from the county.

RULES OF PRACTICE

GENERALLY

Certified mailing is an acceptable form of service under Department practice. 43 CFR 1821.2-4. Sending land classification proposals and decisions to a petitioner-applicant by certified mail meets the requirements in 43 CFR 2450.3 and 2450.4 that those documents be served on the petitioner-applicant.

Elbert C. Sowerwine, Jr., 50 IBLA 15 (Sept. 9, 1980)

Any document which is sent by certified mail to an individual at his record address is considered to have been served at the time of return by the post office of the undelivered certified letter, such constructive service being equivalent in legal effect to actual service of the document.

Lito Sabin, 51 IBLA 226 (Dec. 15, 1980) 87 I.D. 610

"Service." Where BLM sends a copy of its decision to an adversely affected party at his address of record on Sept. 21; where additional information containing the party's more recent address is filed with BLM on Oct. 5; and where BLM receives the mailed copy back as undeliverable on Oct. 16 but does not mail another copy to the more recent address, BLM has not mailed a copy to the party's last address of record, and there is no "service" under 43 CFR 1810.2. Where BLM has never served a copy of its decision on an adversely affected party, the time for this party to appeal has never commenced, and the decision is not effective per 43 CFR 4.21(a).

Where an appeal is taken from a requirement imposed by BLM and the appellant complies with the requirement during the pendency of the appeal, the case will be remanded for further consideration of the application, providing that such action will not prejudice the interests of the United States or any third party.

State of Alaska, 54 IBLA 373 (May 19, 1981)

Service of a BLM decision is accomplished when it is delivered to the addressee's last address of record by certified mail and such delivery is substantiated by postal authorities, regardless of whether it was in fact received by the person to whom it was addressed, and the prescribed period for initiating an appeal from such decision commences on the date of such delivery.

Lillian Barlow, 58 IBLA 385 (Oct. 21, 1981)

Where a party, in the course of various proceedings before the Department, asserts facts that would, if proven, entitle him or her to obtain patent to land owned by the United States, and the litigation proceeds on the assumption that the facts are as stated, appellant will not be heard in a subsequent hearing to deny that those facts existed.

Where a decision of a BLM state office requires a priority applicant for an oil and gas lease being issued through the simultaneous filing system to file supplemental information within a specified period of time, and the information is filed after this period has run, then delay in filing may not be waived pursuant to 43 CFR 1821.2-2(g), because the rights of applicants drawn with a subsidiary priority have intervened.

F. Peter Zoch, 60 IBLA 150 (Nov. 24, 1981)

Where the Bureau of Land Management requests an offeror for an over-the-counter noncompetitive oil and gas lease to execute special stipulations involving protection of cultural and paleontological resources on the leased lands within 30 days, it may properly reject the lease offer when the special stipulations are not executed and submitted within the 30 days. However, where the offeror asserts on appeal that it actually never received the stipulations, its failure to execute the stipulations and return them to BLM may be treated as a curable defect, and priority of filing will be determined as of the date the signed stipulations are received by BLM.

First Mississippi Corp., 62 IBLA 184 (Mar. 9, 1982)

Where a BLM state office decision requires supplemental filings within a specified period of time by a priority applicant for an oil and gas lease to be issued through the simultaneous filing system, in order to avoid subsequent BLM action to reject the lease offer, the rights of applicants drawn with subsidiary priority do not vest unless and until BLM takes action to reject the offer. Where the filings are subsequently received before the rights of applicants drawn with a subsidiary priority have intervened, the delay in filing may be waived pursuant to 43 CFR 1821.2-2(g).

Estate of Isidor Dessar, 63 IBLA 217 (Apr. 13, 1982)

Where the Bureau of Land Management requests an offeror for an over-the-counter noncompetitive oil and gas lease to execute special stipulations within 30 days, it may properly reject the lease offer when the special stipulations are not executed and submitted within the 30 days. However, where the offeror subsequently submits the signed stipulations prior to the filing of a junior offer, the Board will remand the case to BLM so that his offer may be considered with priority as of that time.

James R. Chudnow, 68 IBLA 87 (Oct. 22, 1982)

Any document which is sent by certified mail to an individual at his record address is considered to have been served at the time of return by the Postal Service of the undelivered certified letter, such constructive service being equivalent in legal effect to actual service of the document.

Although the Postal Service is the agent of BLM to deliver written communications to the address of record of an applicant, where the applicant changes his address giving notice only to the Postal Service and not to BLM, the Postal Service then becomes the agent for the applicant who must bear the responsibility and consequence for failure of the Postal Service to properly deliver mail from BLM to the changed address, where the mail was originally properly dispatched to the address of record of the applicant.

Tobby L. Alford, 71 IBLA 29 (Feb. 16, 1983)

Where BLM informs an offeror for an over-the-counter oil and gas lease that it is prepared to issue a lease provided certain stipulations are signed and returned within 30 days of receipt of BLM's decision, the decision is interlocutory and the 30-day period for filing a notice of appeal will not begin until the compliance period has been concluded.

John R. Anderson, 71 IBLA 172 (Mar. 10, 1983)

Where, pursuant to 43 CFR 3112.4-1, BLM sends notice by certified mail to a simultaneous oil and gas lease applicant at her record address that she must execute and return the enclosed lease form with the required stipulations and rental, and the notice is returned to BLM marked "Unclaimed" by the Postal Service, and where nondelivery did not occur as a result of the negligence of the Postal Service, the applicant is considered to have been served at the time of return to BLM by the Postal Service of the undelivered certified letter, such constructive service being equivalent in legal effect to actual service of the notice.

Michele R. Pawurak, 71 IBLA 343 (Mar. 28, 1983)

Where, pursuant to 43 CFR 3112.4-1, BLM sends notice by certified mail to a simultaneous oil and gas lease applicant at his record address that he must execute and return the enclosed lease form with the required stipulations and rental, and the notice is returned to BLM marked "Unclaimed" by the Postal Service, and where nondelivery did not occur as a result of the negligence of the Postal Service, the applicant is considered to have been served at the time of return to BLM by the Postal Service of the undelivered certified letter, such constructive service being equivalent in legal effect to actual service of the notice.

Where a stipulation as to the admissibility of various assay results is made by the Government and a mineral contestee, and the contestee clearly asserts his view as to the scope of the stipulation, it is the obligation of the attorney for the Government, if his interpretation differs, to clearly state his view so as to put the contestee on notice as to this conflict. Where this is not done, the stipulation will be enforced in accordance with the contestee's understanding.

United States v. J. Gary Feezor et al., 74 IBLA 56 (June 29, 1983) 90 I.D. 262

Where, pursuant to 43 CFR 3112.4-1, BLM sends notice by certified mail to a simultaneous oil and gas lease applicant at his record address that he must execute and return the enclosed lease form with the rental, and the delivery stub shows the date the first attempted delivery was made but has no date for the second attempted delivery, and the Postal Service held the BLM notice for the required time, negligence by the Postal Service is not established; appellant was constructively served and thus had notice, and as he failed to pay the rental within the required 30 days, BLM correctly rejected appellant's oil and gas lease application.

William F. Heins III, 74 IBLA 133 (June 30, 1983)

Where BLM rejects an oil and gas lease offer, the 30-day period begins upon delivery of the decision to the offeror at his address of record.

Lloyd B. Baldwin, 75 IBLA 251 (Aug. 25, 1983)

The Bureau of Land Management's transmission of a decision to a person's address of record by certified mail constitutes constructive service even though the attempt by the post office to deliver the document at that address was unsuccessful. APPEALS

Generally

It is a proper exercise of discretionary authority for a Bureau of Land Management office to suspend action on an oil and gas lease offer pending resolution of similar cases on appeal to the Board of Land Appeals and a court proceeding. However, where the court case is remanded to the Department of the Interior for further consideration and the Board has resolved cases with substantive issues similar to those in the case under consideration, it will set aside the Bureau's decision, and dismiss the protest and remand the case for action in accord with those rulings. Where there are no disputed factual issues controlling resolution of the case, the protestant's request for a hearing will be denied as well as his request for further suspension of the case.

Outlining the treatment to be accorded voluminous exhibits, the Board states that in the event counsel for either side considers that information contained in a voluminous exhibit either proves or may be of material assistance in proving a particular point, it is incumbent upon counsel to specifically cite the portions of the voluminous exhibit relied upon by page number, by date, or by other appropriate reference. Absent specific citations to a voluminous exhibit or to an appropriate summary thereof in evidence, the Board will not undertake to determine the content of this type of exhibit in particular areas before reaching its decision.

The Board seriously questions the wisdom of the Government in not arranging for the audit of multi-million dollar claims apparently advanced in good faith by reputable contractors, noting that securing audits will not only facilitate the examination of witnesses with respect to quantum but are also likely to prove to be useful in establishing a basis for agreeing upon stipulations narrowing the issues in quantum areas or affording a basis for arriving at a settlement prior to the hearing, while it is in progress or after it has been concluded.

Kennecott Corp., 66 IBLA 249 (Aug. 17, 1982)

The regulations governing procedures before the Board of Land Appeals provide for the filing of a statement of reasons for appeal by appellant and an answer by an adverse party within certain time limits (subject to extension). Proper practice requires that all issues deemed relevant by the parties be briefed at that time because, as a general rule, the Board does not issue interlocutory decisions on issues which are not dispositive of the appeal.

Renewable Energy, Inc., 67 IBLA 304 (Sept. 30, 1982) 89 I.D. 496

The Board of Land Appeals must defer to the Secretary's decision to approve the granting of a contract, where such approval implicitly ratifies the entire process which led up to issuance of the contract itself, including compliance with the National Environmental Protection Act of 1969, 42 U.S.C. §§ 4321-4361 (1976). Burden of Proof

Where the current fair rental value of a small tract lease has been determined in accordance with accepted appraisal procedures and the lessee contends that the rental is excessive, the burden is upon the lessee to prove by positive, substantial evidence that the appraisal is in error.

Hyatt Lake Homeowners Ass'n, 48 IBLA 159 (June 9, 1980)

The assertion that annual assessment work has not been performed is the assertion of a negative fact. If an examination of the mining claims and the nearby lands does not reveal the accomplishment of the required work, and there is no record of any such work having been performed, then evidence to this effect would be sufficient to establish a prima facie case. It would then devolve upon the claimant to show by a preponderance of the countervailing evidence that he has substantially complied with the statute.

In a Government contest proceeding to determine the validity of a mining claim, the claimant is always the proponent of the rule or order, always the one claiming to have earned the benefit of the mining laws through his compliance therewith. Regardless of whether the issue on which the validity of the claim rests is discovery, mode of location, or performance of assessment work, the relative position and obligation of the contestant and the contestee remain the same.

United States v. C. J. Anderson, C. Joseph Anderson, 57 IBLA 256 (Aug. 28, 1981)

The Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 requires the Secretary of the Interior to manage public lands under principles of "multiple use" and "sustained yield," and the statutory definition of these concepts recognizes the need for latitude and discretion in their implementation. As the Secretary's delegate, BLM has the responsibility of administering such policies and programs, and BLM must be accorded correlative powers of reasoned discretion in discharging these duties. Therefore, so long as the BLM policy or implementing action is based on a consideration of all relevant factors and is supported by the record, the Board will not disturb it absent a clear showing that it is contrary to statute or regulation or otherwise erroneous.

A claim for the cost of preparing a technical inventory of field tapes and other data furnished by the Government is denied where the appellant alleges that some of the field tapes were missing and some of the data was received in a deplorable condition, but the Board finds that the concurrence of a Government representative in the taking of the inventory did not provide a predicate for the claim asserted where the preparation of the inventory was considered to be simply an exercise of a management prerogative, irrespective of whether such action was to be viewed as a means of facilitating contract performance or satisfying a contract requirement for the furnishing of demultiplexing documentation.

In support of its denial the Board notes that the lack of persuasive evidence of any contemporaneous objection to performing the work in question and a delay of over 31 months in presenting the claim now asserted raise presumptions against its validity.

A claim for additional rock excavation is denied where the Board finds (i) that the contract provided for volume of excavation to be measured by the average end area method; (ii) that all excavation including rock boulders was so measured; and (iii) that the appellant failed to show by a preponderance of the evidence that there were any rock boulders placed in embankments for which it has not been paid.

Where BLM's decision rests on an assumption which is not supported by facts of record, it must be set aside for the record to be supplemented.

State of Alaska, 78 IBLA 390 (Jan. 31, 1984)

Pursuant to the provision of sec. 203 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1713 (1976), the Secretary is directed to condition any patent issued thereunder with such terms or reservations as are necessary to ensure proper land use and protect the public interest. A party challenging any such condition must show that it does not reasonably ensure proper land use or protect the public interest.

When a party appeals a BLM decision, it is the obligation of the appellant to show that the determination is erroneous. Unless a statement of reasons shows adequate reasons for appeal and the allegations are supported with evidence showing error, the appeal cannot be afforded favorable consideration.

Howard J. Hunt, Howard H. Hunt, 80 IBLA 396 (May 14, 1984)

Implementation of the Taylor Grazing Act of 1934, as amended, is committed to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. An adjudication of grazing privileges will not be set aside on appeal if it is reasonable and substantially complies with the provisions of the Federal range code for grazing, 43 CFR Part 4100.

Clyde L. Darius, Douglas L. Bown v. Bureau of Land Management, 83 IBLA 29 (Sept. 24, 1984)

The burden to prove a BLM decision erroneous is upon the appellant, where her appeal is based upon allegations that the first-drawn lease applicant is disqualified to hold a Federal lease.

Joan Lieberman, 84 IBLA 85 (Dec. 6, 1984)

Dismissal

The Board of Land Appeals will reverse a decision of the Geological Survey dismissing an appeal for failure to timely file an appeal within the time required by 30 CFR Part 290, from letter decisions assessing compensatory royalty in which no right of appeal was indicated, where appellant responded to the letter decisions and filed a timely notice of appeal to a subsequent decision issued by Geological Survey in which appellant was notified of its right to appeal.

Inexco Oil Co., 45 IBLA 377 (Feb. 13, 1980)

The Board of Land Appeals is without jurisdiction to review and decide the validity or legality of an order issued personally by the Secretary of the Interior in his capacity as chief executive officer of the Department, and an appeal which is limited to those issues must be dismissed.

Where oil and gas lease offers have been rejected because of a moratorium on the leasing of the subject lands which was imposed by the direct order of the Secretary of the Interior, and the rejected applicant has filed suit, now pending, for judicial review of the legality of the Secretary's order, and also makes a contemporaneous appeal to the Board of Land Appeals, the Board will not await the outcome of the judicial proceedings, but will summarily dismiss the appeal.

Texas Oil & Gas Corp., 46 IBLA 50 (Feb. 20, 1980)

Timely filing of a notice of appeal with the Board of Land Appeals is jurisdictional. If appeal from a decision of a Bureau of Land Management official is untimely, the Board does not have jurisdiction to consider it and that official must close the case pursuant to 43 CFR 4.411(b). When an appeal is properly filed, the BLM official loses jurisdiction over the case and has no further authority to take any action on the subject matter of the appeal until jurisdiction over it is restored by Board action disposing of the appeal. Where BLM closes a case because appeal was untimely when in fact it was timely, the Board's jurisdiction will have been triggered at the time of filing of the notice of appeal. BLM's action in closing the case is a nullity and does not affect the appellant's rights before the Board.

State of Alaska v. Earl G. Patterson, 46 IBLA 56 (Feb. 22, 1980)

An appeal to the Director, Geological Survey, is properly dismissed where the appellant failed to file a timely notice of appeal in the proper office within 30 days from service of the decision appealed from in order to comply with the requirements of the applicable regulations in 30 CFR 290.

For the purposes of the proviso to 43 CFR 4.410, which grants any party to a case a right of appeal to the Board of Land Appeals "except * * * where a decision has been approved by the Secretary," the Under Secretary is vested with the authority of the Secretary to make decisions final for the Department and thus not subject to review by the Board.

DNA--People's Legal Services, 49 IBLA 307 (Aug. 20, 1980)

An appeal from a decision declaring mining claims abandoned and void because of failure to meet the recordation requirements of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 may be dismissed where the appellant failed to file her statement of reasons or request for a further extension of time to file a statement within time granted by the Board and she does not satisfactorily show why a request was not timely filed, and there is no likelihood she could prevail on the merits of the case in any eventuality.

Ray Kay, Tackle Productions, Inc., 63 IBLA 357 (Apr. 29, 1982)

Where, during the pendency of an appeal involving the protest of the designation of land units as WSA's, the Board issues a decision in another case involving the same units in which it holds that BLM's designation of these units as WSA's is error, and thereby, achieves the result sought by the appellant whose appeal is pending, the issue is moot and the appeal is dismissed.

Arizona State Ass'n of 4-Wheel Drive Clubs, 65 IBLA 126 (June 28, 1982)

The Board denies a Government motion to dismiss an appeal predicated upon the ground, inter alia, that the Disputes Concerning Labor Standards clause gives the Department of Labor the authority to decide disputed questions arising out of the Davis-Bacon Act, where the record indicates that almost two-thirds of the amount withheld from a prime contractor by reason of Davis-Bacon Act violations by its subcontractor appears to represent amounts owed by the subcontractor to the Federal or to a state government and thus present questions for resolution by the Board incident to its authority to adjudicate disputes between the parties to the contract.

A Government motion to dismiss an appeal on the grounds that the contracting officer had neither issued nor been requested to issue a final decision is denied, where the Board finds (i) that the appellant was warranted in treating a contracting officer's disclaimer of any responsibility for adjudicating a dispute as a final decision, and (ii) that no useful purpose would be served by remanding a case to the contracting officer for a decision when the Government's announced position is that the contracting officer has no authority to render a decision relating to wage determinations under the Davis-Bacon Act.

Mobil Oil Corp., 65 IBLA 295 (July 13, 1982)

A Government motion to dismiss an appeal as untimely filed under the Contract Disputes Act of 1978 is denied where the Board finds that the Act does not deprive the contracting officer of authority he had prior to the passage of the Act to reconsider a final decision after it is issued and prior to the expiration of the appeal period and that the available evidence indicates that the actions of the contracting officer may have contributed to the contractor's failure to initiate an appeal to the Board at an earlier time.

Diane Zarr v. Acting Deputy Director, Office of Indian Education Programs, 11 IBIA 174 (Apr. 21, 1983) 90 I.D. 172

Appeals for which no statements of reasons are submitted will be dismissed in the exercise of the Board's discretion in the absence of any explanation for the failure to file or any indication of appellants' continuing intention to prosecute their appeals.

Where appellant's statement of reasons for appeal from a decision to include certain lands in a wilderness study area fails to assert any right, claim, title or interest in the subject lands, nor any use of them which will be adversely affected, appellant will be considered to lack standing to appeal, and the appeal will be dismissed.

The Board of Land Appeals is the arbiter of its jurisdiction, and neither employees of BLM nor attorneys of the Solicitor's office may create or deny the right of appeal to the Board. Effect of Timely appeal to the Board of Land Appeals suspends the effect of a Bureau of Land Management decision pending outcome of the appeal. Due process does not require notice and a prior right to be heard in every case where an individual may be deprived of property so long as the individual is given notice and an opportunity to be heard before the deprivation becomes final.

State of Alaska, 46 IBLA 12 (Feb. 20, 1980)

Timely filing of a notice of appeal with the Board of Land Appeals is jurisdictional. If appeal from a decision of a Bureau of Land Management official is untimely, the Board does not have jurisdiction to consider it and that official must close the case pursuant to 43 CFR 4.411(b). When an appeal is properly filed, the BLM official loses jurisdiction over the case and has no further authority to take any action on the subject matter of the appeal until jurisdiction over it is restored by Board action disposing of the appeal. Where BLM closes a case because appeal was untimely when in fact it was timely, the Board's jurisdiction will have been triggered at the time of filing of the notice of appeal. BLM's action in closing the case is

Where, in a drawing of simultaneously filed oil and gas lease offers, the first-drawn applicant fails to submit the advance rental within 15 days after notice, as prescribed by 43 CFR 3112.4-1, disqualification is automatic, notwithstanding the fact that at the time of the notice the Secretary had suspended the Bureau of Land Management's authority to issue noncompetitive oil and gas leases until further notice. However, if the first-drawn applicant files a notice of appeal within that time period, the time period is suspended and following affirmation of Bureau of Land Management's decision, the first-drawn applicant is properly given the entire time period from receipt of the Board's decision within which to submit the rental.

Robert A. Skyrock, Jas. O. Greene, Jr., 55 IBLA 74 (June 1, 1981)

Due process does not require notice and a right to be heard in every case where a person is deprived of an asserted property right so long as the individual is given notice and an opportunity to be heard before the initial Bureau of Land Management decision, adverse to his, becomes final. Appeal to this Board satisfies the due process requirements.

A protest to issuance of an oil and gas lease filed after the lease has issued is not timely. Where, however, the "protest" is filed by an individual with subsidiary priority such protest shall be deemed to be an appeal from the rejection of the protestant's application or offer to lease.

The filing of an appeal from rejection of a lease offer or application preserves the viability of the offer or application during the pendancy of the appeal. State of Alaska, 48 IBLA 229 (June 17, 1980)

In order to constitute a notice of appeal a document must state in an objectively ascertainable manner a present intent to appeal a final decision of the Bureau of Land Management. A petition for reconsideration of a decision with reasons directed to the office which issued the decision that expresses a conditional intent to file an appeal in the future if the relief requested by petitioner is not granted does not constitute notice of appeal. Where the decision is reconsidered in response to the petition and the petitioner is notified that the decision is reaffirmed with right of appeal, the decision will become final in the absence of a timely appeal.

Ilean Landis, 49 IBLA 59 (July 21, 1980)

Where following dismissal of a protest, a protestant files a supplemental protest and request for reconsideration, but asks that should such pleading be rejected it be considered in the alternative as a notice of appeal, protestant has complied with the provisions of 43 CFR 4.411 if such pleading is filed with BLM within 30 days after being served with BLM's dismissal of the protest.

Henry A. Alker, 49 IBLA 118 (July 28, 1980)

Where a person moves from his record address and does not apprise BLM of a forwarding address, and a copy of a BLM decision affecting him is mailed to this last address of record and returned by the postal service as undeliverable, the decision is considered to have been "served" on him as of the date it is returned to BLM. 43 CFR 4.401(c). Accordingly, the deadline for filing a notice of appeal is 30 days after the date the decision is returned to BLM, and an appeal filed after that date is properly dismissed as untimely.

Reg Whitson, 55 IBLA 5 (May 26, 1981)

Where several BLM decisions declaring appellant's mining claims abandoned and void each stated "In reply refer to 3833 (N-952)," and appellant's notice of appeal specifically applied to BLM decisions bearing that reference number, the notice of appeal was effective, and BLM incorrectly and prematurely closed the file of one claim that BLM decided was not covered by the notice of appeal.

Where BLM unconditionally rejects an oil and gas lease offer but provides a period of 30 days in which to cure a deficiency the decision is not interlocutory and the 30-day period for filing a notice of appeal begins upon receipt of the decision.

Carl Gerard, 70 IBLA 343 (Feb. 2, 1983)

Where BLM affords an offeror a period of 30 days to execute stipulations as a condition to issuance of an oil and gas lease and states that failure to comply will result in rejection of the offer to lease, the decision is interlocutory and there is no right of appeal. The offeror may elect to comply, to comply under protest, or to let the 30-day period run without complying and appeal the resulting BLM decision rejecting the offer. In the latter case the offeror has waived the right to comply and, if the appeal is unsuccessful, the rejection is final and no additional opportunity to execute the stipulations will be granted.

Fortune Oil Co., 71 IBLA 153 (Mar. 9, 1983)
90 I.D. 84

Where BLM informs an offeror for an over-the-counter oil and gas lease that it is prepared to issue a lease provided certain stipulations are signed and returned within 30 days of receipt of BLM's decision, the decision is interlocutory and the 30-day period for filing a notice of appeal will not begin until the compliance period has been concluded.

Reconsideration

The Government's motion for reconsideration, which contends that the current version of the Limitation of Cost clause does not entitle a contractor to additional funding for a change unless the contracting officer specifically increases the estimated cost, provides no basis for overturning the Board's principal decision allowing excess costs attributable to a constructive change, where the contracting officer was given advance notice that the estimated costs would be exceeded and took no action to advise the contractor that no funding would be provided or to stop the project officer from asking for continued performance of the changed work.

Appeal of Recon Systems, Inc., IBCA-1214-9-78 (Jan. 17, 1980) 87 I.D. 7

Where, upon the second review of the record pursuant to appellant's motion for reconsideration, the Board finds that the main premise upon which appellant's original claim for relief was based is neither supported by the evidence of record nor by any apparent legal authority, the Board will deny the motion for reconsideration without reaching the ancillary issue raised by such motion.

Appeal of Tiffany Construction Co., IBCA-1162-8-77 (Aug. 22, 1980)

Upon a motion for reconsideration, the Board finds that the contentions of appellant challenging the principal decision are based on misstatements or misinterpretations of the principal decision or ask that the Board consider the merits of a claim deemed to have been properly dismissed for lack of proof of coercion or duress.

Appeal of Systems Technology Associates, Inc., IBCA-1108-4-76 (Apr. 30, 1981) 88 I.D. 521

The Government's motion for reconsideration which requests remand of an appeal, after a decision by the Board that appellant's final report was improperly rejected using criteria not specified or reasonably inferred by the contract, in order that the contracting officer can render a new decision on acceptability of the final report under the terms of the contract is denied because no proper basis is offered for the request.

Appeal of A. Helene Warren, IBCA-1422-1-81 (Nov. 9, 1981)

A motion for reconsideration is denied where appellant's assertions of error in the principal decision are not supported by arguments or by references to the record, and appellant admittedly seeks a rehearing in order to present the evidence in a more coherent sequence and logical order.

Appeals of Porter Mechanical Contractors, Inc. (On Reconsideration), IBCA-1357-5-80 & IBCA-1366-6-80 (June 28, 1982) 89 I.D. 359

Where an appeal is dismissed for failure to timely file a statement of reasons in support thereof, and a petition for reconsideration is filed which essentially argues that the failure to timely file the statement of reasons with the Board was due to ignorance, such a petition for reconsideration has not shown extraordinary circumstances as required by 43 CFR 4.21(e) and is properly denied.

Where, during the adjudication of a petition for reconsideration of a dismissal of an appeal for failure to timely file a statement of reasons, a review of the case file discloses the existence of a document, filed after issuance of the adverse decision from which an appeal was taken, which delineates the points in controversy, such a document may be deemed a statement of reasons and the decision dismissing the appeal will be vacated.

Edmond H. Burns & Mark Hoesons v. Anadarko Area Director, Bureau of Indian Affairs (On Reconsideration), 11 IBIA 133 (Mar. 22, 1983)

A contractor's motion for reconsideration and to supplement the record by contractor's testimony after an adverse decision by the Board of the contractor's appeal, decided on the record without an oral hearing, is denied where the contractor failed to request a hearing, and its motion not only failed to satisfy the newly discovered evidence rule but also failed to disclose the testimony proffered.

Appeal of Pebble Haulers, Inc., IBCA-1524-10-81 (Sept. 28, 1983)

Under 43 CFR 4.21(c), a request for reconsideration of a decision of the Board of Land Appeals must be filed promptly and may be granted only in extraordinary circumstances. A petition for reconsideration will be denied as untimely when it is filed more than 6 months after issuance of the decision, the petition raises no new matter, and the only apparent justification for such late filing is a reference to a recent court decision which has no controlling effect on the disposition of the appeal.

Pathfinder Mines Corp. (On Reconsideration), 76 IBLA 276 (Oct. 18, 1983)

Under 43 CFR 4.21(c), a request for reconsideration of a decision of the Board of Land Appeals must be filed promptly and may be granted only in extraordinary circumstances. A petition for reconsideration will be denied as untimely when it is filed more than 18 months after issuance of the decision, the petition raises no new issues or matters, and the only apparent justification for such late filing is a reference to a recent communication from the National Park Service which has no controlling effect on disposition of the appeal.

Take Mining (On Reconsideration), 77 IBLA 30 (Oct. 31, 1983)

Under 43 CFR 4.314 and 4.315, a decision issued by the Board of Indian Appeals is final for the Department without further action. The filing of a petition for reconsideration is not required for finality.

Walch Logging Co., Inc., Dant & Russell, Inc., v. Assistant Area Director (Economic Development), Portland Area Office, Bureau of Indian Affairs, 12 IBIA 126 (Dec. 22, 1983)

In an earlier decision in the context of a contract ambiguity, the Board ruled in the contractor's favor on the costs of supplying certain building components and against the contractor on the costs of installing them. On reconsideration, the contractor convinced the Board that the analogy relied upon in denying the appeal for installation costs was fallacious, but, in reviewing all aspects of the decision on reconsideration, the Board discovered that its rationale for granting ANY relief on the issue of supplying and installing the components was also erroneous, and therefore affirmed its denial of installation costs and reversed its grant of supply

Appeal of C. G. Horton Co. (On Reconsideration), IBCA-1647-1-83 (Apr. 23, 1984)

Where, subsequent to a decision issued by the Board, which decision is premised on certain factual assumptions, a party establishes on the basis of the record before the Board that the facts may not be as assumed, and, as a result, it becomes impossible for the Board to fairly determine the true underlying facts essential to adjudication, the Board decision will be vacated and the case will be remanded to the Hearings Division for a hearing to clarify the matter.

United States v. J. Gary Foezor et al. (On Reconsideration), 81 IBLA 94 (May 29, 1984)

Where the Interior Board of Land Appeals sets aside a BLM decision because on appeal the appellant has pointed out ambiguities and inconsistencies in the record and BLM does not come forward to clarify them, the Board ordinarily will not entertain a postdecision brief seeking reconsideration and setting forth such clarification.

Sierra Club, The Mono Lake Committee (On Reconsideration), 84 IBLA 175 (Dec. 19, 1984)

Service on Adverse Party

BLM may not summarily dismiss a private contest complaint against a homestead entry for failure to file with BLM proof of service on the contestee within 30 days of service, as required by 43 CFR 4.450-3, where the evidence indicates that the contestant actually served the complaint and the contestant files proof of such service on appeal.

Jessie L. Winegeart v. Glenn W. Price, 74 IBLA 373 (July 29, 1983) 90 I.D. 338

Failure to serve a copy of the notice of appeal on an adverse party within the time required subjects an appeal to summary dismissal pursuant to 43 CFR 4.413. A motion to dismiss an appeal because of a failure to comply with the service requirement will be denied where the moving party fails to show any prejudice from the failure to serve and the record indicates that the moving party had actual notice of the appeal.

Defenders of Wildlife, 79 IBLA 62 (Feb. 13, 1984)

Where the record in a case establishes that the person authorized by a Native group to act as its agent had actual notice of a certificate of ineligibility for such group, and that the notice of appeal was not transmitted within 30 days of such notice, the notice of appeal must be dismissed. The timely filing of a notice of appeal is jurisdictional, and the Board has no authority to waive a jurisdictional requirement.

Where a Native corporation has pending an application to acquire land, which land was awarded to an Alaska Native by BLM pursuant to a Native allotment application, the Native corporation is a party adversely affected by the decision of BLM and therefore has a right to appeal pursuant to 43 CFR 4.410, from the BLM decision holding the Native allotment application for allowance and will be afforded the opportunity to contest the Native allotment application.

Ouzinkie Native Corp. v. Edward Ophoim, Sr., 45 IBLA 198 (Jan. 30, 1980)

For the purposes of the proviso to 43 CFR 4.410, which grants any party to a case a right of appeal to the Board of Land Appeals "except * * * where a decision has been approved by the Secretary," the Under Secretary is vested with the authority of the Secretary to make decisions final for the Department and thus not subject to review by the Board.

DNA--People's Legal Services, 49 IBLA 307 (Aug. 20, 1980)

A Government motion to dismiss an appeal is granted where no express contract between the parties exists, there is no evidence from which an implied in fact contract could be inferred, and the Board is without jurisdiction over contracts implied in law, assuming appellant is seeking full relief.

Appeal of Dean Prosser and Crew, IBCA-1471-6-81 (Aug. 28, 1981) 88 I.D. 809

Neither the State of Alaska nor an instrumentality thereof has standing to appeal a decision which recognizes that full title to a parcel of land is in the State, absent a showing of injury in fact from such a decision.

Roland Redfield v. Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary--Indian Affairs (Operations), 9 IBIA 174 (Feb. 16, 1982) 89 I.D. 67

Where appellant states that he may not be adversely affected by a decision of the Bureau of Land Management and fails to point out affirmatively in his statement of reasons in what respect the decision is in error, he does not meet the requirements of the Department's rules of practice and the appeal must be dismissed.

Hal V. Carlson, Jr., 62 IBLA 305 (Mar. 18, 1982)

An assignee of an oil and gas lease offeror drawn with second or third priority has standing to protest the issuance of a lease to first-priority offeror, as well as standing to appeal from a rejection of such protest.

Geosearch, Inc., 64 IBLA 149 (May 24, 1982)

Where the Bureau of Land Management authorized officer issues a decision determining the grazing privileges of two conflicting applicants which is adverse to one of the applicants, and that applicant appeals to an Administrative Law Judge and receives a favorable decision, the failure of the other applicant to participate in the proceedings before the Administrative Law Judge does not foreclose that applicant from appealing that decision to the Board of Land Appeals, as that applicant is a party to a case adversely affected by a decision of an Administrative Law Judge within the meaning of 43 CFR 4.410.

Bureau of Land Management v. Alfredo R. Maez, 67 IBLA 89 (Sept. 13, 1982)

The provisions of 30 U.S.C. §§ 29 and 30 (1976) relating to "adverse claims" refers only to adverse mineral claims, and nothing in these sections purports to limit the rights of third parties to appeal from a denial of a protest of a patent application where they can show a cognizable interest which has been adversely affected.

Where an individual or organization files a protest to a mineral patent application, which protest is denied, and timely appeals from that denial, such individual or organization is "a party to the case" within the meaning of 43 CFR 4.410. In order to maintain the appeal, however, such a party must also show an interest which has been adversely affected by the decision appealed.

Where an individual or organization fails to protest action proposed to be taken by BLM, such an entity has no standing to appeal the denial of a protest filed by some other individual or organization.

Where appellant's statement of reasons for appeal from a decision to include certain lands in a wilderness study area fails to assert any right, claim, title or interest in the subject lands, nor any use of them which will be adversely affected, appellant will be considered to lack standing to appeal, and the appeal will be dismissed.

Phelps Dodge Corp. et al., 72 IBLA 226 (Apr. 26, 1983)

Where a protest is filed to a competitive phosphate lease offering, which protest is denied, and a timely appeal is filed by the protestant, the protestant is "a party to the case" within the meaning of 43 CFR 4.410. In order to maintain the appeal, however, such a party must also show an interest which has been adversely affected by the decision appealed.

John D. Archer, 74 IBLA 323 (July 28, 1983)

Standing to appeal is limited to a party to a case adversely affected by a decision of the Bureau of Land Management. An appeal may be dismissed without prejudice as premature where it is filed prior to an adverse adjudication of appellant's rights by BLM.

Cities of Colorado Springs & Aurora, 77 IBLA 395 (Dec. 9, 1983)

Where, in its statement of reasons for appeal, appellant fails to alleye a cognizable interest which has been adversely affected, appellant will be considered to lack standing, and the appeal will be dismissed.

Oregon Natural Resources Council, 78 IBLA 124 (Dec. 27, 1983)

A decision advising applicant of a perceived defect in his application and allowing 30 days to cure the deficiency is interlocutory in nature and, as a general rule, applicant lacks standing to appeal such a decision in the absence of a rejection of his application.

Richard H. Greene, 79 IBLA 234 (Feb. 29, 1984)

Unless a party asserts an "adversely affected" interest, it does not have standing to appeal under 43 CFR 4.410 and its appeal will be dismissed.

Lee Brothers Grading Co., 79 IBLA 330 (Mar. 21, 1984)

An organization appealing a Bureau of Land Management decision will be considered a "party to a case" having standing to appeal an adverse decision of an officer of the Bureau of Land Management where the organization uses the lands in question and actively and extensively participates in the formulation of land use plans for the lands in question.

Where a national conservation organization challenges a Bureau of Land Management determination to proceed with a private exchange, that organization satisfies the requirements of 43 CFR 4.410 by establishing that it is a "party to a case" and that it is adversely affected because its membership uses the public land in question.

National Wildlife Federation, 82 IBLA 303 (Sept. 5, 1984)

A Government motion to dismiss an appeal is denied where the Board determines that it has jurisdiction over an appeal being actively prosecuted by a subcontractor where it finds the prime contractor's sponsorship of the subcontractor's claim is established by the following: (1) The decision from which the appeal was taken was addressed to the prime contractor; (2) the notice of appeal was signed by a representative of the contractor; and (3) the contractor is claiming overhead and profit on the subcontractor's claim.

Appeal of Chiyashi-Gumi, Ltd., IBCA-1785-3-84 (Sept. 25, 1984) 91 I.D. 311

A person who is a party to a case and who has a cognizable interest which has been adversely affected will be considered to have standing to appeal pursuant to 43 CFR 4.410(a). Where the appellant's interest is only that of a deeply concerned citizen, the appeal must be dismissed for lack of standing.

Ipexco Oil Co., 45 IBLA 377 (Feb. 13, 1980)

Timely filing of a notice of appeal with the Board of Land Appeals is jurisdictional. If appeal from a decision of a Bureau of Land Management official is untimely, the Board does not have jurisdiction to consider it and that official must close the case pursuant to 43 CFR 4.411(b). When an appeal is properly filed, the BLM official loses jurisdiction over the case and has no further authority to take any action on the subject matter of the appeal until jurisdiction over it is restored by Board action disposing of the appeal. Where BLM closes a case because appeal was untimely when in fact it was timely, the Board's jurisdiction will have been triggered at the time of filing of the notice of appeal. BLM's action in closing the case is a nullity and does not affect the appellant's rights before the Board.

There is a legal presumption of regularity which supports the official acts of public officers and the proper discharge of their official duties. Frederick H. Larson v. State of Utah, 50 IBLA 382 (Oct. 22, 1980)

Where a person moves from his record address and does not apprise BLM of a forwarding address, and a copy of a BLM decision affecting him is mailed to this last address of record and returned by the postal service as undeliverable, the decision is considered to have been "served" on him as of the date it is returned to BLM. 43 CFR 4.401(c). Accordingly, the deadline for filing a notice of appeal is 30 days after the date the decision is returned to BLM, and an appeal filed after that date is properly dismissed as untimely.

Where, however, the lessee does not challenge the factual predicates of the Survey demand within a reasonable time after he has been informed of them, the right to subsequently contravene the factual determinations of Survey on these points is waived.

The conclusion of proceedings under the Freedom of Information Act, as amended, 5 U.S.C. § 552 (1982), to acquire information related to the rationale for the production royalty set in a competitive coal lease does not constitute a final decision by BLM subject to an appeal to the Board, challenging the royalty. The appellant only had a right to protest the royalty set in the notice of the lease sale and to appeal from any denial of that protest.

Coastal States Energy Co., 80 IBLA 274 (May 4, 1984)

With respect to a known party claiming a property interest adversely affected by a decision to issue conveyance under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, both the regulations at 43 CFR 2650.7 and the requirements of due process mandate an effort to serve notice of the decision, coupled with a 30-day appeal period from date of service. EVIDENCE--Continued

In determining the validity of a mining claim in a Government contest, the entire evidentiary record must be considered. If the Government fails to make a sufficient prima facie case against a mining claim, the claimant may move to have the contest dismissed and rest his case. However, when the claimant goes forward with his evidence, the Administrative Law Judge must consider the evidence presented and weigh it in accordance with its probative value. In choosing to rebut the case, the claimant bears the burden of doing so by a preponderance of the evidence and bears the risk of nonpersuasion if he fails.

United States v. Clare Williamson and Lapine Pumice Co., 45 IBLA 264 (Feb. 4, 1980) 87 I.D. 34

Where, in the hearing of a mining claim contest in which the presence of a mineral deposit within the limits of a claim is at issue and the claim is accessible, it is established that the Government mineral examiner made no professional examination of certain of the contested claims, the testimony of the Government mineral examiner, without more, is insufficient to establish a prima facie case of invalidity.

United States v. Gerald Hess, 46 IBLA 1 (Feb. 13, 1980)

To warrant a further hearing in a mining claim contest, based upon asserted lack of discovery, an appellant must make an evidentiary tender of proof of discovery. Evidence of a past discovery is not sufficient by itself to indicate that a different result might now be obtained.

United States v. Mary E. Gray, 50 IBLA 209 (Sept. 30, 1980)

The Board refuses to draw inferences adverse to the Government by reason of its failure to have its project engineer testify in important areas and by reason of its failure to call as witnesses two of its employees who attended the hearing where the Board finds that the action of the Government is consistent with the principal defenses made to the differing site conditions claims asserted and where under long-established Board practice, the appellant could have called any or all of the Government's employees concerned as witnesses without making them appellant's witnesses for the purposes of impeachment.

In a case involving the assertion of a differing site conditions claim under a contract for the construction of concrete lined tunnels for the Navajo Indian Irrigation Project, the Board follows the Court of Claims in holding that it is not necessary for the "indications" in the contract to be explicit or specific, it being sufficient for there to be an indication on the face of the contract documents causing a bidder reasonably to expect that there were no "subsurface or latent" physical conditions at the site differing materially from those indicated in the contract.

Outlining the treatment to be accorded voluminous exhibits, the Board states that in the event counsel for either side considers that information contained in a voluminous exhibit either proves or may be of material assistance in proving a particular point, it is incumbent upon counsel to specifically cite the portions of the voluminous exhibit relied upon by page number, by date, or by other appropriate reference. Absent specific citations to a voluminous exhibit or to an appropriate summary thereof in evidence, the Board will not undertake to determine the content of this type of exhibit in particular areas before reaching its decision.

The Board sustains the action of the hearing member in refusing to receive in evidence documents not identified by a witness through whose testimony their admission is being sought.

The Board seriously questions the wisdom of the Government in not arranging for the audit of multi-million dollar claims apparently advanced in good faith by reputable contractors, noting that securing audits will not only facilitate the examination of witnesses with respect to quantum but are also likely to prove to be useful in establishing a basis for agreeing upon stipulations narrowing the issues in quantum areas or affording a basis for arriving at a settlement prior to the hearing, while it is in progress or after it has been concluded.

Appeal of Fluor Utah, Inc., IBCA-1068-4-75 (Jan. 15, 1981) 88 I.D. 41

United States v. William J. Smith, Sr., et al., 54 IBLA 12 (Apr. 6, 1981)

United States v. Armin Speckert, 55 IBLA 340 (June 26, 1981)

To warrant a further hearing in a mining claim contest based upon asserted lack of discovery, an appellant must make an evidentiary tender of proof of discovery. Evidence of a past discovery is not sufficient by itself to warrant a further hearing.

United States v. John Burt et al., 59 IBLA 326 (Nov. 5, 1981)

To warrant a further hearing in a mining claim contest based upon an asserted lack of discovery, an appellant must make an evidentiary tender of proof of discovery. Vague and unsupported assertions of mineralization do not establish a basis for reopening the hearing. Because under 30 U.S.C. § 23 (1976) a mining claimant must make a discovery of a valuable mineral deposit prior to the location of the claim, it is presumed that when the validity of his claim is challenged, the mining claimant need only come forward with the evidence of discovery which he has already made.

United States v. Gary J. Murdock, 65 IBLA 239 (July 9, 1982)

The legal presumption that administrative officials have properly discharged their duties and not lost or misplaced legally significant documents filed with them is rebuttable by probative evidence to the contrary. However, affidavits which serve only to declare the affiants' assumption, surmise, or deduction that such documents must have been included in an envelope received by BLM are inadequate to overcome the presumption where there is no direct evidence to establish that the documents were actually transmitted by the sender and BLM personnel disclaim receiving them.

Where, in the course of an appeal from the rejection of an oil and gas lease application for other reasons, the pleadings and evidence raise for the first time the question of the existence of an outstanding undisclosed interest in the application, the Board will not decide that issue, but in no event may a lease be granted the appellant unless and until the question is ultimately resolved in appellant's favor.

Lynda Bailey Doyle, 65 IBLA 340 (July 16, 1982)

An appellant will be held to have failed to sustain its burden of proof and the appeal will be denied where appellant's case is submitted on the record without a hearing and the record consists only of contract documents, correspondence, and pleadings alleging that the Contracting Officer's decision is erroneous. Disputed allegations do not constitute evidence and cannot be accepted as proof of facts.

Appeal of E. H. White & Co., IBCA-1216-9-78 (July 19, 1982)

The legal presumption that administrative officials have properly discharged their duties and not lost or misplaced legally significant documents filed with them is rebuttable by probative evidence to the contrary. However, the presumption is not overcome merely by the submission of an affidavit that the document was mailed. Rather, BLM's denial of its receipt can be rebutted only by substantial countervailing evidence, as an instrument is not "filed" by depositing it in the mail, but only when it is delivered to and received by the proper BLM office.

Glenn W. Gallagher, 66 IBLA 49 (July 27, 1982)

Appeal of Dexter Cedar, IBCA-1535-11-81 (Sept. 30, 1982)

A certificate which purports to be a certificate of location might be a certificate of amendment or relocation. If a claimant desires to demonstrate otherwise, it is the claimant's burden to come forward with proof that the document is something other than that which it purports to be.

David A. Provinse, 78 IBLA 85 (Dec. 16, 1983)

Where an issue in an appeal involving a simultaneous oil and gas lease application is the existence or nonexistence of materials defining the relationship between the priority applicant and its filing service, the applicant, as the party with peculiar means of knowledge enabling it to prove the nonexistence of such materials, has the burden of doing so. A prima facie case is made where sufficient evidence is presented to establish the essential facts. Prima facie evidence is that evidence that will justify a finding in favor of the one presenting the evidence. It is not necessary to present evidence that is compelling, and the determination must be made on a case-by-case basis. An important factor in making a determination regarding the amount of evidence required for a prima facie case is the availability of the evidence and the difficulty which may reasonably be encountered in obtaining the evidence.

S & M Coal Co. & Jewell Smokeless Coal Co. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 79 IBLA 350 91 I.D. 159 (Mar. 22, 1984)

Where a simultaneous oil and gas lease applicant, whose application has been rejected because it covers land within a known geologic structure, submits probative evidence contravening the determination that the land is presumptively productive of oil and gas, which is not fully rebutted, but where, nonetheless, questions of fact remain unresolved by the record, a hearing is appropriate to establish a sufficient record to permit decision.

Lloyd Chemical Sales, Inc., 82 IBLA 182 (Aug. 13, 1984)

In determining the validity of a mining claim in a Government contest, the entire evidentiary record must be considered; therefore, if evidence presented by the contestees shows that there has not been a discovery, it may be used in reaching a decision that the claim is invalid because of a lack of discovery, regardless of any defects in the Government's prima facie case.

United States v. Oscar E. & Gary K. Anderson, 83 IBLA 170 (Oct. 15, 1984)

The failure of an expert witness, such as a Government mineral examiner, to remain current with all the literature concerning practices in his field may affect the weight but not the admissibility of his testimony. The trier of fact who presides at a hearing has an opportunity to observe witnesses and is in the best position to judge the weight to be accorded the testimony of the expert.

United States v. Marvin C. Ramsey et al., 84 IBLA 66 (Nov. 30, 1984)

GOVERNMENT CONTESTS

Where a mining claim contestee fails to appear at a contest hearing and merely sends a message stating that he will not appear, without stating the reasons for his absence, a subsequent motion to reschedule the hearing and reopen the record is properly denied, as the regulations provide that a postponement may be granted only pursuant to a request made no later than the hearing date and stating in detail the reasons why a postponement is necessary.

The asserted inability of a contestee to drive an automobile due to his taking medication is not an extreme emergency which justifies beyond question the granting of a postponement of the hearing where it is not impossible to get to a hearing site by public transportation. Nor is restricted mobility due to arthritis justification for a postponement where the record shows that it is an ongoing condition which could have been anticipated, and that transportation to the hearing site could have been arranged by exercise of proper diligence.

Where a party fails to appear or participate in a hearing as scheduled even though no order postponing the hearing has been issued, the merits of the case may be reached and decided on the basis of the record as completed at the hearing, despite the absence of evidence in support of the party's case.

New evidence offered on appeal after an initial decision is rendered by an Administrative Law Judge may not be considered or relied upon in making a final decision but may only be considered to determine if there should be a further hearing.

United States v. Richard H. Franklin, 45 IBLA 54 (Jan. 14, 1980)

In determining the validity of a mining claim in a Government contest, the entire evidentiary record must be considered. If the Government fails to make a sufficient prima facie case against a mining claim, the claimant may move to have the contest dismissed and rest his case. However, when the claimant goes forward with his evidence, the Administrative Law Judge must consider the evidence presented and weigh it in accordance with its probative value. In choosing to rebut the case, the claimant bears the burden of doing so by a preponderance of the evidence and bears the risk of nonpersuasion if he fails.

In a mining contest, a matter not charged in the complaint cannot be used as a ground to invalidate a claim, unless it has been raised at the hearing and the contestee has not objected.

United States v. Clare Williamson and Lapine Pumice Co., 45 IBLA 264 (Feb. 4, 1980) 87 I.D. 34

Where there is a conflict between an application by the State of Alaska to select land under the Statehood Act and an application by an Alaska Native for allotment under the Act of May 17, 1906, and it appears to BLM that the Native applicant has met the requirements for patent, upon notice of this determination the State, if dissatisfied, has an election of remedies. It may not appeal from the "Notice," which is interlocutory, but it may initiate private contest proceedings to prove lack of qualification on the part of the Native, or it may appeal the subsequent decision of BLM to the Board of Land Appeals. If, on appeal, the Board concludes that the Native's application is deficient it will order the institution of Government contest proceedings, but if it finds the allotment application acceptable, it will order the allotment issued, if all else be regular.

Where a Government contest complaint against a mining claim contains charges which, if proved, would render the claim invalid, and the contestee fails to file an answer to the complaint in accordance with Departmental regulations, the allegations of the complaint will be taken as admitted by the contestee, and the claim is properly declared null and void. The Secretary is without authority to waive the regulations to permit the late filing of an answer.

United States v. Dan Seslinger, 46 IBLA 76 (Feb. 22, 1980)

Where there is a conflict between an application by the State of Alaska to select land under the Statehood Act and an application by an Alaska Native for allotment under the Act of May 17, 1906, and it appears to BLM that the Native applicant has met the requirements for patent, upon notice of this determination the State, if dissatisfied, has an election of remedies. It may not appeal from an interlocutory decision which authorizes the State to initiate private contest proceedings to prove lack of qualification on the part of the Native. Rather, it may initiate the private contest within the time period prescribed, or it may appeal the decision of BLM, after it becomes final, to the Board of Land Appeals. If, on appeal, the Board concludes that the Native's application is deficient it will order the institution of Government contest proceedings, but if it finds the allotment application acceptable, it will order the allotment issued, all else being regular.

Eleanor H. Wood, 46 IBLA 373 (Apr. 8, 1980)

Failure to file a timely answer to a mining claim contest complaint will result in the charges in the complaint being taken as admitted and the case being decided without a hearing.

United States v. William R. Soren, 47 IBLA 226 (May 13, 1980)

Where Bureau of Land Management determines that an application for a Native allotment is invalid because the facts are not as stated in the application, Bureau of Land Management should initiate a contest proceeding pursuant to 43 CFR 4.451 to 4.452-9.

Evan Chukwak, 47 IBLA 241 (May 13, 1980)

Absent a patent application, the dismissal of a contest complaint by an Administrative Law Judge does not establish the validity of the claim, but merely establishes that, on the issues raised by the evidence, the contestee has preponderated. Therefore, there is no requirement, beyond preponderation as to the issues raised by the evidence, that a mining claimant affirmatively establish the validity of a claim.

United States v. Gerlew C. Hooker et al., 48 IBLA 22 (May 27, 1980)

The assertion that annual assessment work has not been performed is the assertion of a negative fact. If an examination of the mining claims and the nearby lands does not reveal the accomplishment of the required work, and there is no record of any such work having been performed, then evidence to this effect would be sufficient to establish a prima facie case. It would then devolve upon the claimant to show by a preponderance of the countervailing evidence that he has substantially complied with the statute.

In a Government contest proceeding to determine the validity of a mining claim, the claimant is always the proponent of the rule or order, always the one claiming to have earned the benefit of the mining laws through his compliance therewith. Regardless of whether the issue on which the validity of the claim rests is discovery, mode of location, or performance of assessment work, the relative position and obligation of the contestant and the contestee remain the same.

Where the Government contests the validity of a mining claim for nonperformance of annual assessment work, there is nothing inherent or implied in that action which requires a conclusion that the claim is valid in all other respects, nor may the bringing of such an action be treated as tantamount to an admission by the Government that "property rights in the claim have been established by the making of a valid location."

United States v. Catlin Bohne et al., United States v. Exxon Corp., et al., United States v. Adabelle Brown et al., 48 IBLA 267 (June 30, 1980) 87 I.D. 248

The motivation of any Government agency in initiating a contest against mining claims is irrelevant. The fact that such contest challenges the validity of certain mining claims and not of others in the same general area does not constitute a denial of due process. The Board of Land Appeals cannot abnegate its responsibility to determine the validity of mining claims when that issue is presented upon appeal, and where that issue is so presented, mining claims properly are declared null and void upon a showing of lack of discovery of a valuable mineral deposit upon the claims.

United States v. R. H. MacLaughlin, Christine MacLaughlin, 50 IBLA 176 (Sept. 30, 1980)

The procedure followed by the Department of the Interior in the initiation of mining contest cases is in compliance with the due process clause of the United States Constitution and the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 551 (1976).

United States v. Mary E. Gray, 50 IBLA 209 (Sept. 30, 1980)

The motivation of any Government agency in initiating a contest against mining claims is irrelevant. The Board of Land Appeals cannot abnegate its responsibility to determine the validity of mining claims when that issue is presented upon appeal, and where that issue is so presented, mining claims properly are declared null and void upon a showing of lack of discovery of a valuable mineral deposit upon the claims.

United States v. Leon R. Whitney, Cesar T. Hernandez, 51 IBLA 73 (Oct. 31, 1980)

Where a Government contest complaint, when filed and received by mineral claimants, correctly identifies all claimants as of that time, the substitution or addition of subsequent transferees is the obligation of those who have acquired such an interest and their failure to so move will not vitiate the effectiveness of an adjudication of the validity of a mining claim.

In order to sustain a charge that land embraced within a mining claim is not held in good faith for mining purposes the evidence relating to the mineral claimant's lack of good faith must be clear.

United States v. Virgil Prowell and Melinda Prowell, 52 IBLA 256 (Feb. 6, 1981)

A sufficient prima facie case by the Government does not require positive proof that there has been no discovery made or that the mining claim is nonmineral in character. Upon the Government's presentation of a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the claimant to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that he indeed has effected a discovery of a valuable mineral deposit within the limits of the claim.

Where a party fails to appear or participate in a hearing as scheduled even though no order postponing the hearing has been issued, the merits of the case may be reached and decided on the basis of the record completed at the hearing, despite the absence of evidence in support of the party's case.

United States v. Claude T. and Sarah E. Orme, 57 IBLA 373 (Sept. 8, 1981)

Absent a patent application, the dismissal of a contest complaint by an Administrative Law Judge does not establish the validity of the claim, but merely establishes that, on the issues raised by the evidence, the contestee has preponderated. Therefore, there is no requirement, beyond preponderation as to the issues raised by the evidence, that a mining claimant affirmatively establish the validity of a claim.

Absent a patent application, in a mining contest hearing where the Government's evidence of lack of discovery relates only to insufficient quality and quantity of mineralization and the mining claimant produces evidence sufficient to preponderate on those issues, the contest complaint is properly dismissed.

United States v. Malin M. Lewis, 58 IBLA 282 (Oct. 8, 1981)

Failure to obtain counsel at a hearing into the validity of a mining claim will afford the mining claimant no greater rights on appeal than if he had obtained counsel.

United States v. John Burt et al., 59 IBLA 326 (Nov. 5, 1981)

A contestee in Government contests, challenging the validity of his mining claim and millsite, must file answers to the complaints within 30 days of service, failing which BLM properly takes the truth of the allegation in the complaints as admitted without a hearing.

New evidence offered on appeal after BLM has rendered a determination that a mining claim is null and void, following the contestee's failure to answer the contest complaint, may be considered by the Board only to determine if BLM's ruling is so patently erroneous that there should be further inquiry into the facts. Appellant's unsupported suggestion that there might be rich ore on the claim does not justify further inquiry.

In a mining contest, a matter not charged in the complaint cannot be used as a ground to invalidate a claim, unless it has been raised at the hearing and the contestee has not objected.

United States v. Robert R. Lara, 67 IBLA 48 (Sept. 9, 1982)

In an oil shale mining claim contest, the Government bears only the burden of going forward with sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case of invalidity, and the burden then shifts to the claimant to overcome this showing by a preponderance of the evidence. However, since abandonment and lack of good faith are questions of intent, the Government bears the ultimate burden of proving these charges.

Where evidence creates only inferences of lack of good faith in the location and holding of mining claims and fails to show clearly that these claims were abandoned, these charges are not sustained.

United States v. Weber Oil Co., et al., 68 IBLA 37 (Oct. 21, 1982)
89 I.D. 538

Where the owner of an interest in a mining claim dies prior to the filing of a contest complaint against the claim, service of the complaint must be made on the claimant's heirs, or any adjudication following from the complaint does not affect the interest held by the heirs.

United States v. Joseph Laczkowski & Eula G. Jones (Montney), 71 IBLA 364 (Mar. 28, 1983)

It is not the function of the Board of Land Appeals to make an inquiry into the motivation of any Government agency which has initiated a contest against mining claims. The fact that such contest challenges the validity of certain mining claims, and not of others in the same general area does not constitute a denial of due process. The Board of Land Appeals cannot abnegate its responsibility to determine the validity of mining claims when that issue is presented upon appeal, and where that issue is so presented, mining claims properly are declared null and void upon a showing of lack of discovery of a valuable mineral deposit upon the claims.

United States v. Lee H. Rice, Goldie E. Rice, 73 IBLA 128 (May 23, 1983)

In a government contest of an association placer mining claim on a charge of nonperformance of annual labor as required by 30 U.S.C. § 28 (1976), each co-owner of the claim is an indispensable party to the proceeding, and a failure to properly serve and join each such party is fatal to the action, and a decision rendered therein purporting to void the fractional interests of those claimants who were properly served is a mere nullity and of no effect. Union Oil Co. of California (Swift), 72 I.D. 313 (1965) is overruled and rescinded on this point.

Where conflicting evidence existing in the case file and submitted on appeal concerning a Native allotment applicant's use and occupancy of the land raises factual issues, the Bureau of Land Management should initiate a Government contest so that the factual issues can be resolved at a hearing.

Katmailand, Inc., et al., 77 IBLA 347 (Dec. 5, 1983)

In a mining contest initiated by the United States, there is no requirement that the contestee offer evidence concerning matters not placed in issue by the United States. Where the Administrative Law Judge incorrectly states a contrary rule, but in practice applies the correct standard, his decision is affirmed.

In a mining contest initiated by the United States where the Government mineral examiners testify they have examined the mineral claims at issue and found no evidence of mineralization to support a discovery, a prima facie case for the Government is established. This showing is not overcome by evidence of ore sample values offered by contestee to show mineralization, where contestee fails to show from which, of 10 claims at issue, the samples were taken.

Cactus Rodeo, Ltd., 79 IBLA 20 (Feb. 3, 1984)

Where the evidence submitted by a Government mineral examiner supports the conclusion that a 10-acre parcel of land in a placer location is not mineral in character, the burden devolves to the mineral claimant to overcome this showing by a preponderance of the evidence, failing in which that portion shall be declared invalid.

United States v. Robert B. Lara (On Reconsideration), 80 IBLA 215 (Apr. 30, 1984)

In determining the validity of a mining claim in a Government contest, the entire evidentiary record must be considered; therefore, if evidence presented by the contestees shows that there has not been a discovery, it may be used in reaching a decision that the claim is invalid because of a lack of discovery, regardless of any defects in the Government's prima facie case.

United States v. Clara Williamson and Loring Pumice Co., 45 IBLA 264 (Feb. 4, 1980) 87 I.D. 34

It is a proper exercise of discretionary authority for a Bureau of Land Management office to suspend action on an oil and gas lease offer pending resolution of similar cases on appeal to the Board of Land Appeals and a court proceeding. However, where the court case is remanded to the Department of the Interior for further consideration and the Board has resolved cases with substantive issues similar to those in the case under consideration, it will set aside the Bureau's decision, and dismiss the protest and remand the case for action in accord with those rulings. Where there are no disputed factual issues controlling resolution of the case, the protestant's request for a hearing will be denied as well as his request for further suspension of the case.

Robert J. Kinds, Jr. & K. Hollenbeak, 72 IBLA 75 (Apr. 12, 1983)

Due process does not require notice and a right to be heard prior to the initial decision in every case where an individual may be deprived of property so long as the individual is given notice and an opportunity to be heard before the deprivation becomes final.

Notice and an opportunity for a hearing is required only where there is a disputed question of fact and where validity of a millsite location turns on the legal effect to be given facts of record concerning the status of the land when the millsite was located, no hearing is required.

HEARINGS--Continued

A coal prospecting permittee who applies for a coal lease is entitled to a hearing before an Administrative Law Judge before his application is rejected, where the permittee alleges that the application contains data that commercial quantities of coal exist on the lands; however, where the permittee alleges that there is coal in commercial quantities in certain lands as measured by the mining industry standard BLM and Survey should have the opportunity to consider whether commercial quantities as measured by the mining industry is sufficient to comply with commercial quantities as defined in 43 CFR 3430.1-2.

Jesse H. Knight, 53 IBLA 300 (Mar. 24, 1981)

Where a Native allotment application declares that the applicant first initiated use and occupancy after the date that the land was segregated from appropriation by the filing of a selection application by the State of Alaska, allowance of the Native allotment application is precluded as a matter of law and may be properly rejected without a hearing.

Rosalyn Isaac (On Reconsideration), 53 IBLA 306 (Mar. 25, 1981)

Anita Robinson, 71 IBLA 380 (Mar. 29, 1983)

Philip A. Cramer, 74 IBLA 1 (June 21, 1983)

An application for a Native allotment must be rejected if the alleged use and occupancy commenced after the time that a state selection application was filed for the land. But where the Native allotment applicant alleges use and occupancy prior to the filing of a state selection application, it is improper to reject his application without affording him notice and opportunity for a hearing, and BLM must initiate contest proceedings against the application. The State of Alaska must be given an opportunity to participate as a party to such contest.

If BLM determines that a Native allotment application that conflicts with a state selection application may be allowed without a Government contest against the Native allotment applicant, it must notify the State of Alaska of this determination. Upon such notification, the State, if dissatisfied, has an election of remedies. It may initiate a private contest within the time period prescribed in the notice, or it may appeal the decision of BLM, after it becomes final, to this Board. If the Board concludes that the Native's application is deficient, it will order the initiation of a Government contest. But if it finds the allotment application

Mary A. A. Aspinwall (On Reconsideration), 66 IBLA 367 (Aug. 27, 1982)

Where a Native allotment application filed in 1961 is rejected, more than 13 years after applicant has submitted acceptable evidence of his use and occupancy of the land for more than the required 5-year period set out in the appropriate statute, solely on the basis of a Geological Survey report in 1974 that the land was believed to be prospectively valuable for phosphate, the decision rejecting the application will be set aside and the matter remanded to BLM to proceed to issuance of patent as land must be considered to be nonmineral in character absent a showing that minerals are present in such quantities and such qualities as would induce a person of ordinary prudence to expend time and money with a reasonable prospect of success in developing a paying mine thereon.

Heirs of Simon Pongok, 55 IBLA 305 (June 25, 1981)

A coal prospecting permittee who applies for a coal lease, alleging with supportive data that there is coal in commercial quantities within certain lands in its permit, is entitled to a hearing conducted in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 554 (1976), before its application may be finally rejected because it has not shown coal in commercial quantities.

United States v. Arpad Speckert, 55 IBLA 340 (June 26, 1981)

Where a Native allotment application declares that the applicant first initiated use and occupancy after the date that the land was withdrawn for lighthouse purposes, allowance of the Native allotment application is precluded as a matter of law and may be properly rejected without a hearing.

Stanislaus Mike, 56 IBLA 69 (July 10, 1981)

Due process does not require notice and a right to be heard in every case where a person is deprived of an asserted property right so long as the individual is given notice and an opportunity to be heard before the initial Bureau of Land Management decision, adverse to him, becomes final. Harold A. Goodwin, Sr., 60 IBLA 14 (Nov. 16, 1981)

A mining claim contest hearing will not be reopened to afford the claimants an opportunity to prove a discovery had been made on the claims in the absence of a tender of proof and evidence to show equitable justification for a further proceeding in the case. Also, the case will not be reopened where the Administrative Law Judge has ruled on the credibility of claimants' witnesses on issues going to their failure to present a case due to alleged Governmental interference, which is not supported by the record, and there is no persuasive showing of a denial of due process.

Victor A. Anahonak (On Reconsideration), 64 IBLA 289 (June 4, 1982)

To warrant a further hearing in a mining claim contest based upon an asserted lack of discovery, an appellant must make an evidentiary tender of proof of discovery. Vague and unsupported assertions of mineralization do not establish a basis for reopening the hearing. Because under 30 U.S.C. § 23 (1976) a mining claimant must make a discovery of a valuable mineral deposit prior to the location of the claim, it is presumed that when the validity of his claim is challenged, the mining claimant need only come forward with the evidence of discovery which he has already made.

United States v. Gary L. Murdock, 65 IBLA 239 (July 9, 1982)

Upon a BLM determination that a lease has expired at the end of its extended term because the well on the leasehold is not capable of production in paying quantities, the lessees of record are entitled to notice and an opportunity to request a hearing on the issue of the productive capacity of the well where they have presented evidence raising an issue of fact regarding the status of the well.

PRIVATE CONTESTS

Where there is a conflict between an application by the State of Alaska to select land under the Statehood Act and an application by an Alaska Native for allotment under the Act of May 17, 1906, and it appears to BLM that the Native applicant has met the requirements for patent, upon notice of this determination the State, if dissatisfied, has an election of remedies. It may not appeal from the "Notice," which is interlocutory, but it may initiate private contest proceedings to prove lack of qualification on the part of the Native, or it may appeal the subsequent decision of BLM to the Board of Land Appeals. State of Alaska v. Moses Chythlook, 47 IBLA 249 (May 13, 1980)

Where the State of Alaska lacks a cognizable interest in the specific land being sought by a Native allotment applicant because that land is either within the core township of a Native village or the Native village has received tentative approval for its selection, the State does not have standing to initiate a private contest under 43 CFR 4.450-1. RULES OF PRACTICE--Continued

Where the charges in a private contest complaint against a desert land entry are not corroborated as required by 43 CFR 4.450-4(c), the complaint must be dismissed.

A private contest against a desert land entry that is initiated prior to the expiration of the statutory life of the entry and charges that the entryperson will fail to meet the requirements of the law by the expiration date is premature. Since time remains for the entryperson to fulfill the requirements, it cannot be said with certainty that the contestant has alleged facts which if proved would require cancellation of the entry and thus the contest must be dismissed.

Dale M. Wright v. Joan L. Griffin, 68 IBLA 279 (Nov. 17, 1982)

Only an individual claiming "an interest in the land" embraced by a patent application has standing to initiate a private contest under 43 CFR 4.450-1. Such an "interest in the land" must be grounded in a specific statutory grant.

In re Pacific Coast Molybdenum Co., 68 IBLA 325 (Nov. 22, 1982)

Under 43 CFR 4.450-1, a private contest may be brought to have a claim invalidated for any reason not shown by the records of the BLM. Because compliance with sec. 314 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1744 (1976), can only be resolved by the records of BLM, no private contest may be maintained solely on the basis of that issue.

Jurisdiction over disputes between rival mining claimants is reserved to the courts, and it is not for this Department to decide whether one claimant has a better right to a claim by virtue of his relocation of a claim following a rival claimant's alleged failure to file the documents required under sec. 314 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1744 (1976).

Where a statute limits the Department's authority to consider contests between rival mining claimants, the Department has no authority to consider favorably an argument that it is a denial of equal protection to recognize the right of a nonmineral claimant to contest a mining claim while denying such an opportunity to a rival mining claimant.

Gold Depository & Loan Co., Inc. v. Mary Brock et al., 69 IBLA 194 (Dec. 15, 1982) actually served the complaint and the contestant files proof of such service on appeal.

BLM may not dismiss a private contest complaint against a homestead entry for failure to offer reasons, not a matter of public record, in accordance with 43 CFR 4.450-1, where the complaint alleges failure to establish a residence within 6 months after the date of entry, as required by 43 CFR 2567.5(a), and the BLM land report, which concluded that there was such failure, was based on an examination of the land prior to the last day on which a residence could be established.

BLM must dismiss a private contest complaint against a homestead entry where it is not supported by the affidavit of a corroborating witness which alleges facts which, if proved, would subject the homestead entry to cancellation as required by 43 CFR 4.450-4(c).

Joseph L. Wadsworth v. Glenn M. Price, 74 IBLA 373 (July 29, 1983) 90 I.D. 338

Patentees under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act of 1916 have an adverse interest sufficient to bring a private contest against allegedly invalid mining claims located for minerals reserved to the United States, which claims threaten to destroy the value of the surface of their patented lands.

Joanne M. Massirio v. Western Hills Mining Ass'n et al., 78 IBLA 155 (Dec. 29, 1983)

The validity of a mining claim on the issue of discovery of a valuable mineral deposit is not legally cognizable in a bond protest proceeding initiated by the surface owner under a Stock-Raising Homestead Act patent. Such a validity determination requires initiation of a contest with notice to the claimant and an opportunity for a hearing.

Robert M. Michael et ux., 79 IBLA 255 (Mar. 5, 1984)

PROTESTS

The right of appeal is limited to a party to a case adversely affected by a decision of the Bureau of Land Management, and an appeal from a timber sale notice will be remanded to the Bureau of Land Management for treatment as a protest. However, under the circumstances presented here, where the Bureau of Land Management has reviewed the protestant's reasons and, in effect, has made its decision communicating it to the protestant and this Board, no purpose would be served by remanding the case and the Board will consider the matter on its merits.

Julie Adams et al., 45 IBLA 252 (Feb. 4, 1980)

It is a proper exercise of discretionary authority for a Bureau of Land Management office to suspend action on an oil and gas lease offer pending resolution of similar cases on appeal to the Board of Land Appeals and a court proceeding. However, where the court case is remanded to the Department of the Interior for further consideration and the Board has resolved cases with substantive issues similar to those in the case under consideration, it will set aside the Bureau's decision, and dismiss the protest and remand the case for action in accord with those rulings. Where there are no disputed factual issues controlling resolution of the case, the protestant's request for a hearing will be denied as well as his request for further suspension of the case.

Jack Zuckerman, 45 IBLA 337 (Feb. 7, 1980)

A protest against the issuance of an oil and gas lease is properly dismissed where it is based on vague allegations of noncompliance with leasing regulations and is unsupported by facts showing that the successful drawee should have been disqualified, that assignees were not bona fide purchasers or that the leases should be cancelled.

Geosearch, Inc., 48 IBLA 51 (May 29, 1980)

Where a protestant challenges the bona fides of an oil and gas leaseholder, the burden is upon appellant, not the BLM, to establish by facts the substance of its charge.

Master Consulting Corp., 48 IBLA 166 (June 9, 1980)

A protest against issuance of an oil and gas lease is properly dismissed where it is based on vague allegations of noncompliance with leasing regulations and is unsupported by facts showing that the successful drawee should be disqualified.

Phillip A. Kulin, 53 IBLA 57 (Feb. 27, 1981)

Juan Martin, 71 IBLA 211 (Mar. 15, 1983)

BLM's decision to dismiss a protest by the holder of the surface estate in lands patented under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act against the sufficiency of the amount of a bond, put up by the claimant of mineral interests in these lands to cover damages to the surface estate from the claimant's mining and exploration activities, will be vacated and remanded for readjudication, where the record is devoid of facts of record to support this decision.

Soderberg Rawhide Ranch Co., 63 IBLA 260 (Apr. 19, 1982)

An assignee of an oil and gas lease offeror drawn with second or third priority has standing to protest the issuance of a lease to first-priority offeror, as well as standing to appeal from a rejection of such protest.

A protest against issuance of an oil and gas lease is properly dismissed where it is based on vague allegations of noncompliance with leasing regulations and is unsupported by facts showing that the successful drawee should be disqualified.

Geosearch, Inc., 64 IBLA 149 (May 24, 1982)

Where an individual or organization files a protest to a mineral patent application, which protest is denied, and timely appeals from that denial, such individual or organization is "a party to the case" within the meaning of 43 CFR 4.410. In order to maintain the appeal, however, such a party must also show an interest which has been adversely affected by the decision appealed.

PROTESTS--Continued

Under the Department's Rules of Practice, 43 CFR 4.450-2, a protest is any objection to an action proposed to be taken. A protest may not be used in a case where no appeal against a Bureau of Land Management decision was taken during the period allowed for such appeal.

Horizon Exploration Co., 72 IBLA 43 (Apr. 7, 1983)

A protest to issuance of an oil and gas lease filed after the lease has issued is not timely. Where, however, the "protest" is filed by an individual with subsidiary priority such protest shall be deemed to be an appeal from the rejection of the protestant's application or offer to lease.

Goldie Skodras, 72 IBLA 120 (Apr. 14, 1983)

Patricia C. Alker, 79 IBLA 123 (Feb. 22, 1984)

Where a protest is filed to a competitive phosphate lease offering, which protest is denied, and a timely appeal is filed by the protestant, the protestant is "a party to the case" within the meaning of 43 CFR 4.410. In order to maintain the appeal, however, such a party must also show an interest which has been adversely affected by the decision appealed.

John D. Archer, 74 IBLA 323 (July 28, 1983)

Where protests to a mineral patent application are denied and an appeal is taken, protestants have the burden of affirmatively establishing that patent should not issue and that BLM's decision was in error.

In re Pacific Coast Molybdenum Co., 75 IBLA 16 (Aug. 5, 1983) 90 I.D. 352

The validity of a mining claim on the issue of discovery of a valuable mineral deposit is not legally cognizable in a bond protest proceeding initiated by the surface owner under a Stock-Raising Homestead Act patent. Such a validity determination requires initiation of a contest with notice to the claimant and an opportunity for a hearing.

A decision approving a bond filed by a locator of mining claims for reserved minerals on land patented under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act will be affirmed in the absence of a showing that the amount of the bond is inadequate to cover damage to crops, improvements, and the value of the land for grazing purposes.

Robert M. Michael et ux., 79 IBLA 255 (Mar. 5, 1984)

The conclusion of proceedings under the Freedom of Information Act, as amended, 5 U.S.C. § 552 (1982), to acquire information related to the rationale for the production royalty set in a competitive coal lease does not constitute a final decision by BLM subject to an appeal to the Board, challenging the royalty. The appellant only had a right to protest the royalty set in the notice of the lease sale and to appeal from any denial of that protest.

SUPERVISORY AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY

For the purposes of the proviso to 43 CFR 4.410, which grants any party to a case a right of appeal to the Board of Land Appeals "except * * * where a decision has been approved by the Secretary," the Under Secretary is vested with the authority of the Secretary to make decisions final for the Department and thus not subject to review by the Board.

DNA--People's Legal Services, 49 IBLA 307 (Aug. 20, 1980)

In the Department's appellate process involving review of decisions made by subordinate officers and employees, the Secretary, or an appeals board with authority to act as fully and finally as might the Secretary, is not so limited in the scope of review and decisionmaking as to be required to affirm such decisions as are supported merely by "substantial evidence" or which are perceived not to be arbitrary or capricious, unless such a limitation on the scope of appellate review has been imposed by the Secretary himself in a duly promulgated regulation or he has been so constrained by enacted law. Otherwise, the Secretary, as chief executive officer of the Department with full supervisory powers, has plenary authority to review de novo all official actions and to decide appeals on the basis of a preponderance of the evidence in cases involving substantive rights, or on the basis of public policy or public interest in cases involving the exercise of discretion.

United States Fish & Wildlife Service, 72 IBLA 218 (Apr. 25, 1983)

In exercising the full review authority of the Secretary of the Interior, the Board of Indian Appeals is not required to uphold a decision of the Bureau of Indian Affairs merely because it is reasonable and based upon substantial evidence in the record, but has the authority to review the decision de novo.

Pueblo of Laguna v. Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs, 12 IBIA 80 (Dec. 7, 1983) 90 I.D. 521

WITNESSES

The Board refuses to draw inferences adverse to the Government by reason of its failure to have its project engineer testify in important areas and by reason of its failure to call as witnesses two or its employees who attended the hearing where the Board finds that the action of the Government is consistent with the principal defenses made to the differing site conditions claims asserted and where under long-established Board practice, the appellant could have called any or all of the Government's employees concerned as witnesses without making them appellant's witnesses for the purposes of impeachment.

The Board sustains the action of the hearing member in refusing to receive in evidence documents not identified by a witness through whose testimony their admission is being sought.

The Board seriously questions the wisdom of the Government in not arranging for the audit of multi-million dollar claims apparently advanced in good faith by reputable contractors, noting that securing audits will not only facilitate the examination of witnesses with respect to quantum but are also likely to prove to be useful in establishing a basis for agreeing upon stipulations narrowing the issues in quantum areas or affording a basis for arriving at a settlement prior

SCHOOL LANDS

GRANTS OF LAND

Title to certain designated school sections granted to the State of Utah under the Act of July 16, 1894, vested as of the date of acceptance of the official survey of those sections following statehood if the lands were not known to be mineral at that time. Whether the lands were known to be mineral is a question of fact and this contest must be remanded for the hearing of evidence on that issue.

Frederick H. Larson v. State of Utah, 50 IBLA 382 (Oct. 22, 1980)

INDEMNITY SELECTIONS

The "grossly disparate value policy," under which the Department rejects States applications for lands in lieu of lands lost from their school grants by reason of settlements, etc., under 43 U.S.C. §§ 851, 852 (1976), where the value of the selected lands grossly exceeds the value of the lost base lands, is a lawful exercise of the Secretary's power and a valid ground to reject such an application. Accordingly, where the record indicates that the selected lands may be much more valuable than the base lands, the matter will be remanded to BLM for a determination of such values.

State of New Mexico (On Reconsideration), 50 IBLA 367 (Oct. 21, 1980)

Prior to the promulgation of 43 CFR 2091.2-6, the filing of a state indemnity selection application did not segregate the identified lands from operation of the mining laws prior to classification of the lands as suitable for indemnity selection.

Leo Rhea Partnership, 80 IBLA 1 (Mar. 27, 1984)

BLM may not declare a mining claim located on land subject to a State indemnity selection application null and void ab initio because of the segregative effect arising from the filing of the application pursuant to 43 CFR 2091.2-6 where the state's application was filed prior to promulgation of the regulation.

James R. Houghton, Wm. A. Houghton, 80 IBLA 195 (Apr. 24, 1984)

Where the State of Oregon has selected indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for school sections within an unsurveyed township in the Siskiyou National Forest and thereafter a reprotraction or survey is run revealing new fractional townships within the area originally protracted, the State is entitled to indemnity lands for those new townships in accordance with the compact it entered with the United States by Act of Feb. 14, 1859.

A state selecting indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for unsurveyed school sections within a national forest shall be entitled to select indemnity lands to the extent of two sections for each of said townships in lieu of secs. 16 and 36 therein. Where a protraction on which the state relies to make its indemnity selections reveals that a fractional township is present, the state's entitlement to indemnity lands is calculated according to the pro rata rule set forth at 43 U.S.C. § 852 (1976).

Where a survey on which the state relies to make its indemnity selections pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, reveals a fractional township with a school section in place, the state's entitlement should be in an amount equal to the acreage shown by the surveyed school section or in an amount determined by the pro rata rule at the election of the state.

Until a survey of public lands has been run and approved, the designated sections of a township are undefined and the lands are unidentified.

Where the State of Oregon makes an initial selection of indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for school sections within an unsurveyed fractional township in a national forest, it is not entitled to additional indemnity lands should a subsequent reprotraction or survey be made of the township.

State of Oregon et al., II, 80 IBLA 354 (May 10, 1984) 91 I.D. 212

A mining claim wholly located on land which has been segregated from mineral location by the filing of a state school land indemnity selection application is properly declared null and void ab initio.

When Arizona filed its original application for selection of land as part of its entitlement to compensation for deficiencies for school trust lands pursuant to its enabling act, the Department did not have segregation authority to protect the selections. During the promulgation of 43 CFR 2091.2-6, Arizona submitted a request to have the previous applications withdrawn, consolidated, and amended to include additional lands. This will be deemed a reapplication under the circumstances of this case, the filing of which enabled the Department to segregate the lands described therein under 43 CFR 2091.2-6. Mining claims subsequently initiated on lands that were segregated by the reapplication were properly declared null and void ab initio.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR
(See also Administrative Authority--if included in this Index.)

The Department of the Interior, as an agency of the Executive Branch of the Government, is not the proper forum to decide whether or not a statute enacted by Congress is constitutional.

Colorado-Ute Electric Ass'n, Inc., 46 IBLA 35 (Feb. 20, 1980)

The Board of Land Appeals is without jurisdiction to review and decide the validity or legality of an order issued personally by the Secretary of the Interior in his capacity as chief executive officer of the Department, and an appeal which is limited to those issues must be dismissed.

Texas Oil & Gas Corp., 46 IBLA 50 (Feb. 20, 1980)

The Secretary of the Interior may require an oil and gas lease applicant to accept stipulations reasonably designed to protect environmental and other land use values as a condition precedent to the issuance of a lease. Where the recommendations to impose stipulations on the lease are based on environmental analysis reports for the Uinta National Forest, special protective stipulations are not unreasonable, per se.

Diane B. Katz, 47 IBLA 177 (May 7, 1980)

The validity or legality of regulations, orders, or policies formulated by the Secretary of the Interior are not issues within the appellate jurisdiction of the Board of Land Appeals. However, the Board may review decisions of the Geological Survey or the Bureau of Land Management to determine whether such Secretarial regulations, orders, or policies have been correctly implemented.

Bass Enterprises Production Co., 48 IBLA 11 (May 27, 1980)

The Secretary has broad power to regulate all on-lease activities by oil and gas lessees and operators pursuant to the conditions contained in oil and gas leases and his general regulatory authority under the Mineral Leasing Act. The procedures for regulating activities on oil and gas leases, established under Secretarial Order 2948 and the BLM-USGS Cooperative Procedures Agreement implementing that order, reserve to the Department the authority to protect the United States legal interests in the property. The Secretary has broad discretion either to continue this procedure, or to substitute any other delegation of his authority and any other reasonable regulatory procedure which he concludes would equally protect the United States interests.

Right-of-Way Requirements for Gathering Lines and Other Production Facilities Located Within Oil and Gas Leaseholds, M-36921 (June 19, 1980) 87 I.D. 291

The Board of Land Appeals is without jurisdiction to review and decide the validity or legality of an order, which temporarily suspended oil and gas leasing, and was issued personally by the Secretary of the Interior in his capacity as chief executive officer of the Department. An appeal which is limited to those issues must be dismissed.

Where the Secretary has decided that production from phosphate leases should be valued in accordance with a particular method and what the value should be, the Board's review authority is limited to determining whether the Geological Survey Area Supervisor who issues orders to the phosphate lessees has properly followed the Secretary's instructions. No hearing is required as a prerequisite to the order.

Where the Department has not formally adopted any methodology for determining the value of production from phosphate leases, but has instead allowed lessees simply to pay royalty based on the minimum value specified in the lease after having advised them that a new method of determining a realistic value was being developed, it may assert that royalty was incorrect even after it has accepted these royalty payments, and may impose the method as approved by the Secretary.

Under 43 U.S.C. § 1714(b) (1976) a publication in the Federal Register of notification of an application for withdrawal, which publication temporarily segregates land from the operation of the mining laws, does not withdraw the land, and therefore the notice need not be signed by the Secretary or an individual in the Office of the Secretary who has been appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Stephen W. Fox, 50 IBLA 186 (Sept. 30, 1980)
87 I.D. 462

As the Department's final review authority on decisions relating to the public lands, the Board of Land Appeals exercises all the powers which the Department would have in making an initial decision.

Frederick H. Larson v. State of Utah, 50 IBLA 382 (Oct. 22, 1980)

The Board of Land Appeals is without jurisdiction to review and decide the validity or legality of a policy directive issued personally by the Secretary of the Interior in his capacity as chief executive officer of the Department, and an appeal limited to those issues must be dismissed.

James R. Learned et al., 50 IBLA 416 (Oct. 24, 1980)

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized, and is under a duty to consider and determine what lands are public lands of the United States, and after having made that determination the Secretary has the authority to determine the validity of mining claims on any public lands of the United States after adequate notice and opportunity for a hearing. A mining contest may be initiated under the authority of the Secretary of the Interior by the Bureau of Land Management at the behest of the Forest Service and prosecuted by counsel employed by the Department of Agriculture, with Forest Service employees as witnesses, where such action is in accordance with a Memorandum of Understanding between the agencies.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR--Continued

The Secretary of the Interior is charged with seeing that valid mining claims are recognized, invalid ones eliminated, and the rights of the public preserved.

United States v. Ernest Higbee et al., 52 IBLA 83 (Jan. 9, 1981)

The Secretary of the Interior may require an oil and gas lease applicant to accept stipulations reasonably designed to protect environmental and other land use values as a condition precedent to the issuance of a lease. Where the recommendations to impose stipulations on the lease are based on the need to protect the wilderness characteristics of the land pending a study as required by sec. 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782 (1976), the special stipulations are not unreasonable, per se.

John B. Anderson, 57 IBLA 149 (Aug. 25, 1981)

The validity or legality of regulations, orders, or policies formulated by the Secretary or the Interior are not issues within the appellate jurisdiction of the Board of Land Appeals. However, the Board may review decisions of the Geological Survey to determine whether such Secretarial regulations, orders, or policies have been correctly implemented.

Superior Oil Co., 57 IBLA 404 (Sept. 14, 1981)

The Secretary of the Interior may require an oil and gas lease applicant to accept a stipulation reasonably designed to protect a duly established subsurface oil and gas storage area as a condition precedent to the issuance of a lease.

M. Robert Paulee, 59 IBLA 192 (Oct. 27, 1981)

The Board of Land Appeals must defer to the Secretary's decision to allow herbicidal spraying for vegetative management purposes, and the Board has no jurisdictional authority to entertain appeals concerning matters covered by the Secretarial action except in the limited circumstance where the appellant's object clearly is to show BLM's noncompliance therewith.

A.C.O.T.S., 60 IBLA 1 (Nov. 12, 1981)

The Board of Land Appeals is without jurisdiction to review and decide the validity or legality of that portion of a State Director's decision which implements an order issued personally by the Secretary of the Interior in his capacity as chief executive officer of the Department and the appeal will be dismissed insofar as it relates to this issue.

Cascade Holistic Economic Consultants et al., 60 IBLA 293 (Dec. 18, 1981)

The Secretary of the Interior has been authorized by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1740 (1976), to "promulgate rules and regulations to carry out" its purposes. The regulations providing for the conclusive presumption of mining claim abandonment and voidance are directly authorized by correlative language in sec. 314 of FLPMA, 43 U.S.C. § 1744 (1976). The statutory presumption of abandonment operates as a matter of law, and no administrative involvement, including issuance of regulations, would be necessary to its operation.

Where the entire mineral estate underlying all or a portion of several wilderness inventory units, with the attendant rights of entry, access, occupation, exploration, development, and improvement of the surface, is owned in fee simple by a private corporation, the mineral estate is a "vested right" as distinguished in public law terminology from a "valid existing right" and, being protected by Constitutional guarantees, is immune from denial or extinguishment by the exercise of Secretarial discretion or regulation. It is legally beyond the authority of the Secretary to fulfill the mandates of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 and the Wilderness Act to manage such lands for their protection and preservation as wilderness, and the inclusion of such lands in designated wilderness study areas is error.

Santa Fe Pacific Railroad Co., 64 IBLA 27 (May 6, 1982)

The Secretary of the Interior may require an oil and gas lease applicant to accept stipulations reasonably designed to protect environmental and other land use values as a condition precedent to the issuance of a lease. Where the recommendations to impose stipulations on the lease are based on the need to protect bighorn sheep habitat in an area where it is hoped that these animals will be reestablished, the imposition of protective stipulations will be affirmed.

Ted C. Findeiss, 65 IBLA 210 (June 30, 1982)

Because sec. 4 of the Federal Coal Leasing Amendments Act of 1976, amending 30 U.S.C. § 201(b) (1976), repealed the Secretary's authority to issue a coal prospecting permit on Federal lands, a coal prospecting permit application filed Oct. 18, 1979, is properly rejected. 30 U.S.C. § 201(b) (1976) and 43 CFR 3410 provide for the issuance of coal exploration licenses for lands subject to leasing.

Ronald K. Barr, Sr., Paul Brown, Sr., 65 IBLA 359 (July 20, 1982)

An applicant for a noncompetitive Federal oil and gas lease has no rights in the land or its minerals until the lease is lawfully issued to him. The Secretary of the Interior has discretionary power to lease or refrain from leasing those Federal lands which are otherwise available on a noncompetitive basis. Where the Assistant Secretary directs that leases be issued in response to certain pending noncompetitive offers, but the status of the subject lands is subsequently altered by new legislation which requires that they be leased only by competitive bidding, the discretionary authority to lease such land noncompetitively is vitiated, and the Bureau of Land Management is legally disabled to implement the directive thereafter. Federal officers and employees cannot bind the Government to create any rights not authorized by law.

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized, and is under a duty to consider and determine what lands are public lands of the United States, and after having made that determination the Secretary has the authority to determine the validity of mining claims on any public lands of the United States, including lands in national parks, after adequate notice and opportunity for a hearing.

United States v. William Lavon Chappell et al., 72 IBLA 88 (Apr. 13, 1983)

In the Department's appellate process involving review of decisions made by subordinate officers and employees, the Secretary, or an appeals board with authority to act as fully and finally as might the Secretary, is not so limited in the scope of review and decisionmaking as to be required to affirm such decisions as are supported merely by "substantial evidence" or which are perceived not to be arbitrary or capricious, unless such a limitation on the scope of appellate review has been imposed by the Secretary himself in a duly promulgated regulation or he has been so constrained by enacted law. Otherwise, the Secretary, as chief executive officer of the Department with full supervisory powers, has plenary authority to review de novo all official actions and to decide appeals on the basis of a preponderance of the evidence in cases involving substantive rights, or on the basis of public policy or public interest in cases involving the exercise of discretion.

United States Fish & Wildlife Service, 72 IBLA 218 (Apr. 25, 1983)

The authority of BLM state directors to designate the boundaries of wilderness study areas derives from the Secretary, and their determinations are appealable to the Board of Land Appeals, which is empowered to decide such appeals as fully and finally as might the Secretary. The Board, therefore, may affirm, reverse or modify such boundary designations on appeal with finality, and BLM's ministerial implementation of such final decisions will not create a new right of appeal.

Withdrawals remain in force until specifically revoked or modified by competent authority. The Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, P.L. 96-478 (94 Stat. 2371), does not affect the existence or validity of Public Land Order No. 5250.

In reviewing a decision of the Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs referred to the Board of Indian Appeals by the Secretary of the Interior under 43 CFR 4.220(a)(2), the Board has the full authority of the Secretary to review questions both of law and of discretion.

Pueblo of Laguna Vs. Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs, 12 IBLA 80 (Dec. 7, 1973) 90 I.D. 521

The Secretary of the Interior may require an oil and gas lease offeror to accept stipulations reasonably designed to protect environmental and other land use values as a condition precedent to the issuance of a lease for land located in a national forest. Where on appeal an offeror registers objections concerning such stipulations, and the Forest Service subsequently clarifies the nature of the stipulations and the offeror raises no further complaints, the imposition of the stipulation will be upheld.

James M. Chudnow, Laurent A. Wiumbeat, 78 IBLA 317 (Jan. 24, 1984)

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized, and is under a duty, to consider and determine what lands are public lands, what public lands have been or should be surveyed, and what public lands have been or remain to be disposed of by the United States. He also has the authority to extend or correct the surveys of public lands as may be necessary.

Joan Ella, 78 IBLA 374 (Jan. 30, 1984)

A decision by an officer of the BLM which does not fall within any of the enumerated exceptions in 43 CFR 4.410 is subject to appeal to the Board of Land Appeals and a BLM officer is without authority to state otherwise.

Utah Wilderness Ass'n, 80 IBLA 64 (Mar. 30, 1984) 91 I.D. 165

A duly promulgated Departmental regulation has the force and effect of law and is binding upon all officials of the Department, including the Board of Land Appeals and the Secretary, and may not be waived.

R. Gr. Shaw, 82 IBLA 88 (July 17, 1984)

Joseph A. La Paire, 83 IBLA 145 (Oct. 9, 1984)

Lands classified as within a known geologic structure of a producing oil and gas field (KGS) at any time prior to lease issuance must be leased competitively. The simultaneous oil and gas lease offer for such lands must be rejected even though the KGS determination probably would not have been applied to the lands but for the delay in lease issuance caused by the Secretary's suspension of the simultaneous oil and gas leasing program. Furthermore, applicant's rights are not impaired in such a case because the drawing merely establishes the priority of filing an offer, it does not vest in the lease applicant the right to an oil and gas lease.

The Secretary has the power to prescribe proper and necessary rules and regulations to accomplish the purpose of the Mineral Leasing Act, and pursuant to this and other authority, the Secretary has the power to create, and operate, or to suspend the simultaneous oil and gas leasing program which was designed to implement the noncompetitive leasing provisions of the Act.

Joseph A. Talladira, 83 IBLA 256 (Oct. 23, 1984)

Although Federal oil and gas leasing is subject to extensive supervision by the Secretary of the Interior, and although the Secretary has broad discretion over whether or not to lease particular lands within the public domain, once he has granted the lease he may not derogate the rights of the Federal lessee acquired under the Mineral Leasing Act and the lease granted pursuant thereto.

Federal Oil Corp., et al., 84 IBLA 36 (Nov. 27, 1984)

SEGREGATION

A permit allowing free use of mineral materials does not segregate the subject lands from further appropriation; rather, subsequent claims and entries are subject to the terms of the permit.

It is well established that an entry on public land under the laws of the United States segregates the land from the public domain, appropriates it to private use, and withdraws it from subsequent entry or acquisition until that entry is finally cancelled. Applications for interest in public lands must be rejected if the lands are not available for the requested disposition at the time they are filed or considered. Where a right-of-way was granted to lands subject at the time to a valid homestead entry, BLM properly declares the grant null and void ab initio.

State of Alaska, 46 IBLA 12 (Feb. 20, 1980)

Where an application for withdrawal, published in the Federal Register and noted on the State Office records, sets aside certain lands for geothermal resources leasing, and specifically precludes the operation of the remainder of the mineral leasing laws, it is proper to suspend an oil and gas lease offer for such segregated lands, pending action on the withdrawal application. After the withdrawal application has been cancelled without favorable action on the withdrawal request, the oil and gas offer may be considered on its merits.

Trent J. Parker, 49 IBLA 209 (Aug. 11, 1980)

Where an application for withdrawal, published in the Federal Register and noted on the State Office records, sets aside certain lands for airport purposes and specifically precludes the operation of the remainder of the mineral leasing laws, it is proper under the regulations to suspend an oil and gas lease offer for such segregated lands, pending action on the withdrawal application. After the withdrawal application has been cancelled without favorable action on the withdrawal request, the oil and gas offer may be considered on its merits.

SEGREGATION--Continued

Publication in the Federal Register of a classification for multiple use management pursuant to 43 CFR 2461.2 will segregate the affected land to the extent indicated in the notice, and applications for such land must be rejected.

"Notation rule." Under the "notation rule" when the official records of the Bureau of Land Management have been noted to reflect the devotion of land to a particular use which is exclusive of other conflicting uses, no incompatible rights in that land can attach by reason of any subsequent application or entry until the record has been changed to reflect that the land is no longer so segregated. The rule applies even where the notation was posted to the records in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

Stephen Kenyon et al., 51 IBLA 368 (Dec. 30, 1980)

Where BLM filed an application for a protective withdrawal pursuant to Exec. Order No. 10355 which would reserve the subject land from all forms of appropriation including location and entry under the mining laws and the application was duly noted on the official status plats, the lands were segregated from the date of notation to the extent that the withdrawal, if effected, would prevent such forms of appropriation. A protective withdrawal is not a temporary withdrawal under the Pickett Act, 43 U.S.C. § 141 (1970), and is not limited by the terms of 43 U.S.C. § 142 (1970) which provides that temporarily withdrawn lands shall remain open to location for metalliferous minerals.

"Public land laws." Under 43 CFR 2091.2-3 (1979), a state exchange application segregated the selected public lands from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. The term "public land laws" is ordinarily used to refer to statutes governing the alienation of public land, and generally is distinguished from both "mining laws," referring to statutes governing the mining of hard minerals on public lands, and "mineral leasing laws," a term used to designate that group of statutes governing the leasing of public

A state exchange application being processed under sec. 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 does not segregate the selected public lands from the operation of the mineral leasing laws. 43 CFR 2201.1(b).

Under 43 CFR 2091.6-4 and 2627.4(b), the filing of a state's application to select lands segregates the lands from all subsequent appropriation, including location under the mining laws; however, the application to select has no segregative effect when at the time the application is filed, the land is withdrawn from all forms of appropriation under the public land laws, including selections by a state.

"Notation rule." Under the notation rule a millsite claim, located at a time when the master title plat in the local Bureau of Land Management office shows that the lands embraced by the claim are included in a state selection application, is properly declared null and void ab initio because notation of the state selection application on the official records segregates the land from further appropriation. The rule applies even where the notation was posted in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

Under 43 CFR 2091.6-4 and 2627.4(b), the filing of a state's application to select lands, where the filing is regular on its face, segregates the lands from all subsequent appropriation, including location and entry under the mining laws and a millsite located while the land is so segregated is null and void ab initio.

A mining claim or millsite located on land at a time when the land is segregated from the operation of the mining laws by a State selection application is properly declared null and void ab initio.

John C. and Martha W. Thomas, d.b.a. Tungsten Mining Co. (On Reconsideration), 59 IBLA 364 (Nov. 9, 1981)

Public land may be "appropriated" to a public project or purpose by a Federal or state agency if such appropriation is under authority of law and there is a physical devotion of the land to such use on the ground. Such an appropriation does not segregate or withdraw the land, but creates an easement which is protected, and any subsequent entry, claim, or location is subject thereto. Where a free-use material site permit with a fixed date of expiration is held by a state agency and the site is later included in a homestead entry application, after the rights of the entryman are vested the free-use permit may not be converted to a material site right-of-way with an indefinite term, but the homestead entry remains subject to the permit until it expires.

Where a state agency which for many years has operated a material site under a free-use permit has applied to BLM for a material site right-of-way pursuant to the Federal Highway Act, and has received permission from BLM to construct (operate) in advance of the grant, and the Department of Commerce has certified that the right-of-way is in the public interest, and the application has been perfected by the applicant so that nothing remains to be done except the ministerial act of formally issuing the right-of-way, which act is required by regulation at that stage, a homestead applicant who then files an application for land which includes part of the material site and who pays the fees incident to such application will be held to have acquired his vested right to the homestead land subject to the material site right-of-way issued thereafter, and the homestead patent issued several years later was properly encumbered by a reservation of the right-of-way.

A homestead entryman who 22 years ago received a patent with a reservation of a material site right-of-way, but who accepted such patent without protest or appeal is not entitled to have the right-of-way canceled now on the basis of his assertion that the right-of-way was unauthorized.

State of Alaska, 62 IBLA 187 (Mar. 9, 1982)

An exchange application being processed under sec. 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 does not segregate the selected public lands from the operation of the mineral leasing laws. 43 CFR 2201.1(b).

Where an applicant files an over-the-counter oil and gas lease offer for less than 640 acres and does not include adjacent land for which an exchange application was then pending because of his reliance on Departmental decisions, a BLM Information Memorandum, and a BLM State Office decision, all interpreting a regulation to mean that an exchange application segregates the selected land from mineral leasing, a subsequent reinterpretation of the salient regulation which holds that such lands are available for leasing will not compel rejection of the offer. A regulation should be so clear that there is no basis for an applicant's noncompliance with it before it may be interpreted and applied with retroactive effect so as to deprive him of a statutory priority.

Sec. 4 of the General Allotment Act of Feb. 8, 1887, as amended, 25 U.S.C. § 334 (1976), authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to issue allotments to Indians only where the Indians have made settlement upon public lands "not otherwise appropriated." Applications for Indian allotments are properly rejected where the lands have been segregated from entry under the agricultural land laws (including the Act of Feb. 8, 1887) by the Secretary, under authority granted by the Act of Sept. 19, 1964, through notices of classification of lands for multiple use management, duly published in the Federal Register.

Where, however, the record indicates that the Bureau of Land Management treated the entryman's notice of location of a settlement claim as a petition for determination under 43 CFR 4230.1 and approved it to the extent of any conflict with the grazing lease, the lease will not be a bar to the initiation of that settlement claim.

Mining claims located on land which has been classified for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), and subsequently leased pursuant thereto, are properly declared null and void ab initio because the land was segregated from mineral entry, even where the lease contained a mineral reservation to the United States.

In order to establish that a notice of location of a mining claim is an amended location which relates back prior to a BLM decision which classified the land for lease or sale pursuant to the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 869 to 869-4 (1976), the mining claimant must submit proof of a chain of title to him. In the absence of such proof, the purported amendment must be treated as a relocation.

When Arizona filed its original application for selection of land as part of its entitlement to compensation for deficiencies for school trust lands pursuant to its enabling act, the Department did not have segregation authority to protect the selections. During the promulgation of 43 CFR 2091.2-6, Arizona submitted a request to have the previous applications withdrawn, consolidated, and amended to include additional lands. This will be deemed a reapplication under the circumstances of this case, the filing of which enabled the Department to segregate the lands described therein under 43 CFR 2091.2-6. Mining claims subsequently initiated on lands that were segregated by the reapplication were properly declared null and void ab initio.

SMALL TRACT ACT

GENERALLY

Where BLM classifies a 4-acre tract as suitable for disposal under the Small Tract Act, thereby segregating it from acquisition under other public land laws, then grants an individual a lease thereon with option to purchase, pursuant to which the lessee constructs buildings and occupies the tract, the protest and application of an Alaska Native, made for the first time 12 years later, will be rejected, as a matter of law and equity where the Native was claiming 160 acres of different land during the preceding 6 years, and had made no assertion of interest in the small tract, but rather had expressly acknowledged the existence of the leasehold.

Where BLM makes an unequivocal offer to sell a small tract and invites acceptance by submitting a prescribed amount as full payment, and where an individual submits the payment, a binding contract passing equitable title to the buyer is created. Thereafter, BLM holds legal title in trust for the purchaser and, as soon as any impediments to conveyance of full legal title are removed, it is obliged to convey title to him, without additional charge.

Although the Small Tract Act of June 1, 1938, was repealed by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, this repeal was made expressly subject to any existing "land use right or authorization," including a vested contractual equitable property right. Thus, the repeal of the former by the latter did not remove the Department's authority to meet its ministerial duty to pass legal title where a binding contract to do so had been created prior to the enactment of FLPMA.

CLASSIFICATION

Where BLM classifies a 4-acre tract as suitable for disposal under the Small Tract Act, thereby segregating it from acquisition under other public land laws, then grants an individual a lease thereon with option to purchase, pursuant to which the lessee constructs buildings and occupies the tract, the protest and application of an Alaska Native, made for the first time 12 years later, will be rejected, as a matter of law and equity where the Native was claiming 160 acres of different land during the preceding 6 years, and had made no assertion of interest in the small tract, but rather had expressly acknowledged the existence of the leasehold.

Evelyn Alexander, 45 IBLA 28 (Jan. 14, 1980)

A mining claim located on land segregated from all forms of appropriation, including locations under the mining law, by a small tract classification order is null and void ab initio.

Ernest L. Brewington, 73 IBLA 167 (May 24, 1983)

BLM may properly declare a mining claim null and void ab initio where located on land segregated from mineral entry on the date of location by a small tract classification order.

J. S. Bowers, 79 IBLA 298 (Mar. 20, 1984)

RENEWAL OF LEASE

Where the current fair rental value of a small tract lease has been determined in accordance with accepted appraisal procedures and the lessee contends that the rental is excessive, the burden is upon the lessee to prove by positive, substantial evidence that the appraisal is in error.

SODIUM LEASES AND PERMITS

GENERALLY

A natural brine containing water and ions of sodium, potassium, calcium, magnesium, and chlorine may be considered a valuable deposit of a sodium compound within the meaning of 30 U.S.C. § 262 (1976) if either of two contingencies occur. First, sodium must be present in sufficient quantity as to be commercially valuable. Second, sodium must be essential to the molecular structure of the valuable mineral.

Land is "known to be valuable" for a mineral subject to the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, as amended, when "known conditions at the time [of location] were plainly such as to engender the belief that the land contained mineral deposits of such quality and in such quantity as would render their extraction profitable and justify expenditures to that end." United States v. Southern Pacific Co., 251 U.S. 1, 13-14 (1919); Diamond Coal Co. v. United States, 233 U.S. 236, 239-40 (1914). In determining whether mineral deposits are such as to render their extraction profitable and justify expenditures, extrinsic factors, such as the cost of extraction, processing, transportation, and marketing must be considered.

Where sodium ions are commingled in a brine with calcium, potassium, and chlorine ions and no valuable deposit of a sodium or potassium compound is present, contestees' evaporation of such brine does not violate the Multiple Mineral Development Act, 30 U.S.C. §§ 521-531 (1976).

The Administrative Law Judge gave proper weight to Government testimony in dismissing the Government's contest complaint where the evidence supported a finding of the existence of a sodium-calcium-chloride brine, but did not support a finding that such brine was "known to be valuable" for a Leasing Act mineral.

The existence of a "related product" within the meaning of 30 U.S.C. § 262 (1976) presumes the existence of a valuable sodium compound deposit.

United States v. Leron Bardsley (Trustee), Marlene M. Bardsley, Individually and as Administratrix of the Estate of Donald M. Bardsley (Deceased), 45 IBLA 367 (Feb. 7, 1980)

LEASES

Sodium leases, which have a determinate 20-year primary term, are not automatically extended or renewed. The Secretary may renew the lease upon the lessee's timely application for renewal.

The lessee's preference right at the time of renewal under sec. 24 of the Mineral Lands Leasing Act is only to be preferred above other applicants and is not an entitlement, as against the United States, to a renewal lease.

In adjudicating an application for renewal of a sodium lease, the Secretary retains his discretion respecting whether or not to lease. That discretion is limited in that if the decision is made to lease, a preference is extended to the existing lessee who has made timely application.

Existing sodium leases which are beyond their primary term but for which the lessee has made timely application for renewal are continued in force by the provisions of sec. 9 of the Administrative Procedure Act so long as it takes the Department to adjudicate the application.

Sodium Lease Renewals, M-36983 (Mar. 18, 1982)
89 I.D. 173

A sodium prospecting permittee who applies for a preference right sodium lease, alleging with supportive data that he has discovered a valuable deposit of sodium and that the land is chiefly valuable for sodium, as required by sec. 24 of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, as amended, 30 U.S.C. § 262 (1976), is entitled to a hearing conducted in accordance with sec. 5 of the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. § 554 (1976), before his lease application may be finally rejected for failure to prove such a discovery.

PERMITS

"Notation rule." Under the "notation rule" when the official records of the Bureau of Land Management have been noted to reflect the devotion of land to a particular use which is exclusive of other conflicting uses, no incompatible rights in that land can attach by reason of any subsequent application or entry until the record has been changed to reflect that the land is no longer so segregated. The rule applies even where the notation was posted to the records in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated or expired, so long as the records continue to reflect it as efficacious.

Under 43 CFR 3501.1-6, the Bureau of Land Management must reject applications for prospecting permits that are filed for lands not available for prospecting.

When deciding whether issuance of a sodium prospecting permit is appropriate, the Bureau of Land Management, as the delegate of the Secretary, is entitled to rely on the reasoned opinion of Minerals Management Service as its technical expert. A mineral determination made by Minerals Management Service will not be disturbed in the absence of a clear and definite showing of error.

PREFERENCE RIGHT LEASES

BLM properly applied the regulations set forth in 43 CFR Subparts 3520-21, effective May 7, 1976, to preference right lease applications pending on the effective date of such regulations.

BLM properly excluded from an applicant's demonstrated reserves of trona those reserves which the applicant, by stipulation in the prospecting permit, had agreed would not be subject to mining or recovery operations.

An exchange application tendered pursuant to 43 CFR Subpart 3526 is properly rejected by BLM where a preference right lease applicant has not demonstrated to the Secretary that he has a preference right to a lease.

A hearing is properly ordered pursuant to 43 CFR 3521.1-1(j) where a preference right lease application for trona is rejected and the applicant has alleged in his application facts sufficient to show that he is entitled to a lease. At the hearing, the permittee shall have both the burden of going forward and the burden of proof, and must show by a preponderance of the evidence that he has discovered a valuable deposit of trona and that the land is chiefly valuable therefor.

John S. Wold, Eugene V. Simons, 48 IBLA 106 (May 30, 1980)

ROYALTIES

"Gross value at the point of shipment to market." The royalty rate for products mined and disposed under sodium leases must be imposed on the "gross value of the sodium compounds and other related products at the point of shipment to market," which means the gross value of a refined product for sale in an established market even when applied to an intermediate product and without deduction for the cost that would be incurred in producing a refined product.

Sales commissions are not an allowable deduction in the computation of royalty under sodium leases.

Sales commissions are not an allowable deduction in the computation of royalty under sodium leases.

To the extent that a commission is granted to distributors or jobbers who purchase soda ash for resale, such a discount represents an allowable deduction from the royalty base; however, where one company has a managing interest in a second company and under a sales agreement the first company purchases all the second company's product and reimburses the second company on the basis of the "net sales proceeds" received by the first company minus a retained commission, the first company cannot be considered a distributor for resale so as to allow the retained commission to be deducted from the royalty base. In such a situation the retained commission is properly characterized as a sales commission and not deductible.

In computing royalty under sodium leases where one company has a managing interest in a second company and under a sales agreement the first company purchases all the second company's product, if the first company buys the soda ash for consumption at its own plants, it cannot use an unpublished preferential sales price in determining the amount owed the second company. The second company is properly required to pay royalties on the basis of the published delivered prices paid by the first company's customers less the customary rail freight equalization allowances.

In computing royalty under sodium leases where one company has a managing interest in a second company and under a sales agreement the first company purchases all the second company's product, exchange agreement billings by the first company, which amount to discounts, understate the gross value of the soda ash for royalty purposes.

The effect of a timely filed notice of appeal is to suspend the authority of the deciding official to exercise jurisdiction relating to the subject of the appeal. It does not have the effect, however, of suspending the authority of BLM to act on matters which, while related to the subject of the appeal, are nevertheless functionally independent therefrom.

Failure to pay the annual rental for a special land use permit constitutes sufficient ground for termination of the use. 43 CFR 2920.4(a).

BLM's decision to award the one special recreation permit to use the Rio Grande River in New Mexico for commercial river trips which is available to first-time applicants by placing all closely qualified first-time applications into a drawing is an equitable way to award the permit and will be affirmed.

BLM's decision to restrict to 12 the number of special recreation permits to use the Rio Grande River in New Mexico for commercial river trips will be affirmed where the record shows that congestion on the river justifies such a restriction.

Outdoor Adventures, S.A., 50 IBLA 90 (Sept. 17, 1980)

The issuance of special use permits is discretionary, and BLM may properly reject a permit application for commercial river rafting where the proposed use would exceed the river's carrying capacity and would be inconsistent with the objectives, responsibilities, or programs for the management of the public lands involved.

Whitewater Expeditions & Tours, 52 IBLA 80 (Jan. 9, 1981)

The issuance of special use permits is discretionary, and BLM may properly reject a permit application for an organized off-road motorcycle race where the proposed use would adversely affect critical deer winter range and would be inconsistent with the objectives, responsibilities, or programs for the management of the public lands involved.

Cascade Motorcycle Club, 56 IBLA 134 (July 20, 1981)

Public land may be "appropriated" to a public project or purpose by a Federal or state agency if such appropriation is under authority of law and there is a physical devotion of the land to such use on the ground. Such an appropriation does not segregate or withdraw the land, but creates an easement which is protected, and any subsequent entry, claim, or location is subject thereto. Where a free-use material site permit with a fixed date of expiration is held by a state agency and the site is later included in a homestead entry application, after the rights of the entryman are vested the free-use permit may not be converted to a material site right-of-way with an indefinite term, but the homestead entry remains subject to the permit until it expires.

BLM's decision to approve a transfer of a permit for authorized use on the Rogue River, designated as a wild and scenic river pursuant to the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968, 16 U.S.C. § 1271 (1976), from one commercial outfitter to another is proper where it maintains the 50/50 allocation of river use between commercial outfitters and private boaters.

Where the Bureau of Land Management has dismissed a protest to the transfer of a special use permit for river rafting without considering evidence in the record, which tends to support certain allegations in the protest, the case will be remanded to BLM for reconsideration of the evidence and a final determination of whether there has been a violation of the guidelines which state that an authorized outfitter's authorization to conduct float trips is not a salable commodity.

A notice to cease trespass and order to remove improvements may be set aside to allow consideration of a special use permit with appropriate restrictions where appellant concedes lack of right to the land and it is not clear that a temporary use authorization would interefere with any immediate need of the land for public purposes.

Juliet Marsh Brown, 64 IBLA 379 (June 17, 1982)

The issuance of special use permits is discretionary, and BLM may accept or reject a permit application depending upon its consistency with the objectives, responsibilities, or programs for the management of the public lands involved. Where a duly authorized officer has exercised this responsibility, his actions will ordinarily be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

National Public Lands Task Force, Nevada Outdoor Recreation Ass'n., Inc., 70 IBLA 214 (Jan. 24, 1983)

Use fees for special recreation use permits for competitive use in areas other than developed recreational sites are calculated pursuant to 43 CFR 8372.4(b)(2). This section provides for a use fee of 5 percent of the gross receipts (with certain minimums). However, there is no definition of the term "gross receipts" in the pertinent regulations or enabling legislation. Therefore, if a permittee appeals from a determination of the use fee owing under a special recreation use permit, the permittee must ordinarily demonstrate that: (1) The fee calculation contained mathematical errors or errors with respect to the amount, in fact, received; (2) the fee calculation was made using a formula which differed from that specifically agreed upon or contained in the permit; or (3) the fee calculation was not the same as had been previously applied to the permit and the permittee had no reason to believe that the formula would not be the same.

Scors International, 78 IBLA 142 (Dec. 29, 1983)

The exercise of Secretarial discretion involved in the issuance of special use permits includes the authority to set permit conditions and establish penalties for violation of permit conditions. A temporary suspension of a permit imposed by the authorized officer for violations of permit conditions is found to be proper where it is shown the permit holder failed to make required reports and failed to mark boats to identify the permit holder as required by the permit conditions.

Rogue River Outfitters Ass'n, 83 IBLA 151 (Oct. 10, 1984)

A BLM determination to issue a special recreation use permit for a snowmobile race on the Iditarod National Historic Trail is not inconsistent with the nature and purpose of that trail which commemorates the Alaska gold rush era, where the permit contains numerous stipulations designed to protect the public and the environment.

The National Historic Preservation Act, 16 U.S.C. § 470f (1982), provides that the head of any Federal agency having authority to license any undertaking shall take into account the effect on any property eligible for inclusion on the Register of Historic Places and provide the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation the opportunity to comment. Consultation with the Advisory Council is not necessary, however, where during the consideration of an application for a special recreation use permit for the Iditarod National Historic Trail, BLM makes a determination of no effect pursuant to 36 CFR 800.4(b)(1) and that determination is supported by the record in the case.

STATE EXCHANGES

GENERALLY

A protest against approval of a state exchange application is properly dismissed where the exchange is shown to be in the public interest under sec. 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, and it is immaterial that the protestants may be permittees or licensees of the selected lands whose grazing privileges would have been lost upon completion of the exchange, in that neither a licensee nor a permittee has a vested right in the land covered by the license or permit and such land is available for selection by a state.

Tom Hotesting, 73 IBLA 320 (June 7, 1983)

Where a deed embracing certain base lands is tendered to the United States in an application for an exchange under the Forest Lieu Exchange Act, Act of June 4, 1897, 30 Stat. 31, which title is based on a deed issued for state school lands to a fictitious individual, such deed vests no title in the United States. Where, however, the state deed is issued to a real person, even though it may have been fraudulently obtained from the state, acceptance by the United States of the exchange application is sufficient to vest title in the United States to the base property, even though that title might be subject to defeasance in a proper proceeding.

Where the United States had accepted an application for a forest lieu exchange under the provisions of the Act of June 4, 1897, 30 Stat. 31, title to the base property vested in the United States. Such title was not divested by either the subsequent refusal of the United States to complete the exchange or by the acquisition of the selection rights emanating from the acceptance of the application by a third-party which had been defrauded of the base lands through the actions of the original applicant.

Where the United States had accepted an application for a forest lieu exchange under the provisions of the Act of June 4, 1897, 30 Stat. 31, which application was based on base lands fraudulently secured from a state, and the state subsequently obtained a quitclaim from the applicant of all his interest in the lands, the state did not regain title to the base lands but rather was vested with all selection rights which had properly appertained to the exchange application.

Where the record establishes that, but for the actions of the Department in improperly approving an exchange, a state would have properly exercised its exchange rights pursuant to applicable law, the Department will be estopped from subsequently asserting the exchange was improper where, as here, it would no longer be possible for the state to exercise its exchange rights.

Under the United States Supreme Court's decision in Wyoming v. United States, 255 U.S. 489 (1921), an application for a forest lieu exchange was accepted by the filing of a proper exchange and the acceptability of an exchange was to be judged with reference to the facts existing at the time of filing. The actual acceptance of an exchange application, however, even if based on a misapprehension of the facts, vested title to the offered lands in the United States.

The classification of land as Supplement A, B, or C, by the Oregon Supreme Court in State v. Hyde, 88 Or. 1, 169 P. 757 (1918), is not binding on the United States as to the factual predicates thereof, particularly as the United States was not a party to the case.

When a state obtained a quitclaim deed from a forest lieu applicant whose application had been accepted by the United States, the state merely acquired the same rights to complete the selection which were possessed by the original applicant. Where the state failed to record this forest lieu selection right under the Act of Aug. 5, 1955, 69 Stat. 534, or tender such right for payment under the Act of July 6, 1960, 74 Stat. 334, all rights flowing from the forest lieu selection right to either complete an exchange or have the base property reconveyed terminated.

While it is a general rule that adverse possession does not run against a state, this rule does not apply as against the United States. Where the United States has maintained open and notorious possession of certain parcels of land for over 80 years, the United States has acquired title to those parcels through adverse possession even though the record title holder was a state.

John C. and Martha W. Thomas d.b.a. Tungsten Mining Co., 53 IBLA 182 (Mar. 17, 1981)

Applications for Alaska Native allotments in "core" townships of Native villages are subject to the statutory approval contained in sec. 905(a)(1) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, notwithstanding a State selection or tentative approval thereof for the same lands prior to Dec. 18, 1971.

Agnes S. Samuelson, 56 IBLA 242 (July 22, 1981) 88 I.D. 663

"Notation rule." Under the notation rule a millsite claim, located at a time when the master title plat in the local Bureau of Land Management office shows that the lands embraced by the claim are included in a state selection application, is properly declared null and void ab initio because notation of the state selection application on the official records segregates the land from further appropriation. The rule applies even where the notation was posted in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

Under 43 CFR 2091.6-4 and 2627.4(b), the filing of a state's application to select lands, where the filing is regular on its face, segregates the lands from all subsequent appropriation, including location and entry under the mining laws and a millsite located while the land is so segregated is null and void ab initio.

A mining claim or millsite located on land at a time when the land is segregated from the operation of the mining laws by a State selection application is properly declared null and void ab initio.

John C. and Martha W. Thomas, d.b.a. Tungsten Mining Co. (On Reconsideration), 59 IBLA 364 (Nov. 9, 1981)

A selection by the State of Alaska under sec. 6(b) of the Alaska Statehood Act is limited to public lands which are "vacant, unappropriated, and unreserved." A right-of-way for the Alaska Railroad across the public lands constitutes an easement which does not separate the servient estate from the public domain with the result that the land may be available for selection subject to reservation of a railroad right-of-way in any patent issued to the State.

The Alaska Railroad, 65 IBLA 376 (July 20, 1982)

The final approval of a list of state selected lands ended the Department's authority to resolve conflicting claims to those lands, including its authority to recognize the validity of mining claims situated thereon.

STATE SELECTIONS--Continued

Where on appeal the Board determines that, in declaring a millsite claim null and void ab initio because it was located on land which had been patented to the state, BLM mistakenly fixed the situs of the claim and that the claim is actually on land open to entry, the Board will reverse the BLM decision.

Savage Construction Co., Inc., 79 IBLA 389 (Mar. 27, 1984)

Prior to the promulgation of 43 CFR 2091.2-6, the filing of a state indemnity selection application did not segregate the identified lands from operation of the mining laws prior to classification of the lands as suitable for indemnity selection.

Leo Rhea Partnership, 80 IBLA 1 (Mar. 27, 1984)

BLM may not declare a mining claim located on land subject to a State indemnity selection application null and void ab initio because of the segregative effect arising from the filing of the application pursuant to 43 CFR 2091.2-6 where the state's application was filed prior to promulgation of the regulation.

James R. Houghton, Wm. A. Houghton, 80 IBLA 195 (Apr. 24, 1984)

Where the State of Oregon has selected indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for school sections within an unsurveyed township in the Siskiyou National Forest and thereafter a reprotraction or survey is run revealing new fractional townships within the area originally protracted, the State is entitled to indemnity lands for those new townships in accordance with the compact it entered with the United States by Act of Feb. 14, 1859.

A state selecting indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for unsurveyed school sections within a national forest shall be entitled to select indemnity lands to the extent of two sections for each of said townships in lieu of secs. 16 and 36 therein. Where a protraction on which the state relies to make its indemnity selections reveals that a fractional township is present, the state's entitlement to indemnity lands is calculated according to the pro rata rule set forth at 43 U.S.C. § 852 (1976).

Where a survey on which the state relies to make its indemnity selections pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, reveals a fractional township with a school section in place, the state's entitlement should be in an amount equal to the acreage shown by the surveyed school section or in an amount determined by the pro rata rule at the election of the state.

Until a survey of public lands has been run and approved, the designated sections of a township are undefined and the lands are unidentified.

Where the State of Oregon makes an initial selection of indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for school sections within an unsurveyed fractional township in a national forest, it is not entitled to additional indemnity lands should a subsequent reprotraction or survey be made of the township.

A mining claim wholly located on land which has been segregated from mineral location by the filing of a state school land indemnity selection application is properly declared null and void at initio.

When Arizona filed its original application for selection of land as part of its entitlement to compensation for deficiencies for school trust lands pursuant to its enabling act, the Department did not have segregation authority to protect the selections. During the promulgation of 43 CFR 2091.2-6, Arizona submitted a request to have the previous applications withdrawn, consolidated, and amended to include additional lands. This will be deemed a reapplication under the circumstances of this case, the filing of which enabled the Department to segregate the lands described therein under 43 CFR 2091.2-6. Mining claims subsequently initiated on lands that were segregated by the reapplication were properly declared null and void at initio.

Amoco Minerals Co., 81 IBLA 23 (May 15, 1984)

A mining claim located on land segregated from such location by the filing of a state selection application is properly declared null and void ab initio; however, where the case record is unclear whether the land embraced by the claim was segregated by an application predating the location or whether the land was segregated by an amendment to the application filed subsequent to the location, the decision will be set aside and the case remanded.

Elsie May Staude, 82 IBLA 226 (Aug. 22, 1984)

STATUTES--Continued

Estoppel of the Government, especially where public lands are concerned, is an extraordinary remedy that can be successfully invoked only under truly extraordinary circumstances. An appellant mining claim owner may not claim that ignorance of applicable statutory and regulatory rules of recordation constitutes ignorance of a material fact, which is essential to estoppel, because all persons dealing with the Government are presumed to have knowledge thereof. That BLM did not notice the tardiness of appellant's submitted location notice, and then continued to record affidavits of labor, is unfortunate but is no ground for estoppel of the Government.

Harold E. Woods, 61 IBLA 359 (Feb. 16, 1982)

The presumption of abandonment under sec. 314 of FLPMA need not have been preceded by any particular notice from BLM, because the public is deemed to know the content of relevant statutes and regulations.

Like other entities of the executive branch of the Federal Government, the Board of Land Appeals is not empowered to adjudicate the constitutionality of a statute. That is the province of the judicial system.

Kenneth F. Cummings, 62 IBLA 206 (Mar. 10, 1982)

Ultimate control of the disposition of public lands and resources belongs to Congress, and the responsibility of the Interior Department is to administer them in accordance with the dictates of the legislative branch. The Board is obliged to affirm BLM's declaration of mining claim abandonment and voidance, irrespective of appellant's argument that such result is contrary to other policies legislated by Congress, where appellant has not complied with the clear requirements of the FLPMA recordation provision.

STATUTES--Continued

An essential element of a claim for estoppel is that the party asserting it must be ignorant of the material facts. Since all persons dealing with the Government are presumed to have knowledge of relevant statutes and duly promulgated regulations, a party cannot successfully plead ignorance of the rules governing oil and gas rental payment procedures without presentation of extraordinary circumstances which overcome the presumption.

Francis X. Furlong II, 73 IBLA 67 (May 16, 1983)

The Department of the Interior, as an agency of the executive branch of the Government, is not the proper forum to decide whether a statute enacted by Congress is unconstitutional.

Joseph A. Barnes et al., 78 IBLA 46 (Dec. 13, 1983)
90 I.D. 550

An essential element of a claim for estoppel is that the party asserting it must be ignorant of the true facts. Since, however, all persons are presumed to have knowledge of relevant statutory and regulatory provisions, an individual may not premise a claim of estoppel on information or advice contrary to such a provision, since the individual is properly charged with knowledge of the true facts.

STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION

GENERALLY

Interpretations of the mineral reservation in patents issued by the United States under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), must be consistent with the established rule that land grants are to be construed favorably to the Government, that nothing passes except what is conveyed in clear language, and that if there are doubts they are resolved for the Government, not against it.

In determining whether scoria is included in a mineral reservation in a patent issued under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), the interpretation of the reservation must take into account the intended use for which the land was conveyed and those uses which the Government intended to reserve.

Pacific Power & Light Co., 45 IBLA 127 (Jan. 23, 1980)

In Topaz Beryllium Co. v. United States, 649 F.2d 775 (10th Cir. 1981), it was held that "supplemental" mining claim information required only by the regulations, not FLPMA, is subject to cure. Failure to file a proof of labor timely or properly is not curable after the recordation deadline, because such filing is not "supplemental," being required by FLPMA itself.

Robert L. Nace et al., 63 IBLA 1 (Mar. 25, 1982)

When a statute analogous in text and history to one administered by the Department has been construed by the Supreme Court, but that Court has criticized its own construction even while failing to overrule it, the Department can regard the construction of the Railroad Affiliates & Coal Leasing, M-36945 (Dec. 6, 1982) 89 I.D. 610

The repeal of 43 U.S.C. § 733 (1970) (formerly 48 U.S.C. § 355a (1952)) by sec. 703(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 was intended to have future effect and not to alter rights or restrictions that had accrued under the provisions of the Alaska Native Townsite Act.

The fundamental principle of statutory construction that words are to be taken in their ordinary meaning unless they are technical terms or words of art is particularly applicable in the construction of statutes concerning Indians.

There is no indication of congressional intention that the restrictions upon land acquired under the Alaska Native Townsite Act be terminated upon a gift of that land from one Alaska Native to another.

Juanita Holsheimer v. Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs, 11 IBIA 155 (Apr. 14, 1983) 90 I.D. 165

Although the Equal Access to Justice Act, 5 U.S.C. § 504 (1982), may be characterized as a remedial statute, this does not support the proposition that it should be construed liberally. Every waiver of sovereign immunity is remedial, and statutes waiving sovereign immunity such as the Equal Access to Justice Act must be strictly construed.

Kaycee Bentonite Corp., 79 IBLA 182 (Feb. 28, 1984) 91 I.D. 138

The language of sec. 601(f) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1781(f) (1982), was intended by Congress to have application to patents issued to mining claims perfected after passage of the Act. A patent to a mining claim which had been perfected prior to passage of the Act should, therefore, not contain the restrictive language contemplated by sec. 601(f).

Effect must be given, if possible, to every word, clause, and sentence in a statute. Therefore, the application of sec. 601(f) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1781(f) (1982), to mineral patent must be made in a manner which recognizes valid existing rights of a mineral claimant at the time of passage of the Act.

ADMINISTRATIVE CONSTRUCTION

Interpretation of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act by the Bureau of Indian Affairs contemporaneous with the enactment of the statute and continued over the succeeding 9 years is relevant to a determination of the application to be given to the statute. The Agency refusal to enroll persons who were not United States citizens on Dec. 18, 1971, the effective date of the Act, is a reasonable application of the Act and of Departmental regulations implementing the Act, and gives the language of the statute

IMPLIED REPEALS

The conclusion that the Appropriations Act is independent leasing authority is not an implied repeal, pro tanto, of the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 because the Naval Petroleum Reserves Production Act of 1976 explicitly precluded the operation of the MLA on the NPR-A, and the Appropriations Act modified that withdrawal only for the purpose of the oil and gas leasing program authorized in the Appropriations Act.

The Act of Sept. 19, 1914 (38 Stat. 714), a statutory withdrawal of certain lands from the operation of all mineral and nonmineral laws of the United States pertaining to location, entry, or appropriation, for the reservation of such lands as a water supply reserve for the use of Salt Lake City, was not repealed by implication through enactment of the Mineral Leasing Act of Feb. 25, 1920, 30 U.S.C. § 181 (1976).

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

The legislative history of sec. 6 of the Federal Coal Leasing Amendments Act shows that the revision of sec. 7 of the MLA (30 U.S.C. § 207) was not retroactive, but applied to new leases and to "old" leases upon readjustment. The ten-year production period and revised royalty rates of amended sec. 7 must be imposed on "old" coal leases at readjustment. The legislative history to the 1978 coal leasing revisions (Act of Oct. 30, 1978) discloses that Congress understood and acted on the assumption that the amended sec. 7 royalty rates did apply to all "old" leases upon readjustment.

Whether Leases Issued Prior to August 4, 1976, Subject to Readjustment after that Date must be Readjusted to Conform to the Federal Coal Leasing Amendments Act of 1976, M-36939 (Sept. 17, 1981) 88 I.D. 1003

The position that only companies actually operating common carrier railroads and their "alter egos" are prohibited from holding federal coal leases by sec. 2(c) of the Mineral Lands Leasing Act and the position that affiliates of such companies are also prohibited are both reasonable, judicially defensible constructions of an ambiguous provision of law. The legislative history of sec. 2(c) fails to answer clearly the question whether affiliates of railroad companies are included in or excluded from the coverage of sec. 2(c).

The language of sec. 601(f) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1781(f) (1982), was intended by Congress to have application to patents issued to mining claims perfected after passage of the Act. A patent to a mining claim which had been perfected prior to passage of the Act should, therefore, not contain the restrictive language contemplated by sec. 601(f).

STOCK-RAISING HOMESTEADS
(See also Homesteads (Ordinary)--if included in this Index.)

Interpretations of the mineral reservation in patents issued by the United States under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), must be consistent with the established rule that land grants are to be construed favorably to the Government, that nothing passes except what is conveyed in clear language, and that if there are doubts they are resolved for the Government, not against it.

In determining whether scoria is included in a mineral reservation in a patent issued under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), the interpretation of the reservation must take into account the intended use for which the land was conveyed and those uses which the Government intended to reserve.

A patent of land under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 291 (1970), was not generally intended to give the grantee the right to use the land for mineral development, but mineral development was to proceed only under the mineral laws.

The mineral reservation in a patent issued under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 291 (1970), includes mineral substances which can be taken from the soil and which have a separate value, including those marketable minerals found at or near the surface, and which have no rare or exceptional character, regardless of whether they are subject to disposition under 30 U.S.C. § 601 (1976) or other existing statutory authority.

Sec. 9 of the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), contemplates that the Department of the Interior retains continuing jurisdiction and administration of mineral deposits reserved by that Act.

"Public lands." Under 43 CFR 3602.1 which defines a trespass, the term "public lands" includes mineral deposits reserved under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970).

Under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. §§ 291-301 (1970), there is no equitable basis for excluding valuable deposits of scoria from the scope of a Federal mineral reservation although the Government has successfully contended in other cases that common or surface minerals are not included in mineral reservations to the United States, because the rules of construction of private conveyances differ from those which govern Federal grants, and because 30 U.S.C. § 54 (1976) provides compensation for damage to surface owners' crops, improvements and grazing values.

Scoria which is valuable for surfacing roads is a mineral reserved to the United States in patents issued under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970).

Sec. 9 of the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1976), contemplates that the Department of the Interior retains continuing jurisdiction and administration of mineral deposits reserved by that Act.

Scoria which is valuable for surfacing roads is a mineral reserved to the United States in patents issued under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1976). However, in a case where scoria is used no differently from common earth, the record must demonstrate that the deposit of scoria has commercial value independent of such use.

BLM's decision to dismiss a protest by the holder of the surface estate in lands patented under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act against the sufficiency of the amount of a bond, put up by the claimant of mineral interests in those lands to cover damages to the surface estate from the claimant's mining and exploration activities, will be vacated and remanded for readjudication, where the record is devoid of facts of record to support this decision.

SURFACE MINING CONTROL AND RECLAMATION ACT OF 1977

GENERALLY.

Where a surface coal mining operation affects previously mined lands, the fact that an alleged violation could have existed before the present operation does not relieve the permittee from responsibility for the violation.

Central Oil and Gas, Inc., 2 IBSMA 308 (Oct. 23, 1980) 87 I.D. 494

Assuming, arguendo, that jurisdiction existed in the Board to review the merits of the proceedings below, it is clear that the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement possessed regulatory authority over appellant's surface mining operation and that appellant failed to raise any defense to the fact of violation, after being given full opportunity to do so.

William M. Johnson v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 84 IBLA 169 (Dec. 19, 1984)

ABATEMENT

Generally

A permittee's noncompliance with an order by OSM to abate an alleged violation of the backfilling and grading requirements of 30 CFR 715.14 cannot serve to excuse the permittee's noncompliance with an order by OSM to abate an alleged violation of the revegetation requirements of 30 CFR 715.20.

Old Home Ranch, Inc., 3 IBSMA 241 (Aug. 13, 1981) 88 I.D. 737

Where the record evidence does not support a finding that the recipient of a notice of violation requested an extension of time to abate a violation charged in the notice, prior to OSM's issuance of a cessation order for failure to abate the violation within the time prescribed for abatement, OSM's cessation order is properly upheld against the recipient's claim that conditions at the mine site warranted an extension of the abatement time.

Apex Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 19 (Mar. 2, 1982) 89 I.D. 87

Remedial Actions

When a permittee does not have approval from the regulatory authority for an exemption from the requirements of the Act at the time of an OSM inspection, the inspector may properly require remedial action of a reclamation nature in a notice of violation.

ABATEMENT--Continued

A notice of violation requiring a permittee to submit a drainage design for regulatory authority approval is proper even when such a design might include disturbance of an area within 100 feet of an intermittent or perennial stream because the regulatory authority could grant an exemption for that area under either 30 CFR 717.17(a) or 715.17(d)(3).

Under the circumstances of this case, the Board declines to uphold a cessation order that forces a permittee to take an illegal action.

The Board declines to hold that the permit boundary, as identified in a state permit, protects a permittee in all cases from being required to abate the off-site detrimental consequences of its operations.

Carbon Fuel Co., 3 IBSMA 207 (July 17, 1981) 88 I.D. 660

The Board will not uphold a cessation order issued for a failure to abate a violation charged where that failure is premised on noncompliance with a remedial measure which has no rational relationship to the violation charged.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE

Generally

Affidavits to support allegations of fact in a motion for summary decision filed pursuant to 43 CFR 4.1125 are not necessary when there is no disputed issue as to any material fact.

Daniel Bros. Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 45 (Apr. 10, 1980) 87 I.D. 138

Under the circumstances of this case, it was error for the Administrative Law Judge to vacate a notice of violation on his own motion on the grounds that it lacked reasonable specificity as required by sec. 521(a)(5) of the Act when the parties expressed no confusion about the nature of the alleged violation.

Grafton Coal Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 316 (Nov. 4, 1980) 87 I.D. 521

Under 43 CFR 4.1153 OSM has an absolute right to submit an answer to a petition within 30 days of its receipt of a copy of the petition. After that time, an Administrative Law Judge has discretion to regulate the scope of OSM's answer in a manner reasonably related to any prejudice suffered by the opposing party as a result of OSM's delay.

When an answer is filed by OSM after the time prescribed in 43 CFR 4.1153 but before any claim of prejudice from the delay is raised by the petitioner, it is an abuse of discretion for an Administrative Law Judge to issue, sua sponte, a summary decision in favor of the petitioner on the basis of presumed prejudice to the petitioner.

Lake Coal Co., Inc., 3 IBSMA 9 (Feb. 17, 1981) 88 I.D. 266

Although an Administrative Law Judge has discretion to take appropriate action to correct the late filing of an answer in a proceeding to review a notice of violation or a cessation order, except in extreme circumstances it is not appropriate to vacate the notice or order.

William Francis Rice, 3 IBSMA 17 (Feb. 19, 1981) 88 I.D. 269

A determination by an Administrative Law Judge, sua sponte, that an application for review is not in compliance with 43 CFR 4.1164 relieves OSM of its obligation to answer the application, and, unless otherwise ordered, OSM is entitled to the full 20 days prescribed in 43 CFR 4.1165(a) to answer an amended application.

Concord Coal Corp., 3 IBSMA 26 (Feb. 19, 1981) 88 I.D. 273

An Administrative Law Judge has discretion to determine appropriate action to correct the late filing of an answer in a proceeding to review a notice of violation; however, vacation of the notice of violation is not appropriate action when the applicant has shown no prejudice resulting from a late answer.

Peabody Coal Co., Inc., 3 IBSMA 32 (Mar. 3, 1981) 88 I.D. 344

An applicant for review of a notice of violation who voluntarily failed to appear at the scheduled review hearing was properly deemed to have waived its right to a hearing, and the Administrative Law Judge could accept as true the allegations of fact contained in the notice of violation under review.

Knowledge possessed by an Administrative Law Judge but not appearing of record in the case before the Board is not a sufficient basis for upholding a decision in a formal proceeding under the Administrative Procedure Act.

Capital Coal Corp., 4 IBSMA 179 (Nov. 23, 1982) 89 I.D. 594

Where an application for review alleges only that a notice of violation or cessation order is "improper" and the applicant does not amend or move to amend the application to specifically contest the fact of violation and does not object to exclusion of that issue at the hearing, the hearing may properly be limited to the issue of the jurisdiction of the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement.

Titan Coal Corp. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, 78 IBLA 205 (Jan. 5, 1984)

When the record accompanying a decision by the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement responding to a citizen complaint filed pursuant to 30 CFR 721.13 provides no information upon which an objective, independent review of the basis for the decision can be conducted by the Board, the decision will be set aside and the case remanded for further consideration.

Burden of Proof

In a civil penalty proceeding when OSM's prima facie case as to the fact of violation is effectively controverted by the person charged with the violation, the violation must be vacated because OSM has the ultimate burden of persuasion in accordance with 43 CFR 4.1155.

Belva Coal Co., Inc., 3 IBSMA 83 (Apr. 17, 1981) 88 I.D. 448

In a civil penalty proceeding to review an alleged violation of the requirement of 30 CFR 717.17(a)(1) that drainage be passed through a sedimentation pond, OSM bears the ultimate burden of persuasion as to three basic elements of proof: (1) The existence of surface drainage which came into contact with disturbed area; (2) that this drainage did not pass through a sedimentation pond; and (3) that this drainage flowed off the permit area.

The burden of proving facts and circumstances to support an exemption from regulation by OSM rests with the party claiming the exemption.

Avanti Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 101 (July 16, 1982) 89 I.D. 378

A prima facie case is made where sufficient evidence is presented to establish the essential facts. An applicant for review claiming that the effluent limitations set forth in 30 CFR 715.17(a) are not applicable to discharges from its sedimentation pond bears the burden of proving the facts upon which the claim of inapplicability is based.

Jeffco Sales & Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 140 (Sept. 21, 1982) 89 I.D. 467

OSM makes a prima facie case by submitting sufficient evidence to establish the essential facts of the violation; when it makes that showing and the showing goes unrebutted, it also carries its ultimate burden of persuasion.

Tiger Corp., 4 IBSMA 202 (Dec. 17, 1982) 89 I.D. 622

One claiming an exemption from regulation under the Act bears the burden of affirmatively demonstrating entitlement to the exemption.

Jewell Smokeless Coal Corp., 4 IBSMA 211 (Dec. 17, 1982) 89 I.D. 624

Dorsac Coal Co., 74 IBLA 100 (June 30, 1983)

In an application for review proceeding a person contesting the jurisdiction of the Office of Surface Mining must plead and prove the basis for its claim as an affirmative defense.

Where an applicant for review fails to establish by a preponderance of evidence that a violation did not occur, a notice of violation will be sustained.

Harry Smith Construction Co. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 78 IBLA 27 (Dec. 13, 1983)

The application of the general rule that in hearing proceedings initiated by a petition for review OSM has the burden of going forward to establish a prima facie case and the ultimate burden of persuasion as to the fact of violation and as to the amount of the penalty must take into account the issues actually raised in a petition for review. Where a petitioner did not specify any error in OSM's calculation of a proposed civil penalty, OSM's evidentiary burden in the review proceeding was limited to prevailing in its case in support of the merits of the alleged violations.

OSM satisfied the burden of persuasion in support of an alleged violation of the permit requirement in 30 CFR 710.11(a)(2) when, in an evidentiary hearing, OSM demonstrated that the subject mining activity was conducted after May 3, 1978, and that OSM had been unable to discover evidence of a state permit covering

Findings

When a cessation order indicates that it is being issued both because the condition, practice, or violation is causing or can reasonably be expected to cause significant, imminent environmental harm and because there has been a failure to abate a violation listed in a notice of violation, a finding of either of those grounds is sufficient to sustain the cessation order.

Hayden & Hayden Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 238 (Sept. 12, 1980) 87 I.D. 414

Modification of a notice of violation or cessation order must be based on findings of fact and conclusions of law after a hearing with notice to the parties.

Harry Smith Construction Co. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 78 IBLA 27 (Dec. 13, 1983)

Intervention

An order by an Administrative Law Judge denying a petition to intervene may be appealed to the Board under 43 CFR 4.1271(a).

Where a corporation petitions to intervene in a suspension or revocation proceeding on its own behalf and not as a representative of its members, but alleges no injury to itself, it is not entitled to intervene as a matter of right under 43 CFR 4.1110(c)(2).

Where the only interest asserted by one petitioning to intervene in a suspension or revocation proceeding is in the precedential effect of the ruling to be made, and the ultimate interest of petitioner may be asserted in another, more appropriate proceeding, denial of permission to intervene under 43 CFR 4.1110(d) is not an abuse of discretion.

OSM properly refused to conduct a Federal inspection or undertake enforcement action where a mine owner continued to conduct only reclamation operations under an interim permit after 8 months following approval of a state's permanent program. SMCRA and the applicable regulations do not require an operator who has ceased all mining operations prior to the approval of a state's permanent program to obtain a permanent program permit.

Generally

"Extraction of coal as an incidental part." For the purposes of 30 U.S.C. § 1278(3) (Supp. II 1978) and 30 CFR 700.11(d), which exclude the "extraction of coal as an incidental part of Federal, State or local government-financed highway or other construction" from the coverage of Federal performance standards otherwise applicable to surface coal mining operations, the phrase "extraction of coal as an incidental part" means, in accordance with 30 CFR 707.5, the extraction of coal which is necessary, from an engineering standpoint, to enable the construction to be accomplished and does not mean the extraction of coal for the purpose of financing the construction.

Concord Coal Corp., 3 IBSMA 92 (Apr. 17, 1981) 88 I.D. 456

"Roads maintained with public funds." Under an agreement with the West Virginia Department of Highways whereby the right-of-way for a secondary road has been reopened and maintained by a coal company for its use and that of the general public, the resulting road is not one "maintained with public funds" that is excluded from the definition of "roads" in 30 CFR 710.5 and, thus, the road is subject to the construction standards in 30 CFR 715.17(1)(2).

Where an operator removes coal in the process of rehabilitating a State road but there is no proof that the State expended funds to finance the project comprising at least 50 percent of the cost of the project, the project does not fall within the definition of "Government-financed construction" in 30 CFR 707.5, and the operator therefore cannot claim the exemption from applicability of the Act appearing in sec. 528(3).

West Virginia Energy, Inc., 3 IBSMA 301 (Sept. 17, 1981) 88 I.D. 831

A road used in surface coal mining and reclamation operations is subject to regulation by OSM, in accordance with the performance standards at 30 CFR 715.17(1)(2)(iv), unless it is shown to be maintained with public funds.

Fetterolf Mining Sales, Inc., 4 IBSMA 29 (Mar. 15, 1982)

The mere nominal status of a road as a public road is not enough to bring the road within the exclusionary language of 30 CFR 710.5.

To be exempt from regulation under the Act, in accordance with the exclusionary language of the definition of "roads" in 30 CFR 710.5, a road must be shown to be maintained with public funds.

"Roads maintained with public funds." Where an access and haul road's public status is conditioned on a coal operator's agreement to be primarily responsible for maintaining the road, it is not a road "maintained with public funds" within the meaning of this phrase in the definition of "roads" in 30 CFR 710.5.

Peabody Coal Co. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 79 IBLA 14 (Feb. 3, 1984)

One claiming an exemption from regulation under the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 bears the burden of affirmatively demonstrating entitlement to the exemption.

A coal mine which disturbs less than 2 acres of surface land is exempt from the application of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977. However, an operation which is less then 2 acres in size can be under the purview of the Act if it is one of a number of operations which are collectively disturbing in excess of 2 acres and which can logically be considered to be one mine. The party claiming that an operation is, in fact, one of a number of sites which make up a single mine disturbing in excess of 2 acres carries the burden of establishing that fact.

Initial Regulatory Program

The Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement has jurisdiction to enforce the initial Federal performance standards against a surface disturbance in Kentucky of less than 2 acres and the Federal 2-acre exemption set forth in 30 CFR 700.11(b) is not applicable where the disturbance is physically related to a surface coal mining operation under permit from the Commonwealth of Virginia, and where the disturbance is not a discrete operation but was undertaken in furtherance of the Virginia operation.

Blackwood Fuel Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 359 (Nov. 24, 1980) 87 I.D. 579

The initial program regulations are applicable to a surface coal mining operation immediately when a state permit for the operation is issued on or after Feb. 3, 1978.

Universal Coal Co., 3 IBSMA 200 (July 16, 1981) 88 I.D. 657

Compliance with state mining permit conditions does not excuse noncompliance with the initial Federal performance standards.

Greater Pardee, Inc., 3 IBSMA 313 (Sept. 24, 1981) 88 I.D. 846

As a general performance obligation under the initial Federal regulatory program, a person who conducts surface coal mining and reclamation operations on and after May 3, 1978, must obtain a state permit for the operations if required to do so under state law. When state law defines surface coal mining to include exploration activity, the Federal performance obligation extends to such activity.

The general performance obligation under the initial Federal regulatory program that a person who conducts surface coal mining and reclamation operations on and after May 3, 1978, must obtain a state permit for the operations if required to do so under state law is applicable to persons who allow mining operations on lands under their legal control even when the persons are not actually engaged in the mining operations.

The obligation under the Federal initial regulatory program of a person who conducts surface coal mining and reclamation operations to obtain a state permit for the operations if required to do so under state law is applicable only in the context of mining operations conducted on and after May 3, 1978; therefore, action by OSM to enforce the obligation was not properly upheld in the absence of evidence that the subject mining activity occurred after that date.

OSM satisfied the burden of persuasion in support of an alleged violation of the permit requirement in 30 CFR 710.11(a)(2) when, in an evidentiary hearing, OSM demonstrated that the subject mining activity was conducted after May 3, 1978, and that OSM had been unable to discover evidence of a state permit covering the activity, and the person charged with the violation did not offer any documentary evidence in support of the assertion that the subject mining activity was covered by an existing state permit.

OSM lacked regulatory authority to enforce the special performance standards in 30 CFR 716.5(b) (applicable to anthracite surface coal mining and reclamation operations in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania) with respect to surface coal mining and

"Appropriate contour." "Appropriate contour," as used in 30 CFR 715.14(e), is not synonomous with "approximate original contour."

Wayne Yarnell, 3 IBSMA 188 (July 15, 1981) 88 I.D. 652

The complete elimination of highwalls is an absolute requirement of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act and its implementing regulations and neither that Act nor those regulations provide authority for an evaluation of comparative environmental harm from eliminating highwall exposures or allowing such exposures to remain.

"Valid existing rights." To demonstrate "valid existing rights," and thereby avoid a restriction on surface coal mining under sec. 522(e) of the Act and 30 CFR Part 761, the claimant must show that it held property rights on Aug. 3, 1977, that were created by a legally binding conveyance, lease, deed, contract or other document which authorizes the claimant to produce coal by a surface coal mining operation.

"Valid existing rights." Relevant state law is a proper aid in the interpretation of the terms of the document relied upon to establish "valid existing rights" under sec. 522(e) of the Act and 30 CFR Part 761.

"Valid existing rights." When the document relied upon to establish "valid existing rights" to surface mine coal is a deed which conveys both the mineral and overlying surface estates, authorization to surface mine will be presumed, for the purposes of sec. 522(e) of the Act and 30 CFR 761.5, in the absence of language to the contrary in the conveyance.

"Valid existing rights." A local government's zoning ordinance which contains restrictions on surface coal mining will not be considered to preclude "valid existing rights," under sec. 522(e) of the Act and 30 CFR 761.5, where it is shown that the restrictions of the local ordinance have been preempted by state law.

Final Order

A qualitative analysis of any order asserted to be a final order of the Office of Hearings and Appeals which is a prerequisite to an award of costs and expenses under the Act must be done before such an award may be considered further; the regulations contemplate that such a qualifying final order will have been issued by OHA setting forth a judgment on the merits of the resolution of the administrative proceeding. Here no such order has been issued and an award would thus be inappropriate.

When a cessation order indicates that it is being issued both because the condition, practice, or violation is causing or can reasonably be expected to cause significant, imminent environmental harm and because there has been a failure to abate a violation listed in a notice of violation, a finding of either of those grounds is sufficient to sustain the cessation order.

OSM has established a prima facie case that a cessation order was properly issued when it shows a violation, practice, or condition that is causally connected to significant, imminent environmental harm or a reasonable expectation of such harm.

Cessation orders are extreme sanctions and should not be issued indiscriminately, but where the prerequisites for a cessation order are found, there need be no hesitation in closing the operation or its relevant portion.

Under the circumstances of this case, a cessation order requiring that all underground pumping of slurry be stopped was not overly broad.

Island Creek Coal Co., 3 IBSMA 165 (June 15, 1981) 88 I.D. 581

penalty with its petition for review, the petition must be dismissed.

Badger Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 147 (July 25, 1980)
87 I.D. 319

Under 43 CFR 4.1153 OSM has an absolute right to submit an answer to a petition within 30 days of its receipt of a copy of the petition. After that time, an Administrative Law Judge has discretion to regulate the scope of OSM's answer in a manner reasonably related to any prejudice suffered by the opposing party as a result of OSM's delay.

When an answer is filed by OSM after the time prescribed in 43 CFR 4.1153 but before any claim of prejudice from the delay is raised by the petitioner, it is an abuse of discretion for an Administrative Law Judge to issue, sua sponte, a summary decision in favor of the petitioner on the basis of presumed prejudice to the petitioner.

Lake Coal Co., Inc., 3 IBSMA 9 (Feb. 17, 1981)
88 I.D. 266

In a civil penalty proceeding when OSM's prima facie case as to the fact of violation is effectively controverted by the person charged with the violation, the violation must be vacated because OSM has the ultimate burden of persuasion in accordance with 43 CFR 4.1155.

Belva Coal Co., Inc., 3 IBSMA 83 (Apr. 17, 1981)

Even where the petitioner, in a civil penalty proceeding, admits the validity of the issuance of a notice of violation and the hearing proceeds on the penalty amount issues only, the Administrative Law Judge is not bound to accept the admission when the penalty amount evidence raises a question in his mind whether the violation in fact occurred.

Where the parties have agreed to the existence of a violation and a penalty hearing is conducted on the basis of that agreement, if the Administrative Law Judge determines, either during or after the hearing, that the evidence may not support a violation, he shall make that determination known to the parties and, if necessary, reopen the hearing to allow OSM an opportunity to prove its case and the operator to counter that proof.

Where OSM fails to serve permittee with copy of a proposed assessment and of the worksheets showing the computation within 30 days of the issuance of the notice of violation, pursuant to regulation, such failure shall not result in administrative relief since the regulation is directory rather than mandatory.

The provision of 30 CFR 723.17(b), that OSM shall serve notice of a civil penalty assessment within 30 days of the issuance of the underlying enforcement document, is directory, not mandatory; and OSM's failure to comply with this provision is not a bar to an assessment in the absence of a showing of prejudice resulting from the noncompliance.

Where OSM erroneously includes a violation that has previously been vacated in assessing and pleading the amount of a civil penalty prior to the hearing in a review proceeding, but then discovers its error and substitutes a different violation in its point computation at the time of the hearing, such substitution is proper under 43 CFR 4.1157(b)(1) unless the petitioner can demonstrate prejudice.

Under 43 CFR 4.1157, the Administrative Law Judge in a civil penalty hearing, if he finds that a violation occurred, is required to determine the amount of the penalty. He is not bound by the proposed assessment, regardless of whether there has previously been an assessment conference.

Consolidation Coal Co., 5 IBSMA 6 (Feb. 2, 1983)
90 I.D. 49

An Administrative Law Judge in a civil penalty proceeding must determine whether to impose a civil penalty for more than 1 day whenever he finds that the violation under review has not been abated and that the exceptions set forth in 30 CFR 723.15(b)(1) do not apply.

DISCRIMINATION

Generally

Sec. 703 of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, 30 U.S.C. § 1293 (1982), prohibits any "person" from discriminating against any employee by reason of his involvement in any proceeding under the Act. An aggrieved employee may file an application for review of any such discrimination with the Department of the Interior. For purposes of sec. 703 employee protection proceedings, the state agency charged with enforcement of the Act is not deemed a person within the meaning of the statute where review of alleged discriminatory action is sought by one of its employees.

ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

Generally

The Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement is authorized to issue a notice of violation for noncompliance with the initial regulatory program even if a state has already initiated enforcement action for the same violation.

Eastover Mining Co., 2 IBSMA 5 (Jan. 21, 1980) 87 I.D. 9

The Secretary of the Interior, through the promulgation of regulations, has determined that sec. 521(a)(1) of the Act does not apply during the initial regulatory program.

OSM is required to issue a notice for violations of the initial regulatory program even if a state has already taken enforcement action against the same violation.

Kaiser Steel Corp., 2 IBSMA 158 (July 25, 1980) 87 I.D. 324

Because elapsed time is not a reason for failure to cite a violation of the Act and regulations discovered during an inspection, the fact that a permittee manages to complete an illegal action between inspections does not of itself protect it against a citation for the violation.

Wayne Yarnell, 3 IBSMA 188 (July 15, 1981) 88 I.D. 652

Filing an application for review of a notice of violation does not stay that notice.

ENVIRONMENTAL HARM

Generally

OSM has established a prima facie case that a cessation order was properly issued when it shows a violation, practice, or condition that is causally connected to significant, imminent environmental harm or a reasonable expectation of such harm.

Imminence

A cessation order is not properly issued under sec. 521(a)(2) of the Act when the evidence does not support a finding that significant environmental harm may reasonably be expected to occur before the expiration of an abatement period that would be set pursuant to sec. 521(a)(3) of the Act.

Claypool Construction Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 81 (May 16, 1980) 87 I.D. 168

Significance

A cessation order is not properly issued under sec. 521(a)(2) of the Act unless the environmental harm alleged to be significant may be described objectively on the basis of observations or measurements.

Claypool Construction Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 81 (May 16, 1980) 87 I.D. 168

EVIDENCE

Generally

Since the reviewing authority may use interference with an inspection against the permittee in any way deemed appropriate, a permittee who interferes with an inspection does so at the risk of severely prejudicing its own case.

Eastover Mining Co., 2 IBSMA 70 (May 16, 1980) 87 I.D. 172

The existence of an intermittent stream at the time of an OSM inspection and at subsequent inspections and the statements of mine officials that an intermittent stream existed before the initial inspection raise a rebuttable presumption that an intermittent stream subject to the requirements of 30 CFR 715.17(d) existed prior to mining.

Persuasive, uncontradicted evidence that the state regulatory authority considered a stream to be ephemeral before the granting of a permit, coupled with other evidence to the same effect, is sufficient under the circumstances to rebut the presumption that an intermittent stream existed prior to mining.

Sunbeam Coal Corp., 2 IBSMA 222 (Aug. 29, 1980) 87 I.D. 383

It is not error for an Administrative Law Judge to rely on hearsay evidence of chain of custody when the permittee challenges that evidence only by asserting that it is hearsay.

Roberts Brothers Coal Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 284 (Sept. 26, 1980) 87 I.D. 439

Under the circumstances of this case, sufficient evidence was presented to show that unforeseen circumstances arose during regrading, that the state regulatory authority approved a change to the permit under its established procedures, and that the change was carried out in accordance with the requirements of 30 CFR 715.14(b).

A prima facie case for the existence of a human burial ground can be established by evidence that stones at the purported site of the burial ground bear inscriptions generally associated with gravemarkers, combined with evidence that the site is described as a "cemetery" in a coal lease pertinent to land that includes the site.

Marietta Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 382 (Nov. 26, 1980)
87 I.D. 589

In this case, because OSM presented sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case that the permittee had auger-mined the coal seam at the base of an orphan highwall and that that mining had an adverse physical impact on the highwall, it was error for the Administrative Law Judge to grant a motion to dismiss made at the conclusion of OSM's evidence.

87 I.D. 645

In a civil penalty proceeding when OSM's prima facie case as to the fact of violation is effectively controverted by the person charged with the violation, the violation must be vacated because OSM has the ultimate burden of persuasion in accordance with 43 CFR 4.1155.

88 I.D. 448

Competent evidence that the person listed in state records as permittee over an area had no legal right under state law to mine or reclaim that area and that the person was not conducting mining or reclamation operations there as contemplated in 30 CFR 700.5 (1978) is sufficient to rebut a prima facie showing that the person is the permittee.

Marco, Inc., 3 IBSMA 128 (Apr. 27, 1981) 88 I.D. 500

OSM is entitled to determine, on the basis of the evidence available to it, that a violation could not be proven, even if one had occurred.

A prima facie case is made where sufficient evidence is presented to establish the essential facts. It is evidence that will justify but not compel a finding in favor of the one presenting it, unless it is contradicted and overcome by other evidence. How much evidence is required may vary with the nature of the case and with the relative availability of the evidence to the person charged with the burden of establishing the prima facie case.

Rhonda Coal Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 124 (Sept. 21, 1982)
89 I.D. 460

In a proceeding to review an alleged violation of the effluent limitations for iron and pH expressed in 30 CFR 715.17(a), OSM met its burden of establishing a prima facie case by its evidence that tests of water samples taken at the point or discharge of drainage from the sedimentation pond which received surface drainage from the areas disturbed by the surface coal mining and reclamation operations showed iron and pH levels outside the applicable limits.

Jeffco Sales & Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 140 (Sept. 21, 1982)
89 I.D. 467

It is error for an Administrative Law Judge to fail to admit evidence of laboratory tests of water quality samples when the permittee challenges that evidence only by asserting that it is hearsay because of a failure to establish the chain of custody of the samples. Such an objection goes to the weight to be given to the evidence, not to its admissibility.

Parmac Coal Co., 74 IBLA 100 (June 30, 1983)

A prima facie case is made where sufficient evidence is presented to establish the essential facts. Prima facie evidence is that evidence that will justify a finding in favor of the one presenting the evidence. It is not necessary to present evidence that is compelling, and the determination must be made on a case-by-case basis. An important factor in making a determination regarding the amount of evidence required for a prima facie case is the availability of the evidence and the difficulty which may reasonably be encountered in obtaining the evidence.

Knowledge possessed by an Administrative Law Judge but not appearing of record in the case before the Board is not a sufficient basis for upholding a decision in a formal proceeding under the Administrative Procedure Act.

Capital Coal Corp., 4 IBSMA 179 (Nov. 23, 1982)
89 I.D. 594

OSM makes a prima facie case by submitting sufficient evidence to establish the essential facts of the violation; when it makes that showing and the showing goes unrebutted, it also carries its ultimate burden of persuasion.

Tiger Corp., 4 IBSMA 202 (Dec. 17, 1982) 89 I.D. 622

OSM makes a prima facie case by submitting sufficient evidence to establish the essential facts of the violation; when it makes that showing and the showing goes unrebutted, the violation must be sustained.

Parmac Coal Co., 74 IBLA 100 (June 30, 1983)

The application of the general rule that in hearing proceedings initiated by a petition for review OSM has the burden of going forward to establish a prima facie case and the ultimate burden of persuasion as to the fact of violation and as to the amount of the penalty must take into account the issues actually raised in a petition for review. Where a petitioner did not specify any error in OSM's calculation of a proposed civil penalty, OSM's evidentiary burden in the review proceeding was limited to prevailing in its case in support of the merits of the alleged violations.

88 I.D. 304

An applicant for review of a notice of violation who voluntarily failed to appear at the scheduled review hearing was properly deemed to have waived its right to a hearing, and the Administrative Law Judge could accept as true the allegations of fact contained in the notice of violation under review.

HYDROLOGIC SYSTEM PROTECTION

Generally

The sedimentation pond requirement of 30 CFR 715.17(a) is a preventive measure and proof of the occurrence of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of that requirement.

Black Fox Mining & Development Corp., 2 IBSMA 110 (June 6, 1980)

"Underground operations." Because of the definition of "underground operations" in 30 CFR 717.11(a)(1), the ground water monitoring requirements of sec. 717.17(h)(1) and (h)(2) of 30 CFR do not apply to an inactive mine where the only underground activity is the mechanical removal of accumulated water.

Consolidation Coal Co., 3 IBSMA 228 (July 31, 1981)

Effluent limitations are applicable under 30 CFR 715.17 to discharges of drainage from areas disturbed by surface coal mining and reclamation operations, and not only to discharges of drainage from an "active mine area," as defined in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's regulations for effluent limitations under the coal mining point source category, set forth at 40 CFR Part 434.

Under the provisions of 30 CFR 715.17, the effluent limitations are not applicable to any discharge or overflow caused by precipitation or snowmelt in accordance with the regulations of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in 40 CFR Part 434.

Entitlement to an exemption from the application of effluent limitations to discharges from a sedimentation pond resulting from a precipitation event is conditioned on a demonstration that the sedimentation pond was constructed and has been maintained to contain or treat the volume of water which would run off into the pond during a 10-year 24-hour or greater precipitation event.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's provisions, at 40 CFR 122.63(g) and (h), for a credit for pollutants in discharges attributable to intake waters, if applicable under 30 CFR 715.17, require that the credit be authorized in a permit for a surface coal mining and reclamation operation on the basis of a demonstration that the intake water is drawn from the same body of water into which discharges are made.

Under 30 CFR 715.17, the effluent limitations are to be applied at the point of discharge from a sedimentation pond or the last pond in a series of sedimentation ponds, absent express prior approval to the contrary by the regulatory authority.

Inland Creek Coal Co., 3 IBSMA 383 (Dec. 23, 1981)
88 I.D. 1122

A regulatory authority can grant an exemption from the requirement in 30 CFR 715.17(a) that all surface drainage from the disturbed area must be passed through a sedimentation pond or a series of sedimentation ponds before leaving the permit area only upon a showing that the disturbed drainage area within the total disturbed area is small and that sedimentation ponds are not necessary to meet the prescribed effluent limitations and to maintain water quality in downstream receiving waters.

Apex Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 19 (Mar. 2, 1982) 89 I.D. 87

The requirement of 30 CFR 717.17(a)(1) that all surface drainage from the disturbed area be passed through a sedimentation pond before it leaves the permit area is a preventative measure; a showing of the occurrence of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of the regulation.

Under 30 CFR 717.17(a) the regulatory authority may grant exemptions from the requirement that drainage from disturbed area be passed through a sedimentation pond, but only on the basis of a permittee's showings (1) that the disturbed drainage area within the total disturbed area is small and (2) that a sedimentation pond is not necessary to meet effluent limitations and to maintain water quality in downstream receiving waters.

"Disturbed area." The term "disturbed area," for the purposes of the provisions of 30 CFR 717.17(a) for hydrologic system protection, may refer to an area affected by the construction and use of a tool shed.

Avanti Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 101 (July 16, 1982)
89 I.D. 378

The general rule is that all discharges from a sedimentation pond which receives surface drainage from areas disturbed by ongoing surface coal mining and reclamation operations must meet the effluent limitations expressed in 30 CFR 715.17(a), even when part of the drainage received by a particular sedimentation pond emanates from areas not disturbed by current operations.

Jeffco Sales & Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 140 (Sept. 21, 1982)
89 I.D. 467

The sedimentation pond requirement of 30 CFR 717.17(a) is a preventive measure; thus, proof of the occurrence of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of the requirement.

The elements of proof of a violation of the sedimentation pond requirement are: (1) the existence of surface drainage from areas disturbed in the course of mining and reclamation operations; (2) that such drainage was not passed through a sedimentation pond; and (3) that the drainage left the permit area.

An operator of an underground coal mine must undertake practices to control and minimize water pollution which include, but are not limited to, preventing water contact with acid- or toxic-forming materials and minimizing water contact time with waste materials.

An alleged violation of the effluent limitations prescribed in 30 CFR 717.17(a) cannot be upheld where the evidence shows that the drainage identified in the notice of violation neither originated in an area disturbed by the surface coal mining and reclamation operations nor became commingled with drainage from that disturbed area.

The effluent limitations prescribed in 30 CFR 717.17(a) apply to all discharges that include drainage from areas disturbed by surface coal mining and reclamation operations.

Consolidation Coal Co., 4 IBSMA 227 (Dec. 17, 1982)
89 I.D. 632

30 CFR 715.17(f) is a preventive measure, and proof of the occurrence of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of its requirement.

Amax Coal Co., 74 IBLA 48 (June 25, 1983)

An alleged violation of the effluent limitation for pH set forth in 30 CFR 715.17(a) is properly upheld on the basis of a Hach test showing an acidity reading of 4 or lower, in the absence of evidence that the Hach test was not properly administered.

Where there is no adverse physical impact from current mining on water quality resulting from previous mining, there is no disturbance that requires compliance with 30 CFR 715.17(a).

Dorsey Coal Co., 74 IBLA 100 (June 30, 1983)

IMPOUNDMENTS

Generally

"Appropriate contour." "Appropriate contour," as used in 30 CFR 715.14(e), is not synonomous with "approximate original contour."

Although, in general, a permanent impoundment should be contoured before it is filled with water, on the evidence available in this case, we decline to hold that the reclamation techniques used were illegal.

Compliance with state mining permit conditions does not excuse noncompliance with the initial Federal performance requirements.

Tollage Creek Elkhorn Mining Co., 2 IBSMA 341 (Nov. 24, 1980) 87 I.D. 570

During the initial regulatory program a critical determinant of the jurisdiction of the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement over a surface coal mining operation conducted on lands within a state is whether the operation is subject to state regulation within the scope of any of the initial Federal performance standards.

The Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement has jurisdiction to enforce the initial Federal performance standards against a surface disturbance in Kentucky of less than 2 acres and the Federal 2-acre exemption set forth in 30 CFR 700.11(b) is not applicable where the disturbance is physically related to a surface coal mining operation under permit from the Commonwealth of Virginia, and where the disturbance is not a discrete operation but was undertaken in furtherance of the Virginia operation.

Blackwood Fuel Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 359 (Nov. 24, 1980)

Because compliance with state mining permit conditions does not excuse noncompliance with the initial Federal performance requirements, a decision by a state regulatory authority not to include a haul road within the area under state permit does not preclude application of the Federal requirements to the road.

Under 30 CFR 710.11(2)(i) of the initial regulatory program, a person conducting coal mining operations must obtain a permit if a permit is required by the State in which the mining occurs.

The extraction of coal as an incidental part of privately financed construction is not an activity excluded as such from the coverage of the performance requirements of the initial regulatory program.

Gobel Partlow, 4 IBSMA 219 (Dec. 17, 1982) 89 I.D. 628

The owner of a surface coal mining operation who operates a coal refuse disposal area without a permit required by State regulation may properly be cited by OSM for violation of 30 CFR 710.11(a)(2), which requires compliance with State permit requirements.

Republic Steel Corp. & HCNB Mining Corp. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 79 IBLA 315 (Mar. 21, 1984)

As a general performance obligation under the initial Federal regulatory program, a person who conducts surface coal mining and reclamation operations on and after May 3, 1978, must obtain a state permit for the operations if required to do so under state law. When state law defines surface coal mining to include exploration activity, the Federal performance obligation extends to such activity.

The general performance obligation under the initial Federal regulatory program that a person who conducts surface coal mining and reclamation operations on and after May 3, 1978, must obtain a state permit for the operations if required to do so under state law is applicable to persons who allow mining operations on lands under their legal control even when the persons are not actually engaged in the mining operations.

The obligation under the Federal initial regulatory program of a person who conducts surface coal mining and reclamation operations to obtain a state permit for the operations if required to do so under state law is applicable only in the context of mining operations conducted on and after May 3, 1978; therefore, action by OSM to enforce the obligation was not properly upheld in the absence of evidence that the subject mining activity occurred after that date.

OSM satisfied the burden of persuasion in support of an alleged violation of the permit requirement in 30 CFR 710.11(a)(2) when, in an evidentiary hearing, OSM demonstrated that the subject mining activity was conducted after May 3, 1978, and that OSM had been unable to discover evidence of a state permit covering the activity, and the person charged with the violation did not offer any documentary evidence in support of the assertion that the subject mining activity was covered by an existing state permit.

OSM lacked regulatory authority to enforce the special performance standards in 30 CFR 716.5(b) (applicable to anthracite surface coal mining and reclamation operations in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania) with respect to surface coal mining and reclamation operations conducted only before May 3, 1978.

Where OSM demonstrated in an evidentiary hearing that particular surface coal mining and reclamation operations were not covered by a state approved mining plan at the time of OSM's inspection of the operations, OSM was precluded, as a matter of law, from establishing its allegation that the person conducting the mining operations had failed to accomplish backfilling in accordance with an approved mining plan.

The regulation, 30 CFR 715.11(b), requiring that authorizations to operate be available for inspection at or near the minesite obligates the permittee or mine operator to maintain those authorizations where they are readily available for review by an inspector during an on-site inspection. However, if the authorizations are not immediately available and the inspector wants to review them, he or she must specifically direct that they be produced within a reasonable time.

Interference

A permittee's refusal to allow OSM to take photographs is an interference with the inspection that is sanctionable under the Act.

Since no provision in the regulations makes interference with an inspection administratively sanctionable, a notice of violation is not proper.

Since the reviewing authority may use interference with an inspection against the permittee in any way deemed appropriate, a permittee who interferes with an inspection does so at the risk of severely prejudicing its own case.

Permittees--Continued

During the initial regulatory program the person named in the state permit for a surface coal mining operation is the permittee with respect to that operation and, as such, a proper person to be issued a notice of violation concerning the operation.

Pierce Coal and Construction, Inc., 3 IBSMA 350 (Sept. 25, 1981)

Under the initial regulatory program one who conducts a surface coal mining operation regulated by a state under state law is a permittee whether or not required to hold a permit under state law. The permittee is responsible for compliance with the performance standards applicable to the operation. If there is question as to who is responsible for compliance with those standards, it is proper for the inspector issuing the notice of violation to cite all of the parties who may be responsible. If a cited party can submit sufficient proof that it is not responsible for compliance, the violation will not be considered a violation by that party.

Under the initial regulatory program, if there is no valid permit in existence with respect to a coal mining operation and the coal is being mined pursuant to an oral lease, both the party extracting the coal and the lessor can be considered to be permittees, as both have the ability to exercise control over the operations.

Remedial Actions

When a permittee does not have approval from the regulatory authority for an exemption from the requirements of the Act at the time of an OSM inspection, the inspector may properly require remedial action of a reclamation nature in a notice of violation.

Under the circumstances of this case, it was error for the Administrative Law Judge to vacate a notice of violation on his own motion on the groundn that it lacked reasonable specificity as required by sec. 521(a)(5) of the Act when the parties expressed no confusion about the nature of the alleged violation.

Hardy Able Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 312 (Nov. 7, 1980)
87 I.D. 557

A notice of violation is reasonably specific, in accordance with 30 U.S.C. § 1271(a)(5) (Supp. II 1978), when it is sufficient to guide the review and abatement processes without actual prejudice to the recipient as the result of any ambiguity in the notice.

Konkro Construction Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 372 (Nov. 26, 1980)

A notice of violation is reasonably specific and satisfies the requirements of sec. 521(a)(5) of the Act where it clearly describes the practices or circumstances alleged to be in violation of the regulations, accurately identifies the particular regulations allegedly violated by these practices or circumstances, and describes the remedial action required to abate each violation. Where, after the OSM inspector explained the violations and remedial actions to the operator, the operator indicated that he understood each of the violations alleged and remedies required, an allegation on appeal that the notice of violation which met the foregoing requirements nevertheless lacked specificity will not be upheld.

regulations do not require an operator who has ceased all mining operations prior to the approval of a state's permanent program to obtain a permanent program permit.

Where, under circumstances of this case, it is determined that reclamation operations proceeding under an interim permit do not require a permanent program permit, such operations need not comply with the public participation and substantive reclamation requirements of the permanent program.

Citizens for the Preservation of Knox County, 81 IBLA 209 (June 5, 1984)

Because OSM is entitled to rely on the permit package as evidence of the conditions under which mining and reclamation have been approved, the failure of a state regulatory authority to require written documentation of approved permit changes to be placed in the permit package exposes a permittee to potential liability under the Act.

87 I.D. 570

During the initial regulatory program a critical determinant of the jurisdiction of the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement over a surface coal mining operation conducted on lands within a state is whether the operation is subject to state regulation within the scope of any of the initial Federal performance standards.

88 I.D. 492

During the initial regulatory program, OSM may defer to the state for an initial determination on valid existing rights, but when that determination is properly questioned, OSM has an independent responsibility to review it to ensure that it was made in compliance with the initial program regulations.

SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION OF PERMITS

Generally

Where a corporation petitions to intervene in a suspension or revocation proceeding on its own behalf and not as a representative of its members, but alleges no injury to itself, it is not entitled to intervene as a matter of right under 43 CFR 4.1110(c)(2).

Where the only interest asserted by one petitioning to intervene in a suspension or revocation proceeding is in the precedential effect of the ruling to be made, and the ultimate interest of petitioner may be asserted in another, more appropriate proceeding, denial of permission to intervene under 43 CFR 4.1110(d) is not an abuse of discretion.

TEMPORARY RELIEF

Generally

43 CFR 4.1260 does not authorize temporary relief from the requirement of 43 CFR 4.1152(b) that a proposed civil penalty be paid into escrow pending a final determination on the merits of the case.

Crystal Coal Co., Inc., 2 IBSMA 249 (Sept. 23, 1980), 87 I.D. 416

Where OSM provides the maximum time allowable under 30 CFR 722.12(d) for the abatement of a violation, an Administrative Law Judge may not effectively extend this time by granting temporary relief from the abatement requirement.

Old Home Badger, Inc., 3 IBSMA 241 (Aug. 13, 1981) 88 I.D. 737

Applications

Where an application for temporary relief includes none of the elements required by 43 CFR 4.1263, a motion to dismiss the application should be granted.

Hawkeberry Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 63 (May 16, 1980) 87 I.D. 176

Because temporary relief is an extraordinary remedy that may be requested in a pending case, an application for temporary relief not preceded or accompanied by an application for review of a notice, order, or civil penalty should be dismissed.

Universal Coal Co., 3 IBSMA 218 (July 28, 1981) 88 I.D. 672

Evidence

Where an applicant for temporary relief fails to provide sufficient evidence to support the showings required by sec. 525(c) of the Act, it is error to grant such relief.

Hawkeberry Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 63 (May 16, 1980) 87 I.D. 176

A party seeking temporary relief from enforcement action by the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement must show a substantial likelihood that the findings and decision of the Administrative Law Judge in the matter to which the application relates will be favorable to the applicant.

"Surface coal mining operations." Mere evidence that a coal processing facility receives some undisclosed percentage of the coal production of two mines operated in connection with the facility, and located distances of 8 and 11 miles from the facility, is not sufficient to establish that the facility is "at or near" either of the mines, within the meaning of the definition of "surface coal mining operations" at 30 CFR 700.5.

"Surface coal mining operations." Decisions of the Interior Board of Surface Mining and Reclamation Appeals established a two-part test for determining whether an offsite facility was conducting surface coal mining operations, as defined in the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 and its implementing regulations, by requiring that the facility be operated in connection with a surface coal mine and that it be located at or near the minesite. However, court decisions and revised Departmental regulations have made it clear that in order to be conducting surface coal mining operations, an offsite facility which is involved in certain listed activities need only be operated in connection with a surface coal mine, while a facility involved only in the loading of coal for interstate commerce must be operated in connection with a surface coal mine, and that facility must be located at or near the minesite.

"At or near a minesite." A coal loading facility is "at or near a minesite" within the meaning of surface coal mining operations in 30 CFR 700.5 where it operates on the same permit area as the minesite or it is physically integrated with the minesite to the extent that any potential or actual environment damage associated with the mining operation cannot be effectively addressed by OSM without regard to the loading operation.

When a permittee alleges that a violation of the effluent limitations of 30 CFR 715.17(a) occurred because of unusual precipitation conditions, under 30 CFR 715.17(a)(1) it bears the burden of demonstrating entitlement to an exemption from those limitations.

Hardy Able Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 332 (Nov. 7, 1980)

Under the provisions of 30 CFR 715.17, the effluent limitations are not applicable to any discharge or overflow caused by precipitation or snowmelt in accordance with the regulations of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in 40 CFR Part 434.

Entitlement to an exemption from the application of effluent limitations to discharges from a sedimentation pond resulting from a precipitation event is conditioned on a demonstration that the sedimentation pond was constructed and has been maintained to contain or treat the volume of water which would run off into the pond during a 10-year 24-hour or greater precipitation event.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's provisions, at 40 CFR 122.63(g) and (h), for a credit for pollutants in discharges attributable to intake waters, if applicable under 30 CFR 715.17, require that the credit be authorized in a permit for a surface coal mining and reclamation operation on the basis of a demonstration that the intake water is drawn from the same body of water into which discharges are made.

Where only one operator is using the haul road at the time a notice of violation is issued, the entire road may be properly attributed to that operator.

Virginia Fuels, Inc., 5 IBSMA 1 (Jan. 19, 1983) 90 I.D. 1

The 2-acre exemption applies to "operations," not to "operators"; thus, where a coal mining and reclamation operation affects more than 2 acres, an operator who contracts with the permittee is properly charged with violations on the portion of the operation affected by his activities, even if his activities affect less than 2 acres.

Sam Blankenship, 5 IBSMA 32 (Apr. 26, 1983) 90 I.D. 174

A coal mine which disturbs less than 2 acres of surface land is exempt from the application of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977. However, an operation which is less then 2 acres in size can be under the purview of the Act if it is one of a number of operations which are collectively disturbing in excess of 2 acres and which can logically be considered to be one mine. The party claiming that an operation is, in fact, one of a number of sites which make up a single mine disturbing in excess of 2 acres carries the burden of establishing that fact.

WATER QUALITY STANDARDS AND EFFLUENT LIMITATIONS

Generally

When a permittee alleges that a violation of the effluent limitations of 30 CFR 715.17(a) occurred because of unusual precipitation conditions, under 30 CFR 715.17(a)(1) it bears the burden of demonstrating entitlement to an exemption from those limitations.

Hardly Able Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 332 (Nov. 7, 1980) 87 I.D. 557

Under the provisions of 30 CFR 715.17, the effluent limitations are not applicable to any discharge or overflow caused by precipitation or snowmelt in accordance with the regulations of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in 40 CFR Part 434.

Entitlement to an exemption from the application of effluent limitations to discharges from a sedimentation pond resulting from a precipitation event is conditioned on a demonstration that the sedimentation pond was constructed and has been maintained to contain or treat the volume of water which would run off into the pond during a 10-year 24-hour or greater precipitation event.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's provisions, at 40 CFR 122.63(g) and (h), for a credit for pollutants in discharges attributable to intake waters, if applicable under 30 CFR 715.17, require that the credit be authorized in a permit for a surface coal mining and reclamation operation on the basis of a demonstration that the intake water is drawn from the same body of water into which discharges are made.

Under 30 CFR 715.17, the effluent limitations are to be applied at the point of discharge from a sedimentation pond or the last pond in a series of sedimentation ponds, absent express prior approval to the contrary by the regulatory authority.

Acid and Toxic Materials

An operator of an underground coal mine must undertake practices to control and minimize water pollution which include, but are not limited to, preventing water contact with acid- or toxic-forming materials and minimizing water contact time with waste materials.

Discharges from Disturbed Areas

All surface water drainage from the area disturbed by surface mining and reclamation operations must comply with the effluent limitations of 30 CFR 715.17(a) even if it originates as contaminated ground water from previously mined areas.

87 I.D. 416

A violation of 30 CFR 715.17(a) for failure to pass surface drainage through a sedimentation pond may be established for a surface coal mining operation that is not required by a state to have a permit by showing that there is surface drainage, that it does not pass through a sedimentation pond, and that it leaves the disturbed area.

87 I.D. 437

Effluent limitations are applicable under 30 CFR 715.17 to discharges of drainage from areas disturbed by surface coal mining and reclamation operations, and not only to discharges of drainage from an "active mine area," as defined in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's regulations for effluent limitations under the coal mining point source category, set forth at 40 CFR Part 434.

The general rule is that all discharges from a sedimentation pond which receives surface drainage from areas disturbed by ongoing surface coal mining and reclamation operations must meet the effluent limitations expressed in 30 CFR 715.17(a), even when part of the drainage received by a particular sedimentation pond emanates from areas not disturbed by current operations.

An applicant for review claiming that the effluent limitations set forth in 30 CFR 715.17(a) are not applicable to discharges from its sedimentation pond bears the burden of proving the facts upon which the claim of inapplicability is based.

Jeffco Sales & Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 140 (Sept. 21, 1982)
89 I.D. 467

An alleged violation of the effluent limitations prescribed in 30 CFR 717.17(a) cannot be upheld where the evidence shows that the drainage identified in the notice of violation neither originated in an area disturbed by the surface coal mining and reclamation operations nor became commingled with drainage from that disturbed area.

The effluent limitations prescribed in 30 CFR 717.17(a) apply to all discharges that include drainage from areas disturbed by surface coal mining and reclamation operations.

Consolidation Coal Co., 4 IBSMA 227 (Dec. 17, 1982)
89 I.D. 632

An alleged violation of the effluent limitation for pH set forth in 30 CFR 715.17(a) is properly upheld on the basis of a Hach test showing an acidity reading of 4 or lower, in the absence of evidence that the Hach test was not properly administered.

Where there is no adverse physical impact from current mining on water quality resulting from previous mining there is no disturbance that requires compliance with 30 CFR 715.17(a).

Sedimentation Ponds--Continued

The sedimentation pond requirement of 30 CFR 715.17(a) and 717.17(a) is a preventive measure and proof of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of that requirement.

Kaiser Steel Corp., 2 IBSMA 158 (July 25, 1980) 87 I.D. 324

A violation of 30 CFR 715.17(a) for failure to pass surface drainage through a sedimentation pond may be established for a surface coal mining operation that is not required by a state to have a permit by showing that there is surface drainage, that it does not pass through a sedimentation pond, and that it leaves the disturbed area.

Black Fox Mining & Development Corp., 2 IBSMA 277 (Sept. 24, 1980) 87 I.D. 437

A regulatory authority can grant an exception from the requirement in 30 CFR 715.17(a) that all surface drainage from the disturbed area must be passed through a sedimentation pond or a series of sedimentation ponds before leaving the permit area only upon a showing that the disturbed drainage area within the total disturbed area is small and that sedimentation ponds are not necessary to meet the prescribed effluent limitations and to maintain water quality in downstream receiving waters.

Apex Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 19 (Mar. 2, 1982) 89 I.D. 87

The requirement of 30 CFR 717.17(a)(1) that all surface drainage from the disturbed area be passed through a sedimentation pond before it leaves the permit area is a preventative measure; a showing of the occurrence of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of the regulation.

In a civil penalty proceeding to review an alleged violation of the requirement of 30 CFR 717.17(a)(1) that drainage be passed through a sedimentation pond, OSM bears the ultimate burden of persuasion as to three basic elements of proof: (1) The existence of surface drainage which came into contact with disturbed area; (2) that this drainage did not pass through a sedimentation pond; and (3) that this drainage flowed off the permit area.

Under 30 CFR 717.17(a) the regulatory authority may grant exemptions from the requirement that drainage from disturbed area be passed through a sedimentation pond, but only on the basis of a permittee's showings (1) that the disturbed drainage area within the total disturbed area is small and (2) that a sedimentation pond is not necessary to meet effluent limitations and to maintain water quality in downstream receiving waters.

Avanti Mining Co., Inc., 4 IBSMA 101 (July 16, 1982) 89 I.D. 378

The sedimentation pond requirement of 30 CFR 717.17(a) is a preventive measure; thus, proof of the occurrence of the harm it is intended to prevent is not necessary to establish a violation of the requirement.

The elements of proof of a violation of the sedimentation pond requirement are: (1) the existence of surface drainage from areas disturbed in the course of

Wayne Harrell, 3 IBSMA 180 (July 15, 1981) 88 I.D. 652

"At or near a minesite." A coal loading facility is "at or near a minesite" within the meaning of surface coal mining operations in 30 CFR 700.5 where it operates on the same permit area as the minesite or it is physically integrated with the minesite to the extent that any potential or actual environment damage associated with the mining operation cannot be effectively addressed by OSM without regard to the loading operation.

Ann Lorentz Coal Co., Inc. v. Office of Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement, 79 IBLA 34 (Feb. 9, 1984) 91 I.D. 108

"Cemetery." The term cemetery as it is used in sec. 522(e)(5) of the Act, 30 U.S.C. § 1272(e)(5) (Supp. II 1978), may include a private burial ground.

Marietta Coal Co., 2 IBSMA 382 (Nov. 26, 1980) 87 I.D. 589

"Contaminant." Where OSM shows that spoil materials have been mixed with topsoil it has made a prima facie case of a violation of 30 CFR 715.16 for failure to protect the topsoil from contaminants.

"Surface coal mining operations." Decisions of the Interior Board of Surface Mining and Reclamation Appeals established a two-part test for determining whether an offsite facility was conducting surface coal mining operations, as defined in the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 and its implementing regulations, by requiring that the facility be operated in connection with a surface coal mine and that it be located at or near the minesite. However, court decisions and revised Departmental regulations have made it clear that in order to be conducting surface coal mining operations, an offsite facility which is involved in certain listed activities need only be operated in connection with a surface coal mine, while a facility involved only in the loading of coal for interstate commerce must be operated in connection with a surface coal mine, and that facility must be located at or near the minesite.

"Surface coal mining operations." In order to be conducting surface coal mining operations, within the meaning of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, a coal preparation and processing plant need only be operated in connection with a surface coal mine. A coal preparation and processing plant which is operated in connection with a number of surface coal mines, therefore, conducts surface coal mining operations within the meaning of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977, 30 U.S.C. § 1291(28)(A) (1982).

Locations of corners established by official Government surveys are conclusive, and the corner of a Government subdivision is where the United States survey established it.

Mr. & Mrs. John Koopmans, 70 IBLA 75 (Jan. 11, 1983)

In determining whether original survey corners were properly reestablished by an official dependent resurvey of public lands, the fact that the measured distance and bearing between a quarter corner and the adjacent section corners as determined by the resurvey differs somewhat from the measurement and bearing given in the original survey is not sufficient alone to disprove the reestablishment of the quarter corner, as discrepancies between measurements and bearings in old and more recent surveys are not uncommon.

Robert J. Wickenden, 73 IBLA 394 (June 15, 1983)

The first step of an independent resurvey is to reestablish the outboundaries of the area to be resurveyed, following the methods of a dependent resurvey. The second step is the segregation of lands embraced in valid claims based on the former approved plat.

Where a protest challenges the declaration of a survey that a corner is lost and the reestablishment of that corner by proportionate measurement, and the record shows that the Bureau of Land Management gave due consideration to evidence tendered to establish the original position of the corner, BLM may properly deny the protest and that decision will be upheld on appeal where appellant fails to establish error in the decision.

Arthur Millard, Mary Jane Millard, 77 IBLA 66 (Nov. 7, 1983)

The dependent resurvey is designed to restore the original conditions of the official survey according to the record. It is based, first, upon identified corners and other acceptable points of control, and second, upon the restoration of lost corners by proportionate measurement in harmony with the record of the original survey. Corners established by the original survey should be located, if possible, by considering all the relevant evidence and not simply one or two factors. The rules for the restoration of lost corners should not be applied until all available original and collateral evidence has been developed.

the original survey. Titles, areas, and descriptions should remain unchanged in a typical dependent resurvey.

Prior to passing title from the United States, the Government has the right to establish or reestablish boundaries on its own land. However, once patent has been issued, the rights of the patentee are fixed and the Government has no power to interfere with such rights by a corrective survey. Therefore, the results of a dependent resurvey conducted by the Cadastral Survey will not alter or effect any boundaries between private tracts of lands. In disputes between private owners, the location of corners reestablished by a dependent survey conducted subsequent to patent does not make the new survey conclusive against the prior purchaser so as to prevent his assertion of the title he has acquired as against the one claiming under the new survey.

Alice L. Alleson, Frances Alleson, 77 IBLA 106 (Nov. 14, 1983)

In determining whether the original survey corners along a township line were properly reestablished by an official dependent resurvey of public lands, the fact that the measured distance and bearing between the recovered township corners as determined by the resurvey differs somewhat from the measurement and bearing given in the original survey is not sufficient alone to disprove the reestablishment of the intervening corners, as discrepancies between measurements and bearings in old and more recent surveys are not uncommon.

State of Oregon, Office of State Forester, 78 IBLA 13 (Dec. 12, 1983)

An island within the public domain in a navigable stream and actually in existence at the time of the admission to the Union of the state within which it is situated remains the property of the United States.

David A. Provinse, 78 IBLA 85 (Dec. 16, 1983)

A survey of public lands creates and does not merely identify the boundaries of sections of land. A patentee of public land takes according to the actual survey on the ground, even though the official survey plat may not show the tract as it is located on the ground, or the patent description may be in error as to the course or distance or the quantity of land stated to be conveyed.

Where the State of Oregon has selected indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for school sections within an unsurveyed township in the Siskiyou National Forest and thereafter a reprotraction or survey is run revealing new fractional townships within the area originally protracted, the State is entitled to indemnity lands for those new townships in accordance with the compact it entered with the United States by Act of Feb. 14, 1859.

A state selecting indemnity lands pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, ch. 384, 26 Stat. 796, for unsurveyed school sections within a national forest shall be entitled to select indemnity lands to the extent of two sections for each of said townships in lieu of secs. 16 and 36 therein. Where a protraction on which the state relies to make its indemnity selections reveals that a fractional township is present, the state's entitlement to indemnity lands is calculated according to the pro rata rule set forth at 43 U.S.C. § 852 (1976).

Where a survey on which the state relies to make its indemnity selections pursuant to the Act of Feb. 28, 1891, reveals a fractional township with a school section in place, the state's entitlement should be in an amount equal to the acreage shown by the surveyed school section or in an amount determined by the pro rata rule at the election of the state.

Until a survey of public lands has been run and approved, the designated sections of a township are undefined and the lands are unidentified.

State of Oregon et al., II, 80 IBLA 354 (May 10, 1984) 91 I.D. 212

Generally, the meander line of a river is not to be treated as a boundary and when the United States conveys a tract of land by patent referring to an official plat which shows the tract to be riparian to a river, the patent conveys all the rights to the water line of that river, if navigable, or to the center of the stream if nonnavigable, except where there is fraud, gross error shown in the survey, or an intention to limit a grant or conveyance to the actual meander lines as disclosed in the facts or circumstances.

DEPENDENT RESURVEYS

Where, at a hearing, a protestant does not meet his burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that a dependent resurvey is not an accurate retracement and reestablishment of the lines of the original survey, the decision dismissing his protest against the survey will be affirmed.

Bethel C. Vernon, 47 IBLA 315 (May 19, 1980)

Restoration of a lost corner by means of proportionate measurement in accordance with the record of the original survey is the proper procedure in a dependent resurvey where there is a lack of conclusive evidence as to the location of the original survey corner.

Surveys of the United States, after acceptance, are presumed to be correct and will not be disturbed except upon clear proof that they are fraudulent or grossly erroneous. An appellant challenging a Government resurvey has the burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that the resurvey is not an accurate retracement and reestablishment of the lines of the original survey.

Paul M. Scherbel, 58 IBLA 52 (Sept. 21, 1981)

The purpose of a dependent resurvey is to retrace and reestablish lines of the original survey in their true and original positions according to the best available evidence of the positions of the original corners.

Locations of corners established by official Government surveys are conclusive, and the corner of a Government subdivision is where the United States survey established it.

Where the reestablishment of a section corner in a resurvey is supported by substantial evidence, a protest asserting improprieties in the survey is properly dismissed and does not necessarily warrant a further investigation of the corner.

Mr. & Mrs. John Koopmans, 70 IBLA 75 (Jan. 11, 1983)

In determining whether original survey corners were properly reestablished by an official dependent resurvey of public lands, the fact that the measured distance and bearing between a quarter corner and the adjacent section corners as determined by the resurvey differs somewhat from the measurement and bearing given in the original survey is not sufficient alone to disprove the reestablishment of the quarter corner, as discrepancies between measurements and bearings in old and more recent surveys are not uncommon.

An appellant challenging a Government resurvey has the burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that the resurvey is not an accurate retracement and reestablishment of the lines of the original survey.

Where reestablishment of a quarter section corner on a second survey is supported by substantial evidence, a protest not accompanied by acceptable conflicting evidence but principally by hearsay, does not warrant a further survey or investigation of the corner.

Where a protestant does not meet his burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that a dependent resurvey is not an accurate retracement and reestablishment of the lines of the original survey, the decision dismissing his protest against the survey will be affirmed.

Robert J. Pickendon, 73 IBLA 394 (June 15, 1983)

The rules for the restoration of lost corners should not be applied until all available original and collateral evidence has been developed.

Where there exist factual questions about the location of a subdivisional corner in a dependent resurvey, the Board of Land Appeals may order a hearing pursuant to 43 CFR 4.415 to resolve these questions.

Elmer A. Svan et ux., 77 IBLA 99 (Nov. 14, 1983)

A dependent survey is designed to accomplish a restoration of what purports to be the original conditions according to the record, based, first, upon identified existing corners of original survey and other recognized and acceptable points of control, and second, upon the restoration of missing corners by proportionate measurement in harmony with the record of the original survey. TAR SANDS

The Combined Hydrocarbon Leasing Act of 1981, P.L. 97-78, 95 Stat. 1070, amended the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, sec. 17(b), 30 U.S.C. § 226(b) (1976), to require competitive bidding in the leasing of lands within special tar sand areas, and appellant's simultaneous oil and gas lease application, being noncompetitive, must be rejected for a parcel within a special tar sand area.

An applicant for a Federal oil and gas lease has no rights in the land or its minerals until the lease is issued to him. The Secretary of the Interior is not required to, but "may" issue a lease for any given tract. Therefore, BLM can properly reject a first-drawn simultaneous application where before issuance of the lease the parcel won in the drawing is included in a special tar sand area, and thereby leasable only through competitive bidding, pursuant to the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, as amended by the Combined Hydrocarbon Leasing Act of 1981.

A noncompetitive lease improvidently issued after enactment of the amendment and in violation of its requirements is properly canceled upon discovery of the error.

An applicant for a noncompetitive Federal oil and gas lease has no rights in the land or its minerals until the lease is lawfully issued to him. The Secretary of the Interior has discretionary power to lease or refrain from leasing those Federal lands which are otherwise available on a noncompetitive basis. Where the Assistant Secretary directs that leases be issued in response to certain pending noncompetitive offers, but the status of the subject lands is subsequently altered by new legislation which requires that they be leased only by competitive bidding, the discretionary authority to lease such land noncompetitively is vitiated, and the Bureau of Land Management is legally disabled to implement the directive thereafter. The validity of mining claims located for deposits of tar sand must be established under the general principles of the mining laws, including those related to abandonment and performance of annual assessment work. Congress provided no special recognition of tar sand as a valuable mineral deposit. An asphalt prospecting permit application which was pending at the time of the passage of the Combined Hydrocarbon Leasing Act of 1981, 95 Stat. 1070 (1981), must be rejected because that Act amended the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920, 30 U.S.C. § 181 (Supp. V 1981), to include a definition for "oil" that encompasses asphalt. One seeking to extract hydrocarbons from asphalt after Nov. 16, 1981, in an area other than a "special tar sand area" must file a noncompetitive oil and gas lease offer. Although oil and gas leases issued prior to the enactment of the Combined Hydrocarbon Leasing Act of 1981, 95 Stat. 1070 (1981), and located completely within special tar sand areas may be converted to combined hydrocarbon leases, that Act did not affect oil and gas leases issued prior to the Act which are located outside such areas. The Department has no authority to convey any rights to tar sand on oil and gas leases issued prior to Nov. 16, 1981. TAYLOR GRAZING ACT
(See also Grazing Leases, Grazing Permits & Licenses--if included in this Index.)

GENERALLY

Implementation of the Taylor Grazing Act of 1934 is committed to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. Protection and management of Federal range lands is a continuing responsibility and may not be divested through agreement with a private party. An allotment management plan is not such a permanently binding contract that the grazing user's refusal to agree to changes precludes BLM from modifying or vacating the plan upon a finding, rationally based, that the plan is inconsistent with BLM objectives and good range management.

Bert N. Smith, Paul Smith v. Bureau of Land Management, 48 IBLA 385 (July 11, 1980)

Neither FLPMA nor the Taylor Grazing Act authorizes appropriation of water or provide an independent statutory basis for claims for water uses inconsistent in any way with the substantive requirements of state law.

"Public land laws." Under 43 CFR 2091.2-3 (1979), a state exchange application segregated the selected public lands from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. The term "public land laws" is ordinarily used to refer to statutes governing the alienation of public land, and generally is distinguished from both "mining laws," referring to statutes governing the mining of hard minerals on public lands, and "mineral leasing laws," a term used to designate that group of statutes governing the leasing of public lands for oil, gas, and other selected minerals. Udall v. Tallman, 380 U.S. 1, 19 (1965).

GENERALLY--Continued

An appeal relating to grazing administration is properly dismissed by an Administrative Law Judge where the only issues in dispute are clearly defined in the regulations in 43 CFR Subpart 4100, which were correctly followed and applied by the Bureau of Land Management. Implementation of the Taylor Grazing Act of 1934 is committed to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. A decision reached in the exercise of administrative discretion relating to the adjudication of grazing privileges may be regarded as arbitrary and capricious only where it is not supportable on any rational basis, or where it is shown that it does not represent substantial compliance with the grazing regulations. The burden is upon the appellant to show by substantial evidence that a decision is improper or unreasonable.

Ernest J. Goertzen, 51 IBLA 196 (Dec. 5, 1980)

Under a lump sum contract for a designated lot of timber in a described area, the contract price does not vary with the quantity or quality of timber actually located therein. The phrase "more or less" in these contracts will be given its plain and literal meaning.

Where a contract for the sale of timber contains a disclaimer of warranty by the vendor as to the quantity of timber sold, the parties are deemed to have contracted on the assumption that there was doubt as to the quantity, and the risk with respect to such factor must be considered to have been assumed by the purchaser as one of the elements of the bargain. Thus, the fact that the quantity of timber available for harvesting turned out to be less than was expected at the time of contracting is not a basis for a claim to a refund.

In legal effect, a vendor's estimate of quantity or quality of a specific lot of timber is sui generis because it cannot be determined with certainty except by harvesting and, even then, there is room for disagreement as to whether all merchantable timber was harvested by the vendee.

Where warranty as to quality and quantity is specifically disclaimed by the Government in a timber cruise sale contract, only good faith is required of the Government in naming an estimated amount.

Gregory Lumber Co., Inc., 54 IBLA 309 (Apr. 30, 1981)

Guidelines issued under BLM Manual sec. 1791 relating to preparation of an environmental analysis record with regard to a proposed timber sale are not the type of material required by 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(1)(D) to be published in the Federal Register and as such are not binding on BLM.

A decision by a BLM district office to proceed with a proposed timber sale which was made after consideration of all relevant factors and which is supported by the record will not be set aside in the absence of a showing that the decision is clearly in error.

Lane County Audubon Society, 55 IBLA 171 (June 11, 1981)

With respect to the management of timber resources subject to the Act of Aug. 28, 1937, which relates to Oregon and California Railroad and Reconveyed Coos Bay Grant Lands, any conflict or inconsistency between that Act and the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 must be resolved in accordance with the former. However, where no relevant conflict is shown, FLPMA's definition of "sustained yield" will apply to both statutes.

A BLM decision to proceed with a proposed timber sale, when reached after consideration of all relevant factors and supported by the record, will not be disturbed absent a showing that the decision is clearly erroneous.

A.C.O.T.S., 61 IBLA 166 (Jan. 25, 1982)

Robert H. Barker, 62 IBLA 331 (Mar. 23, 1982)

BLM may properly deny a request for an extension of time for a timber sale contract where the purchaser asserts that the delay in cutting and removal was due to market fluctuations. However, where the Secretary has waived the regulations dealing with the term of timber sale contracts and extensions of time, thereby permitting uncompleted contracts to remain in effect past their expiration dates, an affected purchaser will be afforded a grace period on his right to cut and remove timber.

Hobin Lumber Co., 66 IBLA 88 (July 29, 1982)

Where an appeal of a Bureau of Land Management action regarding the triggering of a small business set-aside timber sale program raises only class size issues, the appeal must be dismissed because the Small Business Administration, not the Department of the Interior, determines class size.

Public Timber Purchasers Group, 66 IBLA 244 (Aug. 17, 1982)

"Sustained yield." As used in sec. 1 of the Act of Aug. 28, 1937, 43 U.S.C. § 1181a (1976), the term "sustained yield" means that the level of timber harvesting established should be such that, considering present levels of silviculture techniques, a constant amount of timber will be annually available on an indefinite basis.

A party challenging a decision to harvest timber on the grounds that the lands involved will not regenerate within the time contemplated by the applicable rules bears the burden of establishing both the factual predicates and the ultimate conclusion.

A party who challenges a decision to sell timber on the ground that timber harvesting will adversely affect water quality, plant and animal life, recreational values, or the economic stability of surrounding communities must show not only that some adverse effect will result because of timber harvesting, but that these effects are of sufficient magnitude so as to render the decision to harvest contrary to the applicable laws and regulations.

In re Lick Gulch Timber Sale, 72 IBLA 261 (Apr. 28, 1983) 90 I.D. 189

A BLM decision to proceed with a proposed timber sale, when reached after consideration of all relevant factors and supported by the record, will not be disturbed absent a showing that the decision is clearly erroneous.

A party challenging a decision to harvest timber on the grounds that allowable cut has been exceeded and that pertinent environmental considerations were disregarded bears the burden of establishing both the factual predicates and the ultimate conclusions.

In re Otter Slide Timber Sale, 75 IBLA 380 (Aug. 31, 1983)

A BLM decision to proceed with a proposed timber sale, when reached after consideration of all relevant factors and supported by the record, will not be disturbed in the absence of a showing that the decision is clearly in error.

An appellant who levels specific criticisms of a BLM decision to proceed with a timber sale in an attempt to overturn the sale as being poorly planned and ill-conceived cannot prevail where the record shows that BLM complied with applicable law and procedures in offering the tract for sale and where many of the concerns and criticisms amount to mere expressions of disagreement with BLM's conclusions. An appellant's judgment cannot be substituted for that of BLM on the basis of arguable differences of opinion.

Robert E. Salisbury, 79 IBLA 370 (Mar. 26, 1984)

A decision by BLM denying a protest to a proposed timber sale will be affirmed where the appellant does not present sufficient evidence that the sale area was misclassified as high-intensity land.

Where BLM removes concentrated unplantable zones from the area of a proposed timber sale, that area is not misclassified as high-intensity land even though small unplantable zones are interspersed throughout it.

In re Chatman-Kuehler Timber Sale, 80 IBLA 237 (Apr. 30, 1984)

A decision by BLM denying a protest to a proposed timber sale will be affirmed where the appellant does not present sufficient evidence that the sale area was misclassified as high-intensity land.

BLM may deviate from provisions contained in an environmental impact statement with respect to regeneration cutting in a planned timber sale where the deviation is not so significant as to require preparation of a supplemental environmental impact statement.

BLM may properly proceed with a proposed timber sale where the environmental assessment of the sale considered all relevant factors, including the impact of road construction on soil erosion, wildlife and recreational resources.

In re Bald Point Timber Sale, 80 IBLA 304 (May 4, 1984)

In reviewing a denial by the BLM of a protest of a timber sale on lands managed pursuant to the Act of Aug. 28, 1937 (O & C Act), 43 U.S.C. § 1181a (1982), on the issue of violation of the principle of "sustained yield," the Board will defer to BLM's judgment in the absence of a clear showing of failure to consider critical factors or that the timber sale is not supported by the administrative record.

In determining regeneration for purposes of high-intensity timber management land, the term "stocked" referring to the number of suitable trees per acre is properly distinguished from "established" referring to a stand of suitable growing trees which have survived at least one growing season.

A BLM decision to proceed with a proposed timber sale, when reached after consideration of all relevant factors and supported by the record, will not be disturbed absent a showing that the decision is clearly erroneous.

Curtin Mitchell & STAND, 82 IBLA 275 (Aug. 31, 1984)

A party who challenges a decision to sell timber on the ground that timber harvesting will adversely affect water quality, plant and animal life, property values, or the economic stability of surrounding communities must establish the decision to proceed with the timber sale is erroneous.

TITLE

GENERALLY

While it is a general rule that adverse possession does not run against a state, this rule does not apply as against the United States. Where the United States has maintained open and notorious possession of certain parcels of land for over 80 years, the United States has acquired title to those parcels through adverse possession even though the record title holder was a state.

SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT

Under the doctrine of respondeat superior a corporation is liable for the wrongful acts or omissions of its officers, agents, or employees acting within the scope of their authority or in the course of their employment.

The master/servant relationship and the liability of the master for the acts of the servant are determined by the law of the state in which the act took place. In Idaho, a principal or master can be held liable for exemplary or punitive damages based on the wrongful acts of its agent only when the agent's acts were authorized, requested, commanded, performed or recklessly tolerated by the board of directors or by a high managerial agent acting in behalf of the corporation within the scope of his office or employment, or when the acts have subsequently been ratified with full knowledge of the facts.

TOWNSITES

The townsite laws were repealed by sec. 703 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 90 Stat. 2790, and the initiation of an occupancy claim pursuant to any of the repealed laws after the effective date of FLPMA, Oct. 21, 1976, does not constitute a valid existing right which would survive FLPMA.

The initiation of an occupancy claim, pursuant to the townsite laws, after the effective date of FLPMA, Oct. 21, 1976, does not constitute a valid existing right.

Marko and Yarrow Lewis, 46 IBLA 257 (Mar. 27, 1980)

The townsite laws were repealed by sec. 703 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 90 Stat. 2790. A claim under the townsite laws will be rejected where appellants have submitted no proof that they occupied the land prior to the effective date of FLPMA, Oct. 21, 1976, thus giving them a valid exisitng right which would have survived FLPMA.

Peter Karl Hoskok, Bailey A.C. Hoskok, 48 IBLA 377 (July 11, 1980)

Where lands have been identified as being within a townsite by inclusion in an approved U.S. survey of the exterior boundaries of the townsite; where the townsite trustee duly receives title to these lands by patent and opens the area to settlement under the townsite laws; and where individuals, acting in reliance on explicit statements by the trustee that it is legal to do so, timely initiate settlement under governing Departmental regulations, a decision by the trustee to cancel the settlers' claims in order to reduce the size of the townsite to conform with the statutory limit will be vacated, and he will be directed instead to correct the patent by eliminating lands other than those occupied by the settlers.

A Native village corporation has no interest in lands included in a townsite prior to the enactment of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, as the lands were segregated prior to this date so that ANCSA did not withdraw the lands for selection by the corporation. Accordingly, the rights of settlers and of the municipality which derive from an entitlement created prior to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, are superior to the corporation's rights.

"Notation rule." Under the "notation rule" when the official records of the Bureau of Land Management have been noted to reflect the devotion of land to a particular use which is exclusive of other conflicting uses, no incompatible rights in that land can attach by reason of any subsequent application or entry until the record has been changed to reflect that the land is no longer so segregated. The rule applies even where the notation was posted to the records in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

The townsite laws were repealed by sec. 703 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 90 Stat. 2790, and the initiation of an occupancy claim pursuant to any of the repealed laws after the effective date of FLPMA, Oct. 21, 1976, does not constitute a valid existing right which would survive FLPMA.

Stephen Kenron et al., 51 IBLA 368 (Dec. 30, 1980)

Where the descriptive language accompanying a United States survey of the exterior of an Alaskan townsite notes expressly that the "townsite" of Ouzinkie is comprised of three tracts ("A, B, and C") and mentions elsewhere a fourth tract ("D") as being part of the "village" of Ouzinkie, Tract "D" is not properly regarded as being within the "townsite" under the regulations, and approval of the survey does not segregate it as part of the townsite.

Where a tract of land (Tract "D") was included in a patent to a townsite trustee of four tracts (Tracts "A, B, C, and D"), but the trustee had not applied for or entered Tract "D," and where the inclusion and patenting of Tract "D" resulted in the transfer of acreage in excess of the maximum allowed by statute to be included in the townsite, the patent was erroneous insofar as it included Tract "D" and should be corrected by eliminating that tract.

Stephen Kenron et al. (On Reconsideration), 65 IBLA 44 (June 23, 1982)

The Alaska townsite laws, 43 U.S.C. §§ 732-736 (1970), were repealed by the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, sec. 703(a), 90 Stat. 2789. The initiation of an occupancy claim, pursuant to the townsite laws, after the effective date of FLPMA, Oct. 21, 1976, does not constitute a valid existing right. No right was established where the only "improvement" prior to repeal consisted of clearing an area for site preparation in 1969, which clearing had thereafter revegetated with brush, and there was no other occupancy, use, or possession of the land until 1980.

TRESPASS

GENERALLY

Sec. 9 of the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970), contemplates that the Department of the Interior retains continuing jurisdiction and administration of mineral deposits reserved by that Act.

"Public lands." Under 43 CFR 3602.1 which defines a trespass, the term "public lands" includes mineral deposits reserved under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, 43 U.S.C. § 299 (1970).

In determining whether grazing trespasses are "willful," intent sufficient to establish willfulness may be shown by proof of facts which objectively show that the circumstances do not comport with the notion that the trespasser acted in good faith or innocent mistake, or that his or her conduct was so lacking in reasonableness or responsibility that it became reckless or negligent.

Holland Livestock Ranch and John J. Casey, 52 IBLA 326 (Feb. 19, 1981) 88 I.D. 275

Where BLM assesses trespass damages based on the reasonable value, extent, and duration of an unauthorized use of the public lands, this assessment will not be disturbed unless the trespasser submits convincing evidence that it is incorrect; however, upon review where it is determined that damages were not properly calculated, the case may be remanded for recalculation of the trespass charges.

Pensco Valley Telephone Cooperative, Inc., 55 IBLA 360 (June 26, 1981)

The Board of Land Appeals will not dismiss or set aside a decision by the Bureau of Land Management holding an appellant liable for an innocent mineral trespass solely because a notice of trespass cited a criminal statute.

A notice to cease trespass and an order to remove improvements from public lands may properly issue where appellant has been occupying public lands without authorization or claim or color of title.

A notice to cease trespass and order to remove improvements may be set aside to allow consideration of a special use permit with appropriate restrictions where appellant concedes lack of right to the land and it is not clear that a temporary use authorization would interefere with any immediate need of the land for public purposes.

Juliet Marsh Brown, 64 IBLA 379 (June 17, 1982)

Where the Bureau of Land Management has assessed treble damages for a trespass occurring in connection with a contract for sale of sand and gravel and the purchaser offers to produce evidence to show that severance of material not included in the contract of sale was not grossly negligent, contrary to the finding by BLM, a hearing is ordered to afford the purchaser an opportunity to prove facts as claimed.

The removal of sand and gravel for commercial purposes from land patented under the Stock-Raising Homestead Act, as amended, 43 U.S.C. § 291 (1970), constitutes a trespass since such sand and gravel has been reserved under the Act.

Brown-Tankersley (Trust), 76 IBLA 48 (Sept. 19, 1983)

One who settles on withdrawn land in Alaska acquires no rights to or title interest in the land which is superior to a conveyance of the land to a Native village corporation pursuant to sec. 12 of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, 43 U.S.C. § 1611 (1976), and the appeal against the conveyance must be dismissed.

L. Joe McVey, 77 IBLA 374 (Dec. 7, 1983)

When appellant does not have a rightful claim to the lands it is occupying, the United States is entitled to a court order directing appellant to remove itself and its possessions from the land and directing that if it does not do so by a specified date, the remaining structures would be deemed abandoned and property of the United States.

Constitution Petroleum Co., Inc., 78 IBLA 3 (Dec. 12, 1983)

R.S. 2477 does not provide for the construction of the grant according to the law of the state in which the land subject to the grant is situated; rather, its construction is a question of Federal law. By the time of the R.S. 2477 Idaho grant, Congress had already determined that telephone cables were not within the scope of an R.S. 2477 highway right-of-way. Thus, a telephone cable buried along an R.S. 2477 highway with a right-of-way from the State of Idaho but without the requisite BLM right-of-way is in trespass.

Mountain Bell, 83 IBLA 67 (Sept. 26, 1984)

MEASURE OF DAMAGES

When the Bureau of Land Management has appraised the damages for a mineral trespass under 43 CFR Part 9230, an appraisal will be sustained in the absence of an offer of specific substantial evidence that it is incorrect.

Pacific Power & Light Co., 45 IBLA 127 (Jan. 23, 1980)

Bureau of Land Management properly rejects an application for the sale of public land pursuant to the Unintentional Trespass Act, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1431-1435 (1976), where the applicant refuses to pay related damages for unauthorized use of the land. Where BLM assesses trespass damages based on the reasonable value, extent, and duration of an unauthorized use of the public lands, this assessment will not be disturbed unless the trespasser submits convincing evidence that it is incorrect.

GENERALLY

Where the Park Service determines at a hearing on the basis of the evidence and testimony presented that the claimant is entitled to the reimbursement sought for actual reasonable moving and related expenses under § 202(a)(1) of the Act, with respect to certain personal property, and agrees to pay such amount to the claimant, a withdrawal of the claimant's appeal as to such expenses will be accepted and the decision appealed from will be modified to that extent.

A claim for reimbursement of costs of maintaining and protecting real property prior to the Government's acquisition of it is properly denied on the basis that the Act does not provide for payment of such costs.

A loss of business claim is properly denied where the business had been discontinued prior to the Government's initiation of negotiations to purchase the property.

A claim for the allowance of interest on funds received for real property acquired by the United States is properly denied on the basis that the Act does not provide for such interest payments.

UNIFORM REAL PROPERTY ACQUISITION POLICY

Generally

Payments and benefits provided by Title II of the Act are made administratively in accordance with regulations and procedures established under provisions of the Act and are transactions separate and apart from land purchase contracts involving negotiations and agreement between the parties; accordingly, the amounts payable for relocation assistance benefits and for property acquisitions are not affected one by the other.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Duval Evans, 4 OHA 107 (Jan. 23, 1981)

Where the claim for additional moving and related costs was filed after the time limitation prescribed by Departmental regulations implementing the Relocation Act, and the record as a whole does not justify an extension of time for filing an additional claim, the claim is properly denied.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of E. Ray Sinclair, 4 OHA 216 (Jan. 4, 1982)

Where judgment required the claimant to remove certain fixtures to the real property, to which claimant had retained removal rights, and claimant failed to remove such property within the required time, such removal rights are properly treated as abandoned and the property remains in the United States.

Where claimant began occupancy of the acquired property after the acquisition by the Government had been completed, his subsequent move from the property is not as a result of the acquisition by the Government; hence claimant is not a displaced person, and is not eligible for benefits under the Act and Departmental regulations.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mike B. Gagliano and B. Roche-Andresen, 4 OHA 252 (Mar. 31, 1982)

Where a Federal payment for the acquisition of a pipeline easement is used to retire an existing mortgage on a residential property, and the owner of the property later decides to place a new mortgage on it, incurring a higher rate of interest, the owner is not entitled to reimbursement under the Act for the difference in interest rates because no actual displacement was involved.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of H. M. & Leola Cochran, 5 OHA 221 (Nov. 3, 1983)

Only displaced persons under the Act are entitled to moving expenses and tenants by sufferance are not displaced persons.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Don Fraser, Kenneth Thola, James Brown, & Patrick Baxter, 5 OHA 245 (Jan. 27, 1984)

A claim for reimbursement of expenses incurred for extension of an electric powerline across the portion of a tract of real property not acquired by the United States, to a site on that property to which the claimants relocated a hunting cabin formerly on the Government-acquired portion of the property, is properly disallowed on the basis that the Act and the implementing regulations do not provide for such payment.

To the extent any information given by Bureau personnel may have suggested to claimants that relocation assistance benefits would be allowable for expenses incurred in extending an electric powerline across the portion of real property not acquired by the United States, to a site on that property to which the claimants relocated a hunting cabin formerly on the Government-acquired portion of the property, such advice was erroneous and cannot serve as a basis for creating any rights in the claimants which are not authorized by law.

Where the record evidence shows persons displaced from lands acquired for the Big Cypress National Preserve were allowed a moving expense payment in an amount determined to be the amount of reasonable expenses which would have been incurred in a move from the acquired site to a replacement site approximately 50 miles beyond the boundary of the Preserve, the determination will be affirmed as in conformity with provisions of § 202(a)(1) of the Act and the Department's implementing regulations.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Gomer Jones, 3 OHA 173 (Jan. 31, 1980)

Expenses for wiring and installation of water softener facilities in the replacement dwelling are not reimbursable where they are shown to represent costs for adding facilities to the replacement dwelling rather than costs for reestablishment and reconnection of such facilities for personal property owned by the claimants and moved from the acquired dwelling to the replacement dwelling.

Withdrawal, at the hearing, of a claim for damage in moving of a printing press from the acquired dwelling to the replacement dwelling will be accepted since such expenses are not reimbursable. The Department's regulations provide for reimbursement of expenses incurred for insurance premiums covering damage of personal property while in transit.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Steffey, 3 OHA 179 (Mar. 13, 1980)

Where the record evidence shows the claimants have established their entitlement to reimbursement for actual reasonable moving and related expenses in an amount greater than that authorized by the Park Service in the decision appealed from, the decision will be modified to increase the allowance for such expenses, as appropriate.

Reimbursement is not allowable for costs of storage of certain tools and farm equipment where no evidence is submitted to show that such costs were paid.

Estimated losses for damage to an arc welder and a fanning mill in the process of moving will not be allowed where the arc welder was dropped during the process of loading it on a pickup and the claimants have not established that the damage to the fanning mill has impaired its usefulness.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse W. Barringer, 4 OHA 1 (Apr. 23, 1980)

Where the record indicates reimbursement has been allowed for actual reasonable moving and related expenses under § 202(a) of the Act, an additional payment cannot be authorized in the absence of evidence establishing entitlement thereto.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Richard M. Meeks, 4 OHA 173 (July 13, 1981)

Reimbursement will be allowed to the displaced homeowner for the estimated reasonable cost of fuel oil left in the acquired dwelling where the record shows such oil was purchased by the homeowner one week before she moved from the acquired property and she was assured by Park Service personnel at that time that the cost would be reimbursable because the Park Service would use the oil in its intended use of the acquired dwelling.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mrs. Josephine Erickson, 4 OHA 184 (July 30, 1981)

Reimbursement is not allowable for costs of moving structures or other improvements in which the displaced person reserved ownership rights.

Where claim includes request for payment of moving expense that is not adequately substantiated by supporting data, the acquiring agency requests additional supporting data, and such additional data are not supplied within a reasonable time, the claim for such expenses is properly denied.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of D. Stamato & Co., Inc., 4 OHA 221 (Jan. 5, 1982)

Where the record on appeal establishes that claimant failed to remove signboards from property acquired by the Park Service after several notices, and Park Service thereafter properly removed signs as abandoned property, payment of benefits in an amount equal to the actual reasonable expense required to relocate such signs was proper under sec. 202 of the Act and implementing Departmental regulations.

Where the cost of moving a low-value, high-bulk item of personal property would not be disproportionate to its value, the agency shall make payment to the displaced person for the actual direct losses of that property as a result of discontinuing a business operation, but the payment shall not exceed the reasonable expenses that would have been required to relocate the property, in accordance with 41 CFR 114-50.601(b).

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest L. Harpon, 5 OHA 9 (Aug. 11, 1982)

Costs of a survey of boundary lines of a replacement business property are not reimbursable as moving and related expenses under § 202 of the Act.

Expenses for temporary storage of some law books will be reimbursed to the extent such are shown by the record on appeal to be reasonable and necessary expenses in connection with the relocation of a law office.

Expenses claimed for loss of some secretarial services during the period of the move of a law office are nonallowable on the basis that the Act and the Department's implementing regulations do not provide for such payment.

Where the contract for moving a law office failed to specify requirements for reshelving of books and closed files in the library at the replacement site and the displacee was obliged to organize and reshelve the books and closed files himself, he may be reimbursed for reasonable additional moving costs.

Claimed losses of income resulting from errors and omissions in the telephone directory are not compensable as moving and related expenses under the Act and the implementing regulations.

Reimbursement claimed for the cost of a used window air-conditioner and for expenses incurred for cleaning, painting and installing it in the replacement property, are costs for an improvement to the replacement property and as such they are not allowable under regulations of the Department implementing the Act.

Expenses for purchase and installation of new carpeting in the replacement property, for replacing sidewalk and steps in front of that property, and for off-street parking while parking area was under construction on the replacement property, are expenses for and in connection with improvements to the relocation property and are not reimbursable under the Act and the implementing regulations as moving and related costs.

Trash hauling costs are not reimbursable for hauling items out of the relocation site to make the site ready for occupancy; nor are additional costs allowable for hauling items out of the Government-acquired site where the contract with the movers already provided for such trash removal services.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Nelson Howarth, 5 OHA 40 (Oct. 22, 1982)

Relocation assistance does not include payments for unspecified personal damages resulting from a Federal real property acquisition.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Roy Sager, 5 OHA 143 (Aug. 19, 1983)

A tenant in occupancy of acquired property at the time of its purchase by the United States is eligible for payment of allowable moving costs and related expenses under sec. 202(a) of the Act and implementing regulations of the Department.

Payment is allowable under sec. 202(a)(2) of the Act and the Department's implementing regulations for the reasonable in-place value of tenant-owned improvements on lands acquired by the United States, computed with reference to the remaining useful life of the property and without regard to the length of the term of the lease, where the cost of moving the property is shown to be prohibitive and there is no present market for its sale.

Expenses incurred for additions and improvements to the replacement business property rather than as costs for reestablishment and reconnection of facilities are not reimbursable as actual reasonable expenses incurred in relocating personal property under sec. 202(a)(1) of the Act and the Department's regulations.

Costs of advertising for new students and for an open house reception at the replacement school site are not reimbursable moving expenses under sec. 202(a)(1) of the Act and the Department's regulations.

Reimbursable moving and related expenses under sec. 202(a)(1) of the Act and the Department's regulations include costs for telephone calls to coordinate certain aspects of the move and costs for obtaining copies of a document to meet requirements for operating the displaced business at its replacement location.

Where the claimant has not submitted evidence to establish its entitlement to searching expense benefits in an amount greater than that authorized by the Park Service in the decision appealed from, the Park Service determination will be affirmed.

Moving Expense Allowance

Generally

Where a claimant has not established that he is entitled to more than the sum he applied for and received as moving expense and dislocation allowances under § 202 of the Act, in lieu of actual reasonable moving and related expenses, no change is warranted in the determination made.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Ray E. Davis, 4 OHA 20 (June 23, 1980)

Where the record shows the residence on the acquired lands was a part-time residence and not the permanent or customary and usual abode of the claimants, the claimants are not qualified to receive a moving expense allowance and a dislocation allowance under sec. 202(b) of the Act in lieu of actual reasonable moving and related expenses authorized by sec. 202(a) of the Act.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeals of Marvin E. Hepner & Ruth Hepner, 5 OHA 270 (Feb. 29, 1984)

Payments in Lieu of Moving and Related Expenses

Generally

Eligibility for payments in lieu of moving and related expenses, pursuant to 41 CFR Subpart 114-50.7, depends on the nature of the claimant's status as a displaced person, and when the status is not shown to be related to displacement from a farm operation or business the claimant is not eligible for payments pursuant to 41 CFR 114-50.702 through 114-50.703.2.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of James Karl Lothmann, 4 OHA 86 (Oct. 31, 1980)

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilson, 4 OHA 192 (Aug. 20, 1981)

A claim for a fixed payment under § 202(c) of the Act for displacement from a business, in lieu of actual reasonable moving and related expenses under § 202(a) of the Act, is properly disallowed where the claimant fails to establish that the business cannot be relocated without a substantial loss of its existing patronage.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of John P. Friel, Esq., 4 OHA 244 (Mar. 8, 1982)

A fixed payment in lieu of actual reasonable moving and related expenses is properly allowed for the minimum sum of $2,500, specified in the Act, where the record shows the business was operated at a loss for the 2 taxable years immediately preceding the year in which the United States acquired the property, all else being regular.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of George E. Keath (President), Ochopee L P Gas Co., Inc., 5 OHA 93 (Feb. 14, 1983)

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Donald J. Daleske, 4 OHA 101 (Jan. 8, 1981)

Replacement Housing Payment for Homeowners

Generally

The comparability study undertaken by the agency to determine replacement housing differential payment was based on incorrect data regarding lot size of the agency acquired dwelling. The study, which placed importance on lot comparisons, therefore failed to include replacement dwellings most representative of the dwelling acquired.

The comparability study undertaken by the agency to determine replacement housing differential payment failed to include waterfront properties even though the agency acquired property possessed waterfront and similar properties could be found within a 50-mile radius of the acquired property.

The "comparable replacement dwelling" relied upon by the agency in computing a replacement housing differential payment to the claimants resulted in an unjust and inequitable award. Because the "comparable replacement dwelling" used by the agency is much smaller in lot size than the acquired dwelling and lacks waterfront characteristics, it cannot be considered "functionally equivalent and substantially the same as the acquired dwelling" as that term is used in the Department's regulations.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lawrence Harmon, 3 OHA 168 (Jan. 30, 1980)

Where the record shows that the replacement housing differential payment authorized by the Park Service represents an amount which, when added to the acquisition cost of the dwelling acquired, meets the reasonable cost of a comparable replacement dwelling which is decent, safe and sanitary, adequate to accommodate the displaced persons, reasonably accessible to public services and places of employment, available on the private market, and otherwise in compliance with regulatory standards of the Department, the Park Service determination will be affirmed.

A claim under sec. 203(a)(1)(B) of the Act for reimbursement of costs for a loan origination fee incurred by the claimants in purchasing their replacement dwelling is properly disallowed where the record shows the acquired dwelling was not encumbered by a mortgage.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Steffen, 3 OHA 179 (Mar. 13, 1980)

For the purpose of a determination of what constitutes a "comparable replacement dwelling," made pursuant to sec. 203(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 41 CFR 114-50.201(d), it is not necessary that the replacement dwelling be identical to the one taken. Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Ray K. Davis, 4 OHA 20 (June 23, 1980)

Where the record evidence shows that the dwelling on the acquired lands was a seasonal or part-time residence and not the permanent or customary and usual abode of the claimants, the claimants are ineligible to receive replacement housing payment benefits under § 203 of the Act and the Department's implementing regulations.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond C. Walsh, 4 OHA 39 (Aug. 12, 1980)

Where the record shows the Park Service allowed less than the proper amount for replacement housing differential costs under § 203 of the Act, as a result of utilizing in its computation of such benefits only 95% rather than 100% of the list price of the dwelling found by the Park Service, after a housing survey and analysis, to be the most comparable replacement dwelling available at the time of the claimants' displacement from the acquired dwelling, the Park Service determination will be modified to increase the allowable housing differential costs as indicated to be proper.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Donahue, 5 OHA 1 (June 18, 1982)

Where substantial evidence of record supports a conclusion that a displaced person claiming homeowner's replacement housing payment benefits under § 203 of the Act is entitled instead to replacement housing benefits under § 204 of the Act, as a displaced tenant, the case will be remanded for a determination of the benefits allowable to the claimant under § 204 of the Act.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mrs. Mildred E. Knox, 5 OHA 60 (Dec. 6, 1982)

Where the Government takes a 3-year option on a piece of residential property in 1969 and the homeowner relocates the same year and subsequently leases the property prior to the Government's actual acquisition of it in 1972, the tenant and not the homeowner is entitled to whatever replacement housing benefits may be allowable.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Henry J. Meyer & Doris A. Meyer, 5 OHA 224 (Nov. 7, 1983)

Where a Federal agency has determined that the former owner of an acquired property was not a full-time resident of the property previous to its acquisition, the burden of proof is on the owner to refute that determination.

Where the occupancy of a dwelling previous to its Federal acquisition is in dispute, substantial weight must be given to utility records and to their interpretation by a competent, impartial source, such as the local power company, that clearly support a contention by the claimant of full-time occupancy of the property during the period in question.

Where the record shows the dwelling on the acquired lands was a part-time residence and not the permanent or customary and usual abode of the claimants, the claimants are ineligible to receive replacement housing payment benefits under sec. 203 of the Act.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeals of Marvin E. Hepner & Ruth Hepner, 5 OHA 270 (Feb. 29, 1984)

Waiver of Benefits

Persons who elected to retain a right of use and occupancy of a cabin acquired by the United States are deemed to have waived any replacement housing payment benefits under § 203 of the Act.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Joseph J. Jirik, 4 OHA 11 (May 12, 1980)

A claim for replacement housing benefits is properly disallowed where the claimant sold the property to the Government, reserving a right of use and occupancy of the dwelling thereon for a term of years, and before the expiration of the reserved term of use and occupancy and the claimant's move from the property, the Congress eliminated replacement housing supplement benefits as to this class of claimants.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Paul E. Barney, 5 OHA 53 (Nov. 9, 1982)

Replacement Housing Payment for Tenants and Certain Others

Persons who elected to retain a right of use and occupancy of a cabin acquired by the United States are deemed to have waived any replacement housing payment benefits under § 204 of the Act.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Joseph J. Jirik, 4 OHA 11 (May 12, 1980)

Where claimants subleased or rented space in a house leased by another under an agreement prohibiting subleases or subletting in a location where local zoning regulations proscribed subletting to roomers, and where claimants were not related to their lessor, claimants are not entitled to rental benefits under the Act and Departmental regulations.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Kevin Rickard & Robert Winston, 4 OHA 30 (July 2, 1980)

A determination of ineligibility for a rental replacement housing payment under § 204 of the Act will be affirmed where the evidence shows more than one year elapsed from the time the claimant moved from his rental unit on the Government-acquired property to the time he commenced occupancy of his replacement rental unit.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. William K. Friedman, 4 OHA 33 (July 30, 1980)

Replacement Housing Payment for Tenants and Certain Others--Continued

Where the evidence of record shows the average monthly reasonable cost for renting comparable replacement housing, computed under the schedule method, is $41 more than the average monthly rent paid for the residence from which the claimant moved, a rental replacement housing differential payment of $1,968, representing the additional rental costs for a period of 4 years, is proper under § 204(1) of the Act and the Department's regulations.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of Mr. Donald J. Raleske, 4 OHA 101 (Jan. 8, 1981)

Replacement housing payment benefits under § 204(2) of the Act and the Department's regulations are properly denied where the record shows the claimants purchased their replacement dwelling more than 8 years prior to their displacement from the Government-acquired property.

Uniform Relocation Assistance Appeal of William G. Pitman (Mr. & Mrs.), 5 OHA 333 (June 7, 1984)

WAIVER

In Lower v. Watt, 684 F.2d 957 (D.C. Cir. 1982), and Cayer v. Watt, 720 F.2d 626 (10th Cir. 1983), the amendment and disclaimer of Fred L. Engle, d.b.a. Resource Service Co. was held to be effective to waive the exclusive agency provision that formed part of the company's contract with its clients. The waiver being effective, neither the company nor Engle possessed an interest in a client's offer at the time of a drawing of simultaneously filed oil and gas lease offers so as to invalidate the offer.

WATER AND WATER RIGHTS

GENERALLY

When considering applications for rights-of-way privileges, the Department of the Interior has no power to determine questions of control and appropriation of water rights as between private parties, as such questions are exclusively matters of state law.

FEDERAL APPROPRIATION

Neither FLPMA nor the Taylor Grazing Act authorizes appropriation of water or provide an independent statutory basis for claims for water uses inconsistent in any way with the substantive requirements of state law.

The United States should comply with the substantive and procedural provisions of state law when acquiring and appropriating water except (1) where Congress or the Executive has reserved land or water for particular Federal purposes; (2) where Congress has clearly mandated that unappropriated water on the public lands is reasonably required for a Federal program or purpose and that water cannot be acquired in a manner conforming to all substantive requirements of state law; (3) the United States is entitled to a priority date as of its historic date of first use where water has been used historically for consumptive beneficial uses recognized by state law but without having conformed to procedural requirements prescribed by state law.

WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS ACT

Sec. 9 of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act withdraws from appropriation under the mining laws the minerals in Federal lands which constitute the bed or bank, or are situated within one-quarter mile of the bank, of any river listed as a potential addition to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System or actually designated as a wild river under the system. Land constituting the bed and banks and within one-quarter mile of the banks of the North Fork of the American River from Cedars to the Auburn Reservoir has been withdrawn from mineral location and entry since Jan. 3, 1975.

Clarence E. Fitzgerald, 55 IBLA 31 (May 28, 1981)

The use of the wild section of a river designated as a wild and scenic river pursuant to the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968 (Act), 16 U.S.C. § 1271 (1976), for recreational powerboat use is not such an existing right or privilege affecting Federal land so as to be protected by sec. 12(b) of the Act, 16 U.S.C § 1283(b) (1976). 43 CFR 8351.2-1(a) authorized BLM to issue orders restricting recreational use of powerboats on a wild and scenic river.

WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS ACT--Continued

BLM's decision to approve a transfer of a permit for authorized use on the Rogue River, designated as a wild and scenic river pursuant to the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968, 16 U.S.C. § 1271 (1976), from one commercial outfitter to another is proper where it maintains the 50/50 allocation of river use between commercial outfitters and private boaters.

Wilderness Public Rights Fund, National Organization for River Sports, 63 IBLA 91 (Mar. 31, 1982)

The Bureau of Land Management may properly charge fees for special recreation permits authorizing commercial rafting on the Rogue River, a designated wild and scenic river, under sec. 4(c) of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act, 16 U.S.C. § 460l-6a(c), and Departmental regulations at 43 CFR Part 8372.

Departmental regulations at 43 CFR Subpart 8372 require that, when the Bureau of Land Management issues special recreation permits authorizing use of special areas such as a designated wild and scenic river, fees must be charged for noncommercial as well as commercial users engaging in the same activity, except to the extent that a user is exempted from paying fees by 43 CFR 8372.4(d).

WILD FREE-ROAMING HORSES AND BURROS ACT

The Bureau of Land Management may not properly cancel cooperative agreements under the Act of Dec. 15, 1971, as amended, 16 U.S.C. § 1331 (Supp. II 1978), for wild free-roaming horses where there is no evidence that the horses under the agreements were inhumanely treated, only allegations that the assignee inhumanely treated another horse that was in his custody by virtue of a power of attorney under a separate cooperative agreement.

Patrick E. Hammond, 60 IBLA 205 (Nov. 27, 1981)

A decision cancelling a cooperative agreement for private maintenance of wild free-roaming horses will be affirmed on appeal where the record indicates the horses were commercially exploited as rodeo bucking stock in violation of the cooperative agreement and the relevant regulations.

Cecil McCandless et al., 64 IBLA 76 (May 10, 1982)

A cooperative agreement for the private maintenance of livestock under the protection of the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act may be summarily canceled by the Bureau of Land Management upon good and sufficient evidence that the terms of the agreement have been violated by depriving the animals of adequate food, water, and health care and/or by subjecting them to inhumane treatment. The deteriorating condition of the animals themselves, and credible reports by third parties of substandard care, constitutes such good and sufficient evidence, and the decision to cancel will be affirmed in the absence of a showing that pursuasive countervailing evidence exists.

WILD FREE-ROAMING HORSES AND BURROS ACT--Continued

BLM may properly take immediate possession of wild free-roaming horses, in accordance with 43 CFR 4740.4-3(e), where there is sufficient evidence in terms of the physical condition of the animals and the credible reports of third parties that the animals are being inhumanely treated, i.e., that they lack necessary food and shelter, have failed to receive medical treatment, and are subject to substandard animal husbandry practices.

WILDERNESS ACT

Sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act directs the Secretary to review those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics described in the Wilderness Act of Sept. 3, 1964, and from time to time report to the President his recommendation as to the suitability or nonsuitability of each such area or island for preservation as wilderness.

Sierra Club, 53 IBLA 159 (Mar. 12, 1981)

Sierra Club, 54 IBLA 31 (Apr. 6, 1981)

Sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), mandates review by the Secretary only of those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a), 43 U.S.C. § 1711(a) (1976), as having wilderness characteristics described in sec. 2(c) of the Wilderness Act, 43 U.S.C. § 1131(c) (1976).

Even if a 720-acre nonisland area of public land were considered as exhibiting the wilderness characteristics of size, i.e., of sufficient size as to make practicable its preservation and use in an unimpaired condition, sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), would not require review by the Secretary because such a parcel contains less than 5,000 acres.

Where the Bureau of Land Management's final initial inventory decision states that certain public land is eliminated from wilderness review in that it obviously lacks wilderness characteristics because it is too small to make practicable its preservation and use in an unimpaired condition, that decision will be affirmed in the absence of sufficient reasons to change the result.

Save the Glades Committee, 54 IBLA 215 (Apr. 23, 1981)

Where an appellant disagrees with the decision below and seeks to have his judgment substituted for that of the decisionmaker, his appeal will be carefully considered, with due regard for the public interest. However, where the responsibility for making such judgments has been exercised by an officer duly delegated with the authority to do so, his action will ordinarily be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

While the Board of Land Appeals will give "considerable deference" to Bureau of Land Management designations of Wilderness Study Areas if thorough investigation underlies the Bureau's decision, where an appellant can specifically and convincingly show that there is sufficient reason to change the Bureau's decision, the Board must resolve the issue in favor of appellant. Such is the case where appellant has convinced the Board that the designated Wilderness Study Area is not "wilderness," as that term is described in 16 U.S.C. § 1131(c) (1976), by submitting detailed maps and photographs showing the adverse impact of appellant's open-pit mining operation on the area.

Union Oil Co., 56 IBLA 206 (July 22, 1981)

The extent to which ongoing activities outside of a wilderness study area are impinging upon adjacent areas inside a wilderness study area so as to deprive them of wilderness characteristics is properly the subject of determination during the inventory process of the wilderness program; the effect of future or potential activities is properly analyzed in the study phase.

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include or exclude land from a wilderness study area must show that the decision appealed was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

Union Oil Co. (On Reconsideration), 58 IBLA 166 (Sept. 28, 1981)

Sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 directs the Secretary to review those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics described in the Wilderness Act of Sept. 3, 1964, and from time to time report to the President his recommendation as to the suitability or nonsuitability of each such area or island for preservation as wilderness. BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

Where the record evidences BLM's first-hand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments of the area's naturalness qualities are entitled to great deference.

National Outdoor Coalition, 59 IBLA 291 (Oct. 30, 1981)

Sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act directs the Secretary to review those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics described in the Wilderness Act of Sept. 3, 1964, and from time to time report to the President his recommendation as to the suitability or nonsuitability of each such area or island for preservation as wilderness.

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

Bureau of Land Management's practice of designating an area containing roads or other intrusions as a nonwilderness corridor (cherrystem), thereby excluding such area from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful or prohibited practice in fulfilling the inventory phase of the wilderness review program.

C & K Petroleum Co., 59 IBLA 301 (Nov. 3, 1981)

An appellant or intervenor requesting this Board to reverse a Bureau of Land Management decision regarding the inclusion or exclusion of a unit of land as a wilderness study area must show the decision to be based on a clear and specific error of law or fact, otherwise the Board will affirm.

Norrell G. Hastings, 60 IBLA 54 (Nov. 17, 1981)

The Bureau of Land Management may designate an area as a wilderness study area, in accordance with sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), even though it is traversed by a temporary road constructed pursuant to a right-of-way permit granted after the effective date of the Act where BLM has taken actions to ensure that such a grant would not result in permanent impairment of the area for suitability for preservation as wilderness.

California Ass'n of Four-Wheel Drive Clubs, Inc., National Outdoor Coalition, 60 IBLA 240 (Dec. 4, 1981)

Sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 directs the Secretary to review those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics described in the Wilderness Act of Sept. 3, 1964, and from time to time report to the President his recommendations as to the suitability or nonsuitability of each such area or island for preservation as wilderness.

Under Organic Act Directive No. 78-61, Change 3, July 12, 1979, the effects of the imprints of man which occur outside an inventory unit are generally factors to be considered during the study phase of the wilderness review program. Imprints of man outside the unit may be considered during the inventory stage only in situations where the imprint is adjacent to the unit and its impact is so extremely imposing that it cannot be ignored, and if not considered reasonable application of inventory guidelines would be lost.

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

Where the Bureau of Land Management designates an inventory unit as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), the decision will be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

While the Bureau of Land Management may inventory and identify areas of the public lands of less than 5,000 acres as having wilderness characteristics, it may not properly designate such areas as wilderness study areas under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), because that section only mandates review of roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands.

The nonimpairment mandate of sec. 603(c), 43 U.S.C. § 1782(c) (1976), is therefore not applicable to those areas of less than 5,000 acres. However, such areas may be managed under the general management authority of sec. 302, 43 U.S.C. § 1732 (1976), in a manner consistent with wilderness objectives, and such areas may also be recommended for wilderness designation.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments as to whether an inventory unit possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation are entitled to considerable deference.

San Juan County Comm'n, 61 IBLA 99 (Jan. 4, 1982)

In assessing the presence or absence of wilderness characteristics in an inventory unit, the Bureau of Land Management necessarily makes subjective judgments

which are entitled to considerable deference when challenged on appeal and such judgments may not be overcome by expressions of simple disagreement.

Where the Bureau of Land Management designates an inventory unit as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), the decision will be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

City of Colorado Springs, 61 IBLA 124 (Jan. 15, 1982)

Koch Industries, Inc., 62 IBLA 45 (Feb. 24, 1982)

BLM does not violate the terms of sec. 603(a), Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 43 U.S.C. § 1782 (1976), directing the Secretary to review those roadless areas of five thousand acres or more of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics, where BLM undertakes review of an area for wilderness characteristics prior to an inventory of all public lands.

Where part of a unit designated as a wilderness study area appears not to possess outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation, BLM may consider this factor during its study phase and make any appropriate boundary adjustments. However, the lack of an outstanding opportunity for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation will not disqualify part of a unit from consideration during the study phase where other parts of the unit have been identified during the inventory phase as meeting the outstanding opportunity criterion.

Petroleum, Inc., 61 IBLA 139 (Jan. 18, 1982)

Sights and sounds outside a wilderness study area will be considered during the study phase of the wilderness review process absent a finding by BLM during the inventory phase that such impacts are adjacent to the unit and are so extremely imposing that they cannot be ignored, and if not considered, reasonable application of inventory guidelines would be questioned.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgment of the area's naturalness qualities and its subjective determinations as to whether the area possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation are entitled to considerable deference.

The argument that a wilderness study area would be better utilized for a flood control project is premature during the inventory phase of the wilderness review process. During the study phase, BLM will determine the suitability or nonsuitability of each wilderness study area for wilderness preservation. This determination, made through BLM's land use planning system, will consider all values, resources, and uses of the public lands.

Animal Protection Institute of America, 61 IBLA 222 (Jan. 28, 1982)

A decision of the State Director designating an inventory unit as a wilderness study area will not be disturbed on appeal where the appellant fails to meet its burden of pointing out specific errors of law or fact in the decision below. More than mere disagreement with BLM's conclusion is required to reverse its decisions or place a factual matter at issue.

L. J. Cornelius, 61 IBLA 279 (Feb. 2, 1982)

Where the Bureau of Land Management designates an inventory unit as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), the decision will be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

While the Bureau of Land Management may inventory and identify areas of the public lands of less than 5,000 acres as having wilderness characteristics, it may not properly designate such areas as wilderness study areas under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), because that section only mandates review of roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands. However, such areas may be managed under the general management authority of sec. 302, 43 U.S.C. § 1732 (1976), in a manner consistent with wilderness objectives, and such areas may also be recommended for wilderness designation.

Don Coops et al., 61 IBLA 300 (Feb. 3, 1982)

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The requirement in sec. 2(c) of the Wilderness Act of 1964, 16 U.S.C. § 1131(c) (1976), that a wilderness possess, inter alia, outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation is properly construed to require outstanding opportunities for either solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation; both need not be present in an inventory unit to allow the unit to enter the study phase of the wilderness review process.

Churchill County Board of Commissioners, 61 IBLA 370 (Feb. 17, 1982)

Where the Bureau of Land Management designates an inventory unit as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), the decision will be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

Frank Vaughn, 61 IBLA 387 (Feb. 18, 1982)

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

Sights and sounds outside a wilderness study area will be considered during the study phase of the wilderness review process absent a finding by BLM during the inventory phase that such impacts are adjacent to the unit and are so extremely imposing that they cannot be ignored, and if not considered, reasonable application of inventory guidelines would be questioned.

Walter E. Bossit, 62 IBLA 99 (Mar. 1, 1982)

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

While the Bureau of Land Management may inventory and identify areas of the public lands of less than 5,000 acres as having wilderness characteristics, it may not properly designate such areas as wilderness study areas under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), because that section only mandates review of roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands. However, such areas may be managed under the general management authority of sec. 302, 43 U.S.C. § 1732 (1976), in a manner consistent with wilderness objectives, and such areas may also be recommended for wilderness designation.

State of Nevada et al., 62 IBLA 153 (Mar. 5, 1982)

A BLM decision to eliminate an inventory unit from further consideration as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), will be set aside and the case remanded to BLM where, on appeal, the appellant raises substantial questions concerning the adequacy of BLM's consideration of whether the unit has the requisite outstanding opportunity for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation, and the record does not adequately support BLM's conclusion on that criterion.

Sierra Club, Utah Chapter, 62 IBLA 263 (Mar. 15, 1982)

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include or exclude land from a wilderness study area must show that the decision appealed was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

A BLM decision to eliminate an inventory unit from further consideration as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), will be set aside and the case remanded to BLM where, on appeal, the appellant raises substantial questions concerning the adequacy of BLM's consideration of whether the unit has the requisite outstanding opportunity for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation, and the record does not adequately support BLM's conclusion on that criterion.

Where an appellant disagrees with the decision below and seeks to have his judgment substituted for that of the decisionmaker, his appeal will be carefully considered, with due regard for the public interest. However, where the responsibility for making such judgments has been exercised by an officer duly delegated with the authority to do so, his action will ordinarily be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

Committee for Idaho's High Desert, 62 IBLA 319 (Mar. 22, 1982)

Organic Act Directive 78-61, Change 3 (July 12, 1979, at p. 3), specifies that as a general rule the boundary of a wilderness inventory unit is to be determined based on an evaluation of the imprints of man within the unit.

In evaluating a unit's opportunities for solitude, BLM is directed by the Wilderness Inventory Handbook to consider factors which influence solitude only as they affect a person's opportunity to avoid the sights, sounds, and evidence of other people in the inventory unit. Factors or elements influencing solitude may include size, natural screening, and the ability of the user to find a secluded spot.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgment of the area's naturalness qualities and its subjective determinations as to whether the area possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation are entitled to considerable deference.

Organic Act Directive 78-61, Change 2 (June 28, 1979, at p. 5), specifies that BLM must evaluate the cumulative effect of minor imprints of man on an inventory unit. When multiple imprints of man are considered to be substantially noticeable and the decision has been made to eliminate a group of these imprints, natural portions of the unit, which are located between the individual imprints of man, must not be automatically excluded.

Sierra Club et al., 62 IBLA 367 (Mar. 24, 1982)

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include or exclude land from a wilderness study area must show that the decision appealed was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

Where the Bureau of Land Management designates an inventory unit as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), the decision will be affirmed in the absence of a showing of compelling reasons for modification or reversal.

Cation Steens Corp., The Victoria Co., 63 IBLA 85 (Mar. 31, 1982)

Sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), mandates review by the Secretary only of those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a), 43 U.S.C. § 1711(a) (1976), as having wilderness characteristics described in sec. 2(c) of the Wilderness Act, 43 U.S.C. § 1131(c) (1976).

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include or exclude land from a wilderness study area must show that the decision appealed was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

John W. Black et al., 63 IBLA 165 (Apr. 6, 1982)

"Public lands." Reclamation withdrawn lands on which there are no authorized or constructed reclamation projects are administered by the Bureau of Land Management under a memorandum of agreement between the Bureau of Reclamation and Bureau of Land Management (Mar. 1972). In the absence of contrary language in an order withdrawing lands for reclamation purposes, reclamation withdrawn lands which do not have authorized or constructed projects on them are "public lands" within the meaning of secs. 103(e) and 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

During the study phase of the wilderness review process, BLM will consider all values, resources, and uses of the lands within a wilderness study area.

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

George Azar, 63 IBLA 172 (Apr. 8, 1982)

In order to enter the study phase of the wilderness review process, an inventory unit need not be free of all intrusions or imprints of man. Sec. 2(c) of the Wilderness Act of Sept. 3, 1964, 16 U.S.C. § 1131(c) (1976), requires only that an area generally appear to have been affected primarily by the forces of nature, with the imprint of man's work substantially unnoticeable.

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

In evaluating a unit's opportunities for solitude, BLM is directed by the Wilderness Inventory Handbook to consider factors which influence solitude only as they affect a person's opportunity to avoid the sights, sounds, and evidence of other people in the inventory unit. Marvin Cooey et al., 63 IBLA 208 (Apr. 12, 1982)

Don S. Orlando et al., 64 IBLA 7 (May 4, 1982)

While the Bureau of Land Management may inventory and identify areas of the public lands of less than 5,000 acres as having wilderness characteristics, it may not properly designate such areas as wilderness study areas under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), because that section only mandates review of roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands.

In assessing the presence or absence of wilderness characteristics in an inventory unit, the Bureau of Land Management necessarily makes subjective judgments which are entitled to considerable deference when challenged on appeal and such judgments may not be overcome by expressions of simple disagreement.

Inyo County Board of Supervisors, 63 IBLA 321 (Apr. 27, 1982)

Inventory units of the public lands under 5,000 acres in area are properly excluded from the intensive inventory phase of BLM's wilderness review process, because such lands clearly and obviously do not meet the criteria for designation as a wilderness study area.

California Wilderness Coalition et al., 63 IBLA 330 (Apr. 28, 1982)

Where the entire mineral estate underlying all or a portion of several wilderness inventory units, with the attendant rights of entry, access, occupation, exploration, development, and improvement of the surface, is owned in fee simple by a private corporation, the mineral estate is a "vested right" as distinguished in public law terminology from a "valid existing right" and, being protected by Constitutional guarantees, is immune from denial or extinguishment by the exercise of Secretarial discretion or regulation. It is legally beyond the authority of the Secretary to fulfill the mandates of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 and the Wilderness Act to manage such lands for their protection and preservation as wilderness, and the inclusion of such lands in designated wilderness study areas is error.

Santa Fe Pacific Railroad Co., 64 IBLA 27 (May 6, 1982)

BLM does not violate the terms of sec. 603(a), Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782 (1976), directing the Secretary to review those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics, where BLM undertakes a review of the public lands for wilderness characteristics prior to a multiresource inventory of the public lands.

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments of the area's naturalness qualities are entitled to considerable deference.

An inventory unit must qualify as having wilderness characteristics without considering rehabilitation potential, i.e., rehabilitation should not be the basis for concluding that wilderness values exist in a unit. Rehabilitation potential should be considered only for those imprints of man that exist within a unit but are not so significant as to automatically disqualify the unit or portion of a unit.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments as to whether an inventory unit possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation are entitled to considerable deference.

However, such areas may be managed under the general management authority of sec. 302, 43 U.S.C. § 1732 (1976), in a manner consistent with wilderness objectives, and such areas may also be recommended for wilderness designation.

Asarco, Inc., et al., 64 IBLA 50 (May 6, 1982)

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include land in a wilderness Study Area must show that the decision appealed from was premised on either a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrysteas), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

It is not proper to exclude land from a wilderness study area merely because there has been no consideration of its potential mineral value. The mineral potential of any tract is to be considered in the study phase rather than the inventory phase of the wilderness review process in order to move more carefully to determine the effect of a permanent wilderness designation on such values.

A wilderness study area designation will not be overturned on appeal on the basis of an appellant's claim that roads exist in the area, in the absence of allegations that mechanical improvements or mechanical maintenance has taken place on such routes.

P. H. Martin, 64 IBLA 307 (June 8, 1982)

In assessing the presence or absence of wilderness characteristics in an inventory unit, the Bureau of Land Management necessarily makes subjective judgments which are entitled to considerable deference and may not be overcome by expressions of simple disagreement.

A state director's decision designating an inventory unit as a wilderness study area apparently on the strength of conclusory unsupported public opinion statements will be reversed where BLM's firsthand assessment shows that the unit in question did not possess the requisite outstanding opportunity for solitude or for a primitive and unconfined type of recreation.

Where, during the pendency of an appeal involving the protest of the designation of land units as WSA's, the Board issues a decision in another case involving the same units in which it holds that BLM's designation of these units as WSA's is error, and thereby, achieves the result sought by the appellant whose appeal is pending, the issue is moot and the appeal is dismissed.

The argument that a wilderness study area would be better utilized for oil and gas development is premature during the inventory phase of the wilderness review process. During the study phase, BLM will determine the suitability or nonsuitability of each wilderness study area for wilderness preservation. This determination, made through BLM's land use planning system, will consider all values, resources, and uses of the public lands.

BLM's practice of examining the mineral potential in the study phase of the wilderness review process, rather than the inventory phase, does not violate sec. 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(c) (1976).

Statements that the area is affected by outside sights and sounds and bears noticeable scars of man's intrusions will not suffice in the absence of evidence that the impact on the unit is so pervasive as to preclude a rational finding of wilderness characteristics.

City of Delta, 66 IBLA 282 (Aug. 19, 1982)

Sec. 2(c) of the Wilderness Act of Sept. 3, 1964, 16 U.S.C. § 1131(c) (1976), requires, inter alia, that an area designated for wilderness preservation generally appear to have been affected primarily by the forces of nature with the imprint of man's work substantially unnoticeable. "Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments of the area's naturalness, opportunities for solitude, or opportunities for primitive and unconfined recreation, are entitled to considerable deference.

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include land in a wilderness study area must show that the decision appealed from was premised on either a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

Colorado River Water Conservation District, 67 IBLA 287 (Sept. 28, 1982)

In assessing the presence or absence of wilderness characteristics in an inventory unit, the Bureau of Land Management necessarily makes subjective judgments which are entitled to considerable deference when challenged on appeal and such judgments may not be overcome by expressions of simple disagreement.

Mitchell Energy Corp., Texas Gas Exploration Corp., 68 IBLA 219 (Nov. 12, 1982)

A decision to establish a wilderness study area pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, is proper absent a showing of compelling reasons requiring modification or reversal. Arguments that the area is affected by outside industrial and commercial activity do not preclude further study of the area's fitness for wilderness classification in the absence of proof that the intrusions by man are so great as to prevent the possibility of wilderness classification.

Arguments which question the ultimate best use of a proposed wilderness study area for wilderness purposes are prematurely raised at the intensive inventory stage of agency review.

Public Service Co. of Colorado, Koch Industries, Inc., 68 IBLA 262 (Nov. 17, 1982)

When the Bureau of Land Management designates an inventory unit as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), the decision will be affirmed where appellant fails to point out specific errors of law or fact in the decision below--more than mere disagreement with the conclusion of BLM is required to reverse a decision or place a factual matter at issue.

Kenneth H. Earp, Doris N. Earp, 69 IBLA 182 (Dec. 15, 1982)

Where the wilderness inventory discloses an area to be affected primarily by the forces of nature with the imprint of man's work substantially unnoticeable, the presence of minor intrusions which are substantially unnoticeable will not preclude designation as a wilderness study area.

A decision to draw the boundary of a wilderness study area along the edge of an imprint of man will be affirmed in the absence of a showing that the adjacent imprint so impinges upon lands within the wilderness study area as to deprive them of wilderness characteristics.

Owyhee Cattlemen's Ass'n, Idaho Board of Land Comm'rs, Idaho Cattlemen's Ass'n, 71 IBLA 4 (Feb. 10, 1983)

The proper scope of the wilderness inventory conducted under secs. 201 and 603 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. §§ 1711, 1782 (1976), involves a determination of whether the land inventoried is possessed of the wilderness characteristics defined by Congress so as to require designation as a wilderness study area. The question of the suitability of a tract of land within a wilderness study area for designation as wilderness, as contrasted with devotion of the land to other purposes, is properly considered during the subsequent study phase of the wilderness review process.

James Stewart Co., 71 IBLA 100 (Feb. 24, 1983)

The subjective judgment of BLM as to whether an inventory unit possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation is entitled to considerable deference where the record discloses BLM's firsthand knowledge of the land within the unit.

Richard J. Leaumont, 71 IBLA 112 (Feb. 28, 1983)

Although boundaries of wilderness inventory units are ordinarily located along roads or other substantially noticeable imprints of man, configuration of the unit may justify adjustment of the unit boundary on the basis of the outstanding opportunity criteria in certain circumstances. A decision subdividing a unit into three subunits on this basis will be set aside and the case remanded for further consideration where the record fails to reflect analysis of the basis for subdivision.

Evaluations made by BLM personnel in the wilderness inventory process are necessarily subjective and judgmental. The conclusions reached must be accorded considerable deference notwithstanding that the result might be one over which reasonable men could differ. An appellant seeking reversal must ordinarily show either a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

Timothy O. Kessinger, 72 IBLA 100 (Apr. 14, 1983)

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments of the unit's naturalness qualities and whether an inventory unit possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation are entitled to considerable deference.

In assessing the presence or absence of wilderness characteristics in an inventory unit, the Bureau of Land Management necessarily makes subjective judgments which are entitled to considerable deference when challenged on appeal and such judgments may not be overcome by expressions of simple disagreement.

A BLM decision to eliminate an inventory unit from further consideration as a wilderness study area, pursuant to sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), will be set aside and the case remanded to BLM where, on appeal, the appellant raises substantial questions concerning the adequacy of BLM's consideration of whether the unit has the requisite naturalness or outstanding opportunity for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation, and the record does not adequately support BLM's conclusions on those criteria.

Utah Wilderness Ass'n et al., 72 IBLA 125 (Apr. 18, 1983)

The provision of the Wilderness Act of 1964, 16 U.S.C. § 1133(d)(3) (1976), which allows mining claims to be located in "wilderness areas" until Dec. 31, 1983, applies only to mining activities within national forest lands designated as wilderness. It is not applicable to lands such as the Buffalo National River which are part of the national park system, not national forest lands.

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. Red Rock 4-Wheelers, 75 IBLA 140 (Aug. 17, 1983)

Wilford Cothern, 76 IBLA 23 (Sept. 8, 1983)

The lack of an outstanding opportunity for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation will not disqualify part of an inventory unit from designation as a wilderness study area and from consideration during the study phase where other parts of the unit have been identified during the inventory phase as meeting the outstanding opportunity criterion.

Davis Oil Co., 75 IBLA 163 (Aug. 18, 1983)

BLM may properly eliminate areas of the public lands of less than 5,000 acres from further consideration as wilderness study areas under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), because that section only mandates review of roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands.

In deciding whether to designate an inventory unit as a wilderness study area under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), BLM may not compare a unit with other units but may compare it with other areas in a particular region, on the basis of topographic, vegetative, and other features.

In deciding whether to designate an inventory unit as a wilderness study area under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), BLM may properly consider the configuration of the unit in assessing opportunities for solitude or primitive, unconfined recreation.

Sierra Club - Rocky Mountain Chapter et al., 75 IBLA 220 (Aug. 23, 1983)

The mere assertion that an area is subject to outside sights and sounds, without evidence that they are both adjacent and so extremely imposing that they cannot be ignored, will not preclude a finding by BLM that the area is natural and offers outstanding opportunities for solitude.

The desirability of managing an area for competing multiple uses, including off-road vehicle use, is properly considered during the study phase of the wilderness review process.

Idaho Trail Machine Ass'n et al., 75 IBLA 256 (Aug. 26, 1983)

Instruction Memorandum (IM) 83-237 (Jan. 7, 1983) provides that BLM's policy is to issue no leases in BLM administered Wilderness Study Areas (WSAs). A subsequent clarification to this policy provides that BLM may continue to lease portions of WSAs that are immediately adjacent to producing oil and gas fields or areas that are prospectively valuable. IM 83-237, Change 2 (Mar. 7, 1983).

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision to include or exclude land from a wilderness study area must show that the decision appealed was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact.

Edward H. Howe, Fred Huff, Gerald A. Strauss, 76 IBLA 27 (Sept. 8, 1983)

BLM does not violate the terms of sec. 603(a), Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782 (1976), directing the Secretary to review those roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more of the public lands, identified during the inventory required by sec. 201(a) as having wilderness characteristics, where BLM undertakes a review of the public lands for wilderness characteristics prior to a multiresource inventory of the public lands.

BLM's practice of designating lands occupied by roads or other intrusions as nonwilderness corridors (cherrystems), thereby excluding such lands from wilderness review and permitting adjacent lands, otherwise possessing wilderness characteristics, to be studied for their uses, values, and resources, is not an unlawful practice or contrary to any established Department policy.

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments of the area's naturalness qualities are entitled to considerable deference.

Phelps Dodge Corp., 76 IBLA 31 (Sept. 8, 1983)

While the Bureau of Land Management may inventory and identify areas of the public lands of less than 5,000 acres as having wilderness characteristics, it may not properly designate such areas as wilderness study areas under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976), because that section only mandates review of roadless areas of 5,000 acres or more and roadless islands of the public lands.

In determining whether an inventory unit possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or a primitive and unconfined type of recreation, it is not improper for BLM to compare the opportunities of the unit under consideration with those of other units for the purpose of determining whether the opportunities are "outstanding"; the term "outstanding" is necessarily comparative in concept.

Where the record evidences BLM's firsthand knowledge of the lands within an inventory unit and contains comments from the public as to the area's fitness for wilderness preservation, BLM's subjective judgments as to whether an inventory unit possesses outstanding opportunities for solitude or primitive and unconfined type of recreation are entitled to considerable deference.

Michael Huddleston et al., 76 IBLA 116 (Sept. 21, 1983)

The Secretary on Dec. 30, 1982, directed that no mineral leasing or permitting take place on BLM wilderness study areas. Instruction Memorandum 83-237, Change 3 (June 24, 1983), provides, however, that BLM may continue to lease portions of wilderness study areas that are "immediately adjacent to producing oil and gas fields or areas that are prospectively valuable."

Lia Lee Anderson, 76 IBLA 395 (Oct. 27, 1983)

Where there is no evidence that a route has been improved by mechanical means, it will not be considered a road even where it is subject to relatively regular and continuous use and maintenance is unnecessary.

BLM may not properly eliminate an inventory unit from further consideration as a WSA because of the adverse impact on naturalness due to unauthorized construction of post-FLPMA roads, even where BLM concludes that the roads cannot be rehabilitated to a substantially unnoticeable condition.

BLM may properly eliminate an area of less than 5,000 acres from further consideration as a WSA under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976).

A BLM decision to eliminate an area from further consideration as a WSA will be set aside and the case remanded to BLM where, on appeal, the appellant raises substantial questions concerning the adequacy of BLM's consideration of whether the area has the requisite naturalness and the record does not adequately support BLM's conclusion on that criterion.

Philip Allen, Desert Wilderness Coalition, 77 IBLA 330 (Dec. 5, 1983)

BLM may properly eliminate an area of less than 5,000 acres from further consideration as a WSA under sec. 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1782(a) (1976).

Nothing in Change 3 of the WIH prohibits consideration of the effect of scenic vistas on enhancing opportunities for solitude within an inventory unit, and where such vistas are "so extremely imposing" they cannot be ignored, a decision of BLM declining to designate the unit as a WSA arrived solely on the basis of ignoring these scenic vistas will be reversed.

New Mexico Natural History Institute, 78 IBLA 133 (Dec. 29, 1983)

An appellant seeking reversal of a decision denying a protest against issuance of a right-of-way across land in a wilderness study area to state-owned land must show that the decision was premised either on a clear error of law or a demonstrable error of fact. Where state land is encircled by Federal land within a wilderness study area, the state's lessee has a right of access across Federal land pursuant to 16 U.S.C. § 3210(b) (Supp. V 1981) adequate to secure the reasonable use and enjoyment of the leasehold. Because the BLM may not deny such access by requiring the lessee to use helicopters, BLM need not examine the feasibility of helicopter access in its consideration of a right-of-way application.

Utah Wilderness Ass'n, 80 IBLA 64 (Mar. 30, 1984)

Where application is made for suspension of unitized oil and gas leases in order to preserve them from expiration pending approval of an application for permission to drill, and where the suspension is granted at the discretion of the authorized officer on condition that permission to drill may be denied upon a finding that drilling operations would result in unacceptable impacts on the wilderness characteristics of the area, an environmental impact statement on the effects of such drilling which fails to consider the alternative of refusing permission to drill is an inadequate basis for a decision to permit drilling.

Sierra Club et al. (On Judicial Remand), 80 IBLA 251 (May 2, 1984)

Organic Act Directive 78-61, Change 3, at page 3, provides that BLM may in certain instances properly adjust the boundary of an inventory unit based on the outstanding opportunity criterion.

In evaluating a unit's opportunity for solitude, BLM is directed by the Wilderness Inventory Handbook to consider factors which influence solitude only as they affect a person's opportunity to avoid the sights, sounds, and evidence of other people in the inventory unit. Factors or elements influencing solitude may include size, natural screening, and the ability of the user to find a secluded spot.

In assessing the presence or absence of wilderness characteristics in an inventory unit, the Bureau of Land Management necessarily makes subjective judgments which are entitled to considerable deference when challenged on appeal, and such judgments may not be overcome by expressions of simple disagreement.

The Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, reject any offer to lease Federal lands for oil and gas, upon a determination supported by facts of record that the leasing would not be in the public interest because it is incompatible with uses of the lands which are worthy of preservation. Where the land has been designated a critical habitat pursuant to sec. 7 of the Endangered Species Act of 1973, as amended, 16 U.S.C.A. § 1536 (West Supp. 1980), and where BLM determines that oil and gas development would result in an unavoidable adverse impact, rejection of a lease offer will be affirmed in the absence of countervailing compelling reasons.

Inasmuch as coordination lands are properly deemed to be units of the National Wildlife Refuge System, oil and gas lease offers for such lands may not be granted, unless drainage is occurring, until such time as the Secretary of the Interior promulgates new regulations in conformity with sec. 137 of the 1984 Continuing Resolution, 97 Stat. 981.

D. R. Yates, 82 IBLA 389 (Sept. 13, 1984)

The Board will set aside a BLM decision rejecting a noncompetitive oil and gas lease offer pursuant to 43 CFR 3101.3-3(a)(1) (1982) to the extent it includes land in a national wildlife refuge, not subject to drainage, where there is nothing in the record to indicate that the refuge was for the protection of all species of wildlife. However, the Board will instruct BLM to withhold action on the offer where Congress has suspended all action on oil and gas lease offers for lands within wildlife refuges filed prior to Nov. 14, 1983, until the completion of certain necessary steps by the Department.

WITHDRAWALS AND RESERVATIONS

GENERALLY

An oil and gas lease offer for minerals reserved to the United States is properly rejected where the Secretary of the Interior in a notice published in the Federal Register has declared that such minerals will not be subject to leasing.

Oil and gas lease offers embracing lands withdrawn specifically from oil and gas leasing and by Public Land Order No. 674, of Oct. 7, 1950, reserved for an agency of the Department of Defense, are properly rejected. Lands declared surplus are not subject to leasing by this Department.

Edward C. Shepardson, 47 IBLA 223 (May 13, 1980)

Applications filed for temporary withdrawals of land for proposed development under the Carey Act, 43 U.S.C. § 641 (1976), must be rejected where the lands have previously been withdrawn or classified for other Federal purposes.

Idaho Department of Water Resources, 48 IBLA 250 (June 26, 1980)

Where an application for withdrawal, published in the Federal Register and noted on the State Office records, sets aside certain lands for geothermal resources leasing, and specifically precludes the operation of the remainder of the mineral leasing laws, it is proper to suspend an oil and gas lease offer for such segregated lands, pending action on the withdrawal application. After the withdrawal application has been cancelled without favorable action on the withdrawal request, the oil and gas offer may be considered on its merits.

Trent J. Parker, 49 IBLA 209 (Aug. 11, 1980)

The Carey Act does not give a state an absolute entitlement to select and reserve desert land acreage regardless of whether or not it has been withdrawn for other purposes. Rather, the Act does not prevent the Secretary from committing such land for any authorized use, including use as a stock driveway. Moreover, the Department has broad discretionary authority to reject Carey Act applications for lands not withdrawn from selection, subject to normal judicial restraints against arbitrary and capricious administrative actions.

Applications filed for segregation of land for proposed development under the Carey Act must be rejected where the lands have previously been withdrawn or classified for other Federal purposes.

Idaho Department of Water Resources (On Reconsideration), 49 IBLA 221 (Aug. 12, 1980)

Where an application for withdrawal, published in the Federal Register and noted on the State Office records, sets aside certain lands for airport purposes and specifically precludes the operation of the remainder of the mineral leasing laws, it is proper under the regulations to suspend an oil and gas lease offer for such segregated lands, pending action on the withdrawal application. After the withdrawal application has been cancelled without favorable action on the withdrawal request, the oil and gas offer may be considered on its merits.

Donald Epperson, 50 IBLA 267 (Sept. 30, 1980)

James R. Leonard et al., 50 IBLA 416 (Oct. 24, 1980)

Where an application for withdrawal proposes to withdraw certain lands from the operation of the mineral leasing and mining laws to prevent interference with the use of the land for airport purposes, the Bureau of Land Management should suspend action on oil and gas lease offers filed subsequent to the withdrawal application pending final action on the proposed withdrawal.

Trent J. Parker, 51 IBLA 178 (Dec. 2, 1980)

Lands withdrawn for reclamation purposes are not available for disposition under the public land laws, including the Indian Allotment Act, as amended, 25 U.S.C. §§ 334, 336 (1976), and an application thereunder for land so withdrawn is properly rejected.

James A. Pell, 51 IBLA 285 (Dec. 15, 1980)

"Notation rule." Under the "notation rule" when the official records of the Bureau of Land Management have been noted to reflect the devotion of land to a particular use which is exclusive of other conflicting uses, no incompatible rights in that land can attach by reason of any subsequent application or entry until the record has been changed to reflect that the land is no longer so segregated. The rule applies even where the notation was posted to the records in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

Stanley Kuniyo et al., 51 IBLA 368 (Dec. 30, 1980)

Mining claims located on lands which are withdrawn for reclamation purposes under the first form are null and void ab initio. A first-form reclamation withdrawal completed prior to Oct. 21, 1976, remains in effect, subject to review by the Secretary, notwithstanding the repeal of the statute authorizing the initiation of such withdrawals.

Sam McCormack, 52 IBLA 56 (Jan. 6, 1981)

Where BLM filed an application for a protective withdrawal pursuant to Exec. Order No. 10355 which would reserve the subject land from all forms of appropriation including location and entry under the mining laws and the application was duly noted on the official status plats, the lands were segregated from the date of notation to the extent that the withdrawal, if effected, would prevent such forms of appropriation. A protective withdrawal is not a temporary withdrawal under the Pickett Act, 43 U.S.C. § 141 (1970), and is not limited by the terms of 43 U.S.C. § 142 (1970) which provides that temporarily withdrawn lands shall remain open to location for metalliferous minerals.

A mining claim located on land at a time when the land is segregated from mining location by a proposed withdrawal confers no rights on the locator and is properly declared null and void ab initio.

Allen L. Brannon, Sr., 53 IBLA 251 (Mar. 19, 1981)

Where the land on which the mining claim is located is subsequently withdrawn, the validity of the claim must be determined both as of the date of the withdrawal and the date of the hearing. If there was no discovery as of the date of the withdrawal, the land would not be excepted from the effect of the withdrawal and the claim could not thereafter become valid even though the requirement of discovery was satisfied at a later date.

United States v. Leo E. Jackson et al., 53 IBLA 289 (Mar. 24, 1981)

A mining claim located on lands which are withdrawn for reclamation purposes under the first form is null and void ab initio. A first form reclamation withdrawal completed prior to Oct. 21, 1976, remains in effect, subject to review by the Secretary, not withstanding the repeal of the statute authorizing the initiation of such withdrawals.

William C. Feiman, Richard H. Edmondson, 54 IBLA 103 (Apr. 15, 1981)

A claimant's occupancy of a trade and manufacturing site prior to a withdrawal does not establish a "valid existing right" excepted by the withdrawal where credit for his occupancy prior to the withdrawal cannot be given under the Act of Apr. 29, 1950, because the claimant initiated his occupancy more than 90 days prior to the filing of his notice and did not file a notice of location or purchase application prior to the withdrawal.

Stuart Grant Ramsted, 55 IBLA 223 (June 18, 1981)

It is proper to reject an application for conveyance of Government-owned lands for airport development under 49 U.S.C. § 1723 (1976), where the land has been withdrawn for military purposes, is currently used as an Army air field, and where Army officials object to the conveyance.

Land withdrawn for an air navigation site is public land within the context of 43 U.S.C. § 1613 (1976 and Supp. IV 1980), and is proper for selection by a Native village.

Land withdrawn by Executive Order for use as an air navigation site by the Alaska Road Commission was not thereby severed from the public domain and under the terms of the order remained under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior. No interest, legal or equitable, could be conveyed to the Territory of Alaska by a withdrawal for an air navigation site. Interests in the public lands of the United States can be conveyed only pursuant to an Act of Congress.

Land used for an airport site which is conveyed to a Native village must be subsequently conveyed to the State of Alaska pursuant to 43 U.S.C. § 1613(c)(4) (Supp. IV 1980).

State of Alaska, Dept. of Transportation and Public Facilities, 67 IBLA 380 (Oct. 8, 1982)

Publication of a notice of hearing for such an application as provided by sec. 204(h), 43 U.S.C. § 1714(h) (1976), does not alter this time period.

Where an Act of Congress authorizes the setting aside of lands for particular public purposes, and does not either expressly continue or prohibit the operation of the general mining laws, the intent of Congress in that respect must be gathered from the Act itself, or by historical interpretation of this Department of that Act and similar Acts relating to lands of the same status.

Land within the Grand Canyon Game Preserve is not open to the location of mining claims, and mining claims located on land after it was included in the preserve are properly declared null and void ab initio.

If land has been withdrawn from mining, an erroneous public land record does not open the land to entry. A mining claim located on withdrawn land is null and void even if the land records erroneously indicate that the land is open.

AUTHORITY TO MAKE

A mining claim for metalliferous minerals located on land withdrawn from appropriation under the mining laws pursuant to the Pickett Act of June 25, 1910, as amended, 43 U.S.C. §§ 141, 142 (1976), which provides that as to metalliferous minerals the withdrawn land shall remain open to the operation of the mining laws, is nevertheless null and void from its inception where the land is also withdrawn pursuant to the President's nonstatutory authority to make withdrawals.

Glen H. Brooks, E. Allen Brooks, H. Cope, 45 IBLA 51 (Jan. 14, 1980)

The President had nonstatutory authority to withdraw public land in addition to authority conferred upon him by the Pickett Act, 43 U.S.C. §§ 141, 142 (1970). Such nonstatutory authority was not limited by the terms of 43 U.S.C. § 142 (1970) which provided that withdrawn lands shall remain open to location for metalliferous minerals.

Where land is withdrawn from the operation of the mining laws subsequent to the location of a mining claim, the validity of the claim cannot be recognized unless the claim was supported by a valid discovery at the time of the withdrawal. In addition, even though there may have been a proper discovery at the time of a withdrawal or at some other time in the past, a mining claim cannot be considered valid unless the claim is at present supported by a sufficient discovery. The loss of the discovery, either through exhaustion of the minerals, changes in economic conditions, or other circumstances, results in the loss of the location.

Kenneth F. Cummings, 62 IBLA 206 (Mar. 10, 1982)

The Bureau of Land Management has no authority to allow an application for desert land entry on land which has been conveyed from Federal ownership by quitclaim deed or which has been withdrawn from disposition under the public land laws. Even if the applicant had received erroneous advice concerning the status of the land, this does not entitle him to have his application allowed.

Howard E. Tingley, 62 IBLA 315 (Mar. 19, 1982)

A mining claim which is located after the land has been withdrawn from mineral entry is properly declared null and void.

J & B Mining Co., Inc., 69 IBLA 73 (Nov. 30, 1982)

BLM may properly reject a noncompetitive over-the-counter oil and gas lease offer filed pursuant to sec. 17 of the Mineral Leasing Act, 30 U.S.C. § 226 (1976), where the land sought is either patented with no reservation of oil and gas to the United States, acquired or withdrawn from mineral leasing.

Golden Eagle Petroleum, 67 IBLA 112 (Sept. 15, 1982)

The segregative effect of an application to withdraw land filed prior to Oct. 21, 1976, continues, under sec. 204(j) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 43 U.S.C. § 1714(j) (1976), until Oct. 21, 1991, unless the application is either approved or rejected in the interim. Publication of a notice of hearing for such an application as provided by sec. 204(h), 43 U.S.C. § 1714(h) (1976), does not alter this time period.

James C. Robinson et al., 68 IBLA 84 (Oct. 21, 1982)

A mining claim located on land after the land was segregated and closed to mineral entry, by notation of receipt of an application for withdrawal, is properly declared null and void ab initio.

Lester E. Holt, 69 IBLA 180 (Dec. 15, 1982)

Philip A. Cramer, 74 IBLA 1 (June 21, 1983)

In general, unless the Mineral Leasing Act or a withdrawal or reservation specifically provides otherwise, lands withdrawn or reserved for a specific purpose are available for leasing under the Mineral Leasing Act, if the issuance of a lease will not be inconsistent with or materially interfere with the purposes for which the land is withdrawn or reserved. Where oil and gas lease offers embrace lands withdrawn or reserved for an agency of the Department of Defense, the lands may only be leased after consultation with the Department of Defense.

Douglas E. Smith, 69 IBLA 343 (Dec. 28, 1982)

A mining claim located on land previously withdrawn from appropriation under the mining laws is null and void ab initio.

A mining claim located on land segregated and closed to mineral entry by notation of an application for withdrawal in the official BLM records is null and void ab initio.

Where lands which have been withdrawn from entry and location under the general mining laws by a public land order, in determining the rights of a mining claimant who located claims subsequent to that withdrawal, it is immaterial that the land in question is covered by a prior withdrawal for a different purpose.

Joseph E. Vogler, Doris L. Vogler, Dwerl Vogler, 72 IBLA 48 (Apr. 12, 1983)

Where land is withdrawn from the operation of the mining laws subsequent to the location of a mining claim, the validity of the claim cannot be recognized unless the claim was supported by a valid discovery at the time of the withdrawal. In addition, even though there may have been a proper discovery at the time of the withdrawal or at some other time in the past, a mining claim cannot be considered valid unless the claim is at present supported by a sufficient discovery.

United States v. William Lavon Chappell et al., 72 IBLA 88 (Apr. 13, 1983)

Allan Keiser, 72 IBLA 387 (May 5, 1983)

Where an act of Congress directs segregation of certain lands from "all forms of entry under the public land laws," the question of whether such a segregation prohibits mineral entry under the general mining laws is answered by determining congressional intent from the act itself, the legislative history of the act and, in addition, from historical interpretations of the Department concerning the act or other similar acts.

BLM may properly reject an oil and gas lease offer filed pursuant to sec. 17 of the Mineral Leasing Act, 30 U.S.C. § 226 (1976), where the minerals reserved in the patent of the land have been withdrawn from disposition under the mineral leasing laws.

Tom Hotestine, 73 IBLA 268 (June 7, 1983)

Under sec. 8 of the Organic Act of May 17, 1884, 23 Stat. 24, settlement on the public lands of Alaska vested in the settler possessory rights in that land that could be asserted against every one except the Government. Such occupancy was inoperative to prevent the United States from reserving the land for its own uses. However, where it is established that the Government intended to except those in possession from the scope of a reservation, the reservation shall not be construed as cutting off those possessory rights.

Pan Alaska Fisheries, Inc., 74 IBLA 295 (July 27, 1983)

Withdrawals remain in force until specifically revoked or modified by competent authority. The Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act, P.L. 96-478 (94 Stat. 2371), does not affect the existence or validity of Public Land Order No. 5250.

Mining claims are properly declared to be void ab initio when it is shown that the master plat in the local Bureau of Land Management office shows that the lands located are within an area withdrawn from mineral entry.

Larry McMaster et al., 76 IBLA 370 (Oct. 25, 1983)

Where oil and gas leasing in Alaska was suspended by Secretarial policy at the time noncompetitive lease offers were pending and the land identified in those offers was thereafter formally withdrawn from mineral leasing for the protection of Alaskan Natives' selection rights, the Secretary of the Interior has not abused his discretion in delaying adjudication of the offers until after the status of the land is settled.

A mining claim located on land segregated and closed to mineral entry by notation of an application for withdrawal in the official BLM records is null and void ab initio.

Lands withdrawn for a powersite reservation, with certain exceptions, are open to entry for location and patent of mining claims with a reservation of power rights in the lands to the United States subject to the Mining Claims Rights Restoration Act. Where the BLM decision declaring mining claims null and void did not consider the effect of this Act on the withdrawal, the decision will be set aside and remanded for appropriate action.

Lapar & Christine Burnett, 78 IBLA 349 (Jan. 25, 1984)

The subsequent revocation of a withdrawal of onshore submerged lands by necessity returns withdrawn lands to status they enjoyed before withdrawal, i.e., "public lands."

State Selections of Onshore Lands Underlying Navigable Waters in the Geographic Area of Revoked Public Land Order 82, A-36949 (Aug. 22, 1983) 91 I.D. 67

Lands segregated on the public records by a Recreational and Public Purposes lease are not available for the location of mining claims, but a claimant may establish the exterior boundaries of a lode claim on land under a Recreation and Public Purposes lease, with the permission of the lessee, for the purpose of making end lines parallel so as to obtain extralateral rights to a vein or lode discovered on lands available for location.

Where a lode mining claim is located partially on patented or withdrawn land, such a claim is not null and void ab initio to the extent of its inclusion of such lands. While the claim may not afford the claimant any rights whatever in the lands into which the claim is partially projected, the configuration of such a claim might, in the proper circumstances, invest the claimant with extralateral rights in other land beyond or adjacent to that land which is closed to mineral entry.

Generally, unless the mineral leasing laws or a withdrawal or reservation order specifically provides otherwise, the lands withdrawn or reserved for a specific purpose are available for leasing under the mineral leasing laws, if issuance of a mineral lease would not be inconsistent with or interfere with the purpose for which the lands are withdrawn or reserved.

Notation of a withdrawal application filed before Oct. 21, 1976, temporarily segregates the land from mineral location to the extent that the withdrawal, if effected, would do so. Under current regulations, the lands described in the withdrawal application, filed before Oct. 21, 1976, and still outstanding, remain segregated from settlement, sale, location, or entry under the public land laws to the extent specified in the Federal Register notice until Oct. 20, 1991.

A mining claim whose discovery is located on land segregated and closed to mineral entry by notation of receipt of an application for withdrawal is properly declared null and void ab initio.

Comstock Tunnel & Drainage Co., Sutro Tunnel Co., 79 IBLA 237 (Mar. 1, 1984)

A locator may not locate a claim with a discovery on patented or withdrawn lands because such lands are not open to the operation of the mining laws. In such cases the claim is void ab initio.

A withdrawal from the operation of the general mining laws does not deprive a claimant of the right to exercise extralateral rights within the withdrawn lands if those extralateral rights are derived from ownership of valid lode mining claims located prior to the withdrawal. The ownership of ores and minerals by virtue of extralateral rights stemming from valid lode mining claims located prior to withdrawal is not divested by the withdrawal.

Anthony Juskiewicz, 79 IBLA 267 (Mar. 7, 1984)

The Act of May 23, 1908, 35 Stat. 267, as amended, 16 U.S.C. § 671 (1976), providing for the establishment of the National Bison Range, terminated the status of the land included therein as land reserved for Indian use.

Hingeline Overthrust Oil & Gas, Inc., 80 IBLA 4 (Mar. 27, 1984)

Publication of the notice of a withdrawal application in the Federal Register segregates the lands described in the application from settlement, sale, location, or entry under the general land laws, including the mining laws, to the extent specified in the notice.

A placer claim located on land segregated and closed to mineral entry by publication of notice of an application for withdrawal of the land in the Federal Register is properly declared null and void ab initio.

It cannot be suspended pending the lifting of the withdrawal. Even where the purpose of the withdrawal cannot be met, the withdrawal is nevertheless effective to bar the disposal of the land.

Robert A. Adams, 57 IBLA 370 (Sept. 8, 1981)

Where a homestead entry is on land within a second-form reclamation withdrawal, and compliance with the provisions of the reclamation laws is still required, the mere filing of ordinary homestead final proof is not sufficient to vest the entryman with equitable title.

The revocation of a second-form reclamation withdrawal is effective upon the date specified in the order of revocation, regardless of whether the land had ever been suitable for the purpose for which it was withdrawn. Where an entryman has complied with all the requirements of the ordinary homestead law, but not with the requirements of the reclamation law, the revocation of the reclamation withdrawal does not operate retroactively to vest equitable title in the entryman as of the time final proof under the ordinary homestead law was submitted. Such equitable title cannot be deemed to have vested prior to the effective date of the revocation of the withdrawal.

REVOCATION AND RESTORATION

A Presidential proclamation, which extended the boundaries of a forest reserve and which specifically stated that prior proclamations respecting the reserve were "superseded," had the effect of and was construed as restoring to entry lands earlier withdrawn by a Secretarial order which reserved from public entry, for protection of giant sequoia trees, a township situated within the boundaries of the forest reserve. This conclusion is particularly compelling in view of the long continued course of administrative action treating the subject township as having been restored to entry for purposes of prospecting, locating and developing mineral resources, subject to compliance with the rules and regulations pertaining to forest reserves.

Dolores Olsen and Wesley E. Nace, et al., 45 IBLA 232 (Feb. 4, 1980)

In determining whether a national defense withdrawal, within the meaning of § 11(a)(1) of ANCSA, existed on Dec. 18, 1971, only the formal legal status of the withdrawal may be considered, and it is immaterial whether the purpose of the withdrawal has been fulfilled or whether the actual use to which the land is put has changed.

The Army's filing of a notice of intent to relinquish certain property cannot revoke a national defense withdrawal because the Army lacks the authority to revoke such withdrawals.

A notice of intent to relinquish property is not a relinquishment but a method by which an agency of the Federal Government expresses the intention to relinquish the property at a future time, upon completion of required statutory and regulatory procedures.

The issue of whether ANCSA supersedes certain provisions of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act, as regards administrative actions taken concerning a specific withdrawal, is rendered moot by a finding that the withdrawn lands were never available for selection under ANCSA. When a notice of intention to relinquish affects lands not withdrawn pursuant to ANCSA, BLM is required to follow the provisions of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act, and the regulations promulgated under that Act.

Appeal of Northway Natives, Inc., 4 ANCAB 207 (Apr. 21, 1980)

An application under the Act of Apr. 23, 1932, 43 U.S.C. § 154 (1976), for restoration to mineral entry and location of lands within a reclamation withdrawal will ordinarily be rejected when the Water and Power Resources Service has recommended against it, the recommendation is premised upon the requirements of the public interest, and the reasons offered in support of the recommendation are cojent.

Florence Adkisson, 47 IBLA 121 (Apr. 28, 1980)

An oil and gas lease offer filed for land which has been previously withdrawn from mineral leasing may be properly rejected since it will not be validated by any future modification or revocation of the order of withdrawal. It is immaterial whether the lands are presently being, or have ever been, used for the purpose for which they were withdrawn.

Edward C. Shepardson, 47 IBLA 223 (May 13, 1980)

It is proper to declare mining locations null and void ab initio where the locations were not perfected by performance of the condition precedent set forth in the order opening lands in a reclamation withdrawal to mineral location and entry pursuant to the Act of Apr. 23, 1932, 43 U.S.C. § 154 (1976).

Wayne M. Mann, 54 IBLA 8 (Apr. 6, 1981)

A mining claim located on lands previously withdrawn from appropriation under the mining laws is null and void ab initio. Lands included in a withdrawal remain withdrawn until there is a formal revocation or modification of the order of withdrawal. It is immaterial whether the lands are presently being used for the purpose for which they were withdrawn and whether a future revocation of the withdrawal is being considered.

William C. Reiman, Richard H. Edmondson, 54 IBLA 103 (Apr. 15, 1981)

Ronald W. Rapp, 67 IBLA 32 (Sept. 7, 1982)

An application for land withdrawn from appropriation under the public land laws is properly rejected and not held pending possible future availability of the land.

An application for land filed but not adjudicated prior to restoration of the land to appropriation under the public land laws under a public land order which expressly provides that all applications filed prior to restoration shall be considered as simultaneously filed as of the date of restoration may be considered as filed as of the date of restoration.

Vaughn K. Leavitt et al., 55 IBLA 59 (May 29, 1981)

The revocation of a second-form reclamation withdrawal is effective upon the date specified in the order of revocation, regardless of whether the land had ever been suitable for the purpose for which it was withdrawn. Where an entryman has complied with all the requirements of the ordinary homestead law, but not with the requirements of the reclamation law, the revocation of the reclamation withdrawal does not operate retroactively to vest equitable title in the entryman as of the time final proof under the ordinary homestead law was submitted. Such equitable title cannot be deemed to have vested prior to the effective date of the revocation of the withdrawal.

Where the Secretary has not expressly made revocation of a withdrawal retroactive, the Board of Land Appeals lacks authority to give the revocation retroactive effect.

Vincent Forward, 66 IBLA 100 (Aug. 4, 1982)

A decision rejecting an application under the Act of Apr. 23, 1932, 43 U.S.C. § 154 (1976), for restoration of lands within a reclamation withdrawal to mineral entry and location will be reversed on appeal where the record fails to disclose any objection to granting the application or any way in which it is contrary to the public interest.

Joe Ashbrook, 66 IBLA 328 (Aug. 25, 1982)

A mining claim located at a time the land is withdrawn from appropriation by the Act of May 29, 1928, is null and void ab initio. It is immaterial whether future revocation of the withdrawal is being considered.

Samuel P. Sprowsirs, 78 IBLA 343 (Jan. 24, 1984)

SPRINGS AND WATERHOLES

The repeal of sec. 704(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, 90 Stat. 2792, of certain statutory authority to reserve land as a waterhole only prohibits future withdrawals or reservations of land under the repealed statutes and does not affect known waterholes withdrawn prior to the repeal. It was proper for the Bureau of Land Management to reject a water pipeline right-of-way application for land containing a waterhole which was withdrawn prior to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, and where the water is needed for a public use.

Grant L. Hacking, 50 IBLA 154 (Sept. 30, 1980)

The purpose of reserving land surrounding important springs and waterholes was to prevent monopolization of the surrounding public lands.

Purposes of Executive Order of April 17, 1926, Establishing Public Water Reserve No. 107, M-36914 (Supp. II), (Feb. 16, 1983) 90 I.D. 81

STATE SELECTIONS

An application to make homestead entry on land previously classified for selection by the State of Alaska is properly rejected.

Deborah Lowmaster, 52 IBLA 198 (Jan. 26, 1981)

Under 43 CFR 2091.6-4 and 2627.4(b), the filing of an application by the State of Alaska to select lands segregates those lands from all subsequent appropriations, including locations under the mining law. A mining claim located on land which has been segregated and closed to mineral entry is properly declared null and void ab initio.

Fred Thompson, 74 IBLA 231 (July 19, 1983)

TEMPORARY WITHDRAWALS

Applications filed for temporary withdrawals of land for proposed development under the Carey Act, 43 U.S.C. § 641 (1976), must be rejected where the lands have previously been withdrawn or classified for other Federal purposes.

TEMPORARY WITHDRAWALS--Continued

Applications filed for segregation of land for proposed development under the Carey Act must be rejected where the lands have previously been withdrawn or classified for other Federal purposes.

Idaho Department of Water Resources (On Reconsideration), 49 IBLA 221 (Aug. 12, 1980)

Where BLM filed an application for a protective withdrawal pursuant to Exec. Order No. 10355 which would reserve the subject land from all forms of appropriation including location and entry under the mining laws and the application was duly noted on the official status plats, the lands were segregated from the date of notation to the extent that the withdrawal, if effected, would prevent such forms of appropriation. A protective withdrawal is not a temporary withdrawal under the Pickett Act, 43 U.S.C. § 141 (1970), and is not limited by the terms of 43 U.S.C. § 142 (1970) which provides that temporarily withdrawn lands shall remain open to location for metalliferous minerals.

WORDS AND PHRASES

"Bona fide purchaser." A bona fide purchaser of an interest in a Federal oil and gas lease must have acquired his interest in good faith, for valuable consideration, and without notice of violation of Departmental regulations. Assignees are deemed to have constructive knowledge of all BLM records pertaining to the lease at the time of assignment.

"Copy of the official record of the notice or certificate of location." Under the revised definition of the term at 43 CFR 3833.0-5(i) (1979), a duplicate of a notice of location which has been filed with the local recorder is a "copy of the official record of the notice or certificate of location," even though it is not stamped by the local recorder and does not include a reference to the local record, and is therefore acceptable under 43 CFR 3833.1-2(b) if tendered within 90 days of the date of location.

James E. Strong, 45 IBLA 386 (Feb. 13, 1980)

"Copy of the official record of the notice or certificate of location" means a legible reproduction or duplicate, except microfilm, of the original instrument of recordation of an unpatented mining claim which was or will be filed in the local jurisdiction where the claim is located or other evidence, acceptable to the proper BLM office, of such instrument of recordation. Under 43 CFR 3833.1-2 there is no express requirement that a machine reproduction be provided. Accordingly, a handwritten duplicate of a notice of location is acceptable under the regulations.

W. C. Miles, 48 IBLA 214 (June 16, 1980)

"Copy of the official record of the notice or certificate of location" means a legible reproduction or duplicate, except microfilm, of the original instrument of recordation of an unpatented mining claim which was or will be filed in the local jurisdiction where the claim is located or other evidence, acceptable to the proper BLM office, of such instrument of recordation. It also includes an exact reproduction, duplicate, or other acceptable evidence, except microfilm, of an amended instrument which may change or alter the description of the claim.

William E. Talbott et al., 52 IBLA 12 (Jan. 5, 1981)

"Copy of the official record of the notice or certificate of location" means a legible reproduction or duplicate, except microfilm, of the original instrument or recordation of an unpatented mining claim which was or will be filed in the local jurisdiction where the claim is located or other evidence, acceptable to the proper Bureau of Land Management office, of such instrument or recordation. It also includes an exact reproduction, duplicate, or other acceptable evidence except microfilm, of an amended instrument which may change or alter the description of the claim. A quitclaim deed is not an acceptable substitute in the absence of a showing that the certificates of location were unavailable.

John J. Vikarcik, George M. Vrable, 58 IBLA 377 (Oct. 21, 1981)

"Date of location." The date of location of a mining claim is determined in accordance with the law of the State where the claim is situated. Under Washington law, it is the date specified on the notice of location filed with the local recorder's office.

"Date of location." The date of location of mining claims is determined in accordance with the law of the State where the claims are situated. Under California law, the time for recordation in the county is measured from the date of the posting of the location notice on the claims.

"Date of location." The date of location of a mining claim is determined in accordance with the law of the state where the claim is situated. Under Arizona law, it is the date specified on the notice of location filed with the local recorder's office.

"Date of location." Although 43 CFR 3833.0-5(h) provides that the date of location of a mining claim shall be determined by state law in the jurisdiction where the claim is located, where the location certificate, as recorded with the county recorder's office as required by state law, recites a specific date of location of the claim, that date will be used as the inception of the 90-day period allowed for recordation by 43 U.S.C. § 1744 (1976), as that is the date upon which the claimant asserts he located the claim and entered upon the public land.

Mrs. George G. Wagner et al., 63 IBLA 146 (Apr. 6, 1982)

"Date of location." Under Colorado State law, as applied by 43 CFR 3833.0-5(h), the date of location of an unpatented mining claim in Colorado is the date specified in the location certificate. Where the claimant fails to file a copy of the official record of the notice of location of this claim with BLM within 90 days of this date, BLM properly rejects the filing, notwithstanding allegations that the actual date of location was different than the date specified in the location certificate.

Asarco, Inc., 70 IBLA 91 (Jan. 11, 1983)

"Fair market value." Under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 and existing Departmental regulations to the extent practicable, a grantee must pay fair market value for a right-of-way on public land. "Fair market value" is the amount in cash, or in terms reasonably equivalent to cash, for which in all probability the right to use the site would be granted by a knowledgeable owner willing but not obligated to grant to a knowledgeable user who desired but is not obligated to so use.

B & B Service, Inc., 48 IBLA 233 (June 17, 1980)

Northwestern Colorado Broadcasting Co., 49 IBLA 23 (July 15, 1980)

"Good faith." As used in the Color of Title Act, 43 U.S.C. § 1068 (1976), and regulation 43 CFR 2540.0-5, a claim is held in good faith where the claimant lacks knowledge that the land is owned by the United States. In determining whether the claimant honestly believed that there was no defect in his title, the Department may consider whether such belief was unreasonable in light of the facts then actually known to him.

Lawrence E. Willworth, 64 IBLA 159 (May 25, 1982)

"Gross value at the point of shipment to market." The royalty rate for products mined and disposed under sodium leases must be imposed on the "gross value of the sodium compounds and other related products at the point of shipment to market," which means the gross value of a refined product for sale in an established market even when applied to an intermediate product and without deduction for the cost that would be incurred in producing a refined product.

"Headquarters." A headquarters site application is properly rejected when the applicant has failed to sustain his burden of showing that the site has been used as a headquarters, i.e., as the usual place of business, principal office, or administrative center of his snowmobile camp. The term "headquarters" will not be construed so broadly as to include within its meaning use of a site for recreational purposes with occasional payment of use of the facilities occurring via rendering of services and helping transport building materials to the cabin sites, or by meager and incidental payments of cash.

United States v. Floyd E. Edwards, 50 IBLA 69 (Sept. 17, 1980)

"Interest." Where an oil and gas leasing service selects lands, files offers, and advances funds on behalf of its clients for leases which the service is willing to sell on behalf of any successful client, strictly at the client's option, in return for a percentage commission on the sale, the service has no enforceable right to any portion of the lease, if issued. The option is no more than a mere hope or expectancy that a client will elect to employ the service as sales agent, so that there is no interest in the lease if issued, which must be disclosed.

Bryan J. Powers, 45 IBLA 188 (Jan. 30, 1980)

"Interest." Where there is an agreement giving an offeror the option of selling part of an oil and gas lease to his agent leasing service, exercisable solely at the offeror's discretion, the agent has a mere hope or expectancy and not an "interest" in the offer, as defined in 43 CFR 3100.0-5(b).

"Interest in an oil and gas lease or offer." Where a party to a pooling agreement is authorized to advance funds for filing of drawing entry cards in simultaneous oil and gas lease drawings, payment of rentals, and office expenses, and is entitled to be reimbursed therefor with interest and receive a consultation fee from the pooled proceeds of any leases issued, all parties to the agreement have an interest in each lease offer within the meaning of 43 CFR 3102.7, requiring the disclosure of interested parties.

"Interest in an oil and gas lease or offer." Where an oil and gas lease offeror in a written agreement gives another person a security interest in any lease issued pursuant to an offer filed under the agreement to secure only payment of lease rentals advanced by that person, that person does not have an interest in the lease offer within the meaning of 43 CFR 3102.7 (1979), requiring the disclosure of interested parties.

"Last address of record." Where 43 CFR 1810.2 requires the Bureau of Land Management to deliver communications by mail to the last address of record, such address is the most recent one provided for the case file by the lessee with the declared intent that all required communications be delivered there. Where a party has not so specified, the appearance of a different return address on an envelope or rental payment check received by the Bureau of Land Management does not constitute a change of the address of record.

Arthur M. Solender, Lynn Devereaux, 79 IBLA 70 (Feb. 13, 1984)

"Last address of record." For the purposes of 43 CFR 1810.2(b), in the context of BLM's processing of a lease application, the address stated on the application is to be used as the "last address of record" unless the applicant has filed written notice of a change of address with the BLM office where the application was filed.

"Leasing." The word "leasing" in the phrase "no leasing * * * leading to production of oil and gas" in sec. 1003 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act includes leasing for the purpose of exploratory activities.

"Notation Rule." Under the "notation rule" when the official records of the Bureau of Land Management have been noted to reflect the devotion of land to a particular use which is exclusive of other conflicting uses, no incompatible rights in that land can attach by reason of any subsequent application or entry until the record has been changed to reflect that the land is no longer so segregated. The rule applies even where the notation was posted to the records in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

"Notation rule." Under the notation rule a millsite claim, located at a time when the master title plat in the local Bureau of Land Management office shows that the lands embraced by the claim are included in a state selection application, is properly declared null and void ab initio because notation of the state selection application on the official records segregates the land from further appropriation. The rule applies even where the notation was posted in error, or where the segregative use so noted is void, voidable, or has terminated.

O. Glenn Oliver, 73 IBLA 56 (May 12, 1983)

"Oil shale." Rock containing less than 3 gallons per ton of kerogen is not distinguishable from average shale or limestone in the earth's crust and is therefore not "oil shale." Discovery of such shale on a mining claim, without more, does not provide any basis for inferring the presence of oil shale at depth.

United States v. Weber Oil Co. et al., 68 IBLA 37 (Oct. 21, 1982) 89 I.D. 538

"Paying quantities." For the purposes of the extension provision of 30 U.S.C. § 226(j) (1976) relating to leases committed to a unit plan of development, "paying quantities" requires production sufficient to recover the costs of operation and marketing but does not include recovery of drilling expenditures.

"Public land laws." Under 43 CFR 2091.2-3 (1979), a state exchange application segregated the selected public lands from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws. "Public lands." Lands ceded by the Chippewa Indians under the Act of Feb. 20, 1904, 33 Stat. 46, which were unappropriated under the terms of said Act, and which were restored to tribal ownership in 1945, were never "public lands" within the meaning of the Color of Title Act, 43 U.S.C. § 1068 (1976), and a color-of-title application for such land must be rejected.

Marvin Haugen et al., 63 IBLA 12 (Mar. 25, 1982)

"Public lands." Reclamation withdrawn lands on which there are no authorized or constructed reclamation projects are administered by the Bureau of Land Management under a memorandum of agreement between the Bureau of Reclamation and Bureau of Land Management (Mar. 1972). In the absence of contrary language in an order withdrawing lands for reclamation purposes, reclamation withdrawn lands which do not have authorized or constructed projects on them are "public lands" within the meaning of secs. 103(e) and 603(a) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976.

George Agar, 63 IBLA 172 (Apr. 8, 1982)

"Public lands." Lands within a powersite withdrawal do not cease being "public lands" by virtue of such withdrawal and continue to remain subject to BLM's wilderness inventory process under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976, secs. 103(e) and 603(a).

Sandy C. Baicy, 46 IBLA 140 (Mar. 19, 1980)

"Federal installation." The Beaver Falls Hydroelectric Power Project, which is operated by Ketchikan Public Utilities, a nonprofit division of the municipality of Ketchikan, pursuant to a license issued by the Federal Power Commission, is not a "Federal installation" and, therefore, the land occupied by the project is not being used in connection with the administration of any "Federal installation" within the meaning of 43 U.S.C. § 1602(e) (1976).

Ketchikan Public Utilities, 79 IBLA 286 (Mar. 20, 1984)

"Resident citizen." As used in sec. 2 of the Act of Mar. 3, 1891, 26 Stat. 1096, 43 U.S.C. § 325 (1976), the term "resident citizen" refers to someone who is actually living in the state at the time of entry, and does not refer to individuals who have established tax or voting residency or own land within a state but who are not actually residing therein.

Benjamin D. Christensen, 74 IBLA 239 (July 19, 1983)

"Right-of-way grant" is defined in the regulations, 43 CFR 2800.0-5(h), as an instrument issued pursuant to Title V of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), 43 U.S.C. § 1761 (1976). By implementing regulation, 43 CFR 2803.4, the Secretary has limited the applicability of sec. 506 of FLPMA, 43 U.S.C. § 1766 (1976), to "right-of-way grants."

"Roadless." H.R. Rep. No. 94-1163, 94th Cong., 2d Sess. 17 (1976), provides a definition of "roadless" adopted by the Bureau of Land Management in its Wilderness Inventory Handbook. The word "roadless" refers to the absence of roads which have been improved and maintained by mechanical means to insure relatively regular and continuous use. A way maintained solely by the passage of vehicles does not constitute a road.

"Rule of approximation." The Department of the Interior will not reject an oil and gas lease offer for public domain lands solely for the reason of the offer being for less than 640 acres where the amount by which the offer is under 640 acres is less than the amount by which the offer would exceed 640 acres by including the smallest adjoining subdivision available for leasing, the offer thereby conforming to the rule of approximation.

"Service." Where BLM sends a copy of its decision to an adversely affected party at his address of record on Sept. 21; where additional information containing the party's more recent address is filed with BLM on Oct. 5; and where BLM receives the mailed copy back as undeliverable on Oct. 16 but does not mail another copy to the more recent address, BLM has not mailed a copy to the party's last address of record, and there is no "service" under 43 CFR 1810.2. Where BLM has never served a copy of its decision on an adversely affected party, the time for this party to appeal has never commenced, and the decision is not effective per 43 CFR 4.21(a).

"Smallest legal subdivision." Where an oil and gas lease offer is made, the smallest legal subdivision which may be encompassed by the offer is a quarter-quarter section (40 acres), unless the offer is for a lot in a fractional section.

Gary E. Strong, 57 IBLA 306 (Aug. 31, 1981)

"Smallest legal subdivision." In general, it is proper to reject an oil and gas lease offer to the extent that it includes a parcel of land smaller than the smallest legal subdivision, i.e., a quarter-quarter section, except where the offer is for a lot in a fractional section. However, an offer which describes land in parcels smaller than a quarter-quarter section may be accepted if it includes all of the land available for leasing within a quarter-quarter section.

"Sustained yield." As used in sec. 1 of the Act of Aug. 28, 1937, 43 U.S.C. § 1181a (1976), the term "sustained yield" means that the level of timber harvesting established should be such that, considering present levels of silviculture techniques, a constant amount of timber will be annually available on an indefinite basis.
